British Warn Italy to Stay Out of Egypt; Build Planes

To Use Auto Plants In Producing Craft

Force Kept in Ethiopia; French Also Refuse to Withdraw Troops.

The Situation Abroad.

Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin warned Italy against interference in Egyptian affairs as the British government entered the airplane manufacturing business to speed the national defense program.

Italy considers all her trade treaties with sanctionist nations canceled, an authoritative source declared in Rome.

The French government termed expulsion of a French priest from Ethiopia by Italian forces "inacceptable" and a protest to Rome was reported being prepared; France meanwhile, refused to withdraw troops from Diredawa, Ethiopia, despite an Italian request.

Preparations for war in every continent are "being pushed with feverish energy under the spur of panic," the director of the International Labor Office said at Geneva.

Baldwin Warns Italy.

By the United Press.

London, May 21.—Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin today implicitly warned Italy against interference in Egyptian affairs and declared Great Britain will repel any act of aggression against Egypt by "all means at Britain's command."

The blunt warning closely followed reports of Italian troop consolidation near the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan border in northwestern Ethiopia and around Lake Tana, headwater of the Blue Nile, which furnishes a large part of the water supply for the Sudan.

Replying to a questioner in the House of Commons, Baldwin briefly outlined Britain's position regarding Egypt.

In connection with termination of the British proctectorate over Egypt in 1922, he said, the British government unmistakably "made it clear that Great Britain will regard as an unfriendly act any attempt to interfere in the affairs of Egypt by any power and would consider any aggression against the territory of Egypt as an act to be repelled by all means at Britain's command."

Refusal Is Indicated.

Meanwhile, official circles indicated that both Britain and France will refuse Italy's informal request to withdraw their small military garrisons from Ethiopia.

It was understood that Britain has decided to retain the Sikh legation guard at Addis Ababa pending evidence corroborating local Italian authorities claims of ability to safeguard the lives and property of foreigners. Britain maintains about 125 Sikhs at the legation.

A Franco-British exchange of views indicated that France also will refuse, at least for the present, to remove troops which she now has guarding the legation at Addis Ababa and the railroad shops at Diredawa. There are about 150 troops at Diredawa.

Italy has pointed out that foreign military forces no longer are necessary in Ethiopia now that Italian troops are in occupation.

Italian authorities at Addis Ababa recently ordered all foreigners to report to the high command and surrender all arms under threat of expulsion from the country for failure to do so.

Britain Building Planes.

Pilot Battles Girl, Foils Leap; Lands Plane With One Hand

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, May 21.—Pilot Charles W. Sutherland landed his plane with one hand at East Boston Airport late today, holding his only passenger, an attractive, smartly clad girl, by the hair with the other to prevent her, he said, from committing suicide.

Sutherland, a pilot for Intercity Airline, declared the girl, about 22 years old, attempted to jump from the ship as he was flying over Boston Harbor at an altitude of 1,500 feet.

Airport attaches held her at the flying field until police arrived. They took her to Boston Psychopathic Hospital.

An attempt to establish identification through a search of her pocketbook and examination of her clothes failed. "I'm not going to say a word," airport officials quoted her as saying.

The chestnut-haired young woman was seated in the rear cockpit of the light biplane when, Sutherland declared, he half-turned and saw her standing, one leg in the plane, the other on the wing.

"I grabbed her by the hair and threw her back in," he said, "and held her while I turned the ship about and headed back for the airport."

Sutherland said she twisted and struggled to free herself for the nearly 15 minutes that elapsed before he reached the flying field.

Airport officials said the pilot brought the plane down to a perfect landing with one hand.

"It was the hardest landing I ever made," said Sutherland.

"She acted sort of queer while we

Mrs. Lyddane Admits Affair, Tells of 'Plot'

Says She Was Blackmailed; Husband to Appear for Wife Today.

By Edward T. Folliard.

A Staff Correspondent.

Hagerstown, Md., May 21.—Francis (Slom) Lyddane, stocky, curly-haired restaurateur, of Rockville, will go to the aid of Anne Lyddane, his wife, in her murder conspiracy trial here tomorrow.

The State says that Mrs. Lyddane, infatuated with another man, conspired with Washington gangsters to murder "Slom."

But "Slom" tomorrow will appear as her star witness.

The golden-haired, blue-eyed defendant was on the witness stand for two hours this morning. Occasionally smiling on the 12 farmers, laborers and clerks in the jury box, she denied that she plotted the murder of her husband or of Mrs. Josephine Beall.

What money she paid out, she said, was "hush money"—money to prevent an expose of her affair with Arthur Beall, Darnestown, Md., garage owner.

She admitted her affair with Beall.

"Did there come a time," Siedman Prescott, chief defense counsel, asked her, "when you yielded to Arthur Beall?"

"Yes, Mr. Prescott," she replied.

This afternoon's session of the trial was taken up by J. Newton

WPA Charge By Mrs. Meyer Brings Reply

Bryan, Westchester County Chief, Denies Works Inefficiency.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

White Plains, N. Y., May 21.—J. Buckley Bryan, WPA administrator for District 3, New York, today issued a statement in answer to charges made by Mrs. Agnes E. Meyer in The Washington Post of extravagance, inefficiency and politics in administration of relief in Westchester County. Bryan's district includes that county.

His statement follows:

"I shall take up in the order in which they were presented by Mrs. Eugene Meyer the statements made by her regarding the WPA and appearing in The Washington Post.

"Charging that the prime job of most of the WPA officials in Westchester, if not in other communities, is to buy allegiance to the Administration and to intimate as far as possible those whose vote cannot be bought, Mrs. Meyer quotes me as having said on three separate occasions to one of her friends whom she does not mention, 'Franklin D. Roosevelt is the man who gave us this money, and I would be the dirtiest kind of a dog-traitor if I didn't see to it that people who are 100 per cent for him receive the first consideration.'

"This statement is entirely erroneous, and I defy Mrs. Meyer to produce the person to whom it is

2 Experts Criticize Chicagoan, Suggest Diet for Starving Fish

While baby sea horses are starving to death in a Chicago Aquarium, a whole "stableful" of "colts and fillies" in downtown Washington are thriving so nicely they'll soon be strong enough to hitch their wagons to a starfish.

Concededly difficult to raise in captivity, the tiny fish nevertheless will survive and prosper if fed artemia, two of the Capital's leading sea horsemen said yesterday.

They are Fred G. Orsinger, director of the Commerce Department aquarium, and Theodore Schmid, of Schmid's pet shop. The latter, who is rearing a herd in a tank where they have starfish and needlefish for company, joined with Orsinger in criticizing Walter H. Chute, director of the John G. Shedd Aquarium in Chicago, for allowing his freshly hatched sea horses to starve.

Chute's specimens, which originally numbered 125 when they were foaled on shipboard en route to Chicago from their home off the Bahamas, were reduced to a few dozen yesterday. But the aquarium director, though advised by Orsinger that artemia (shrimp eggs) would save the survivors, stubbornly insisted such a diet is unsatisfactory.

Sea horse "weanlings" are from ⅛ to ¼ of an inch long. The adults attain a length of 2 to 3 inches. These figures are for Hippocampus hudsonius, the species at issue.

Says Chute: "Artemia is a standard food at the aquarium. But it just will not do for baby sea horses, although it is regularly fed to the adults."

Says Orsinger: "I think Chute is off on the wrong foot."

Says Schmid: "I've found that bringing up sea horses is quite practical. Our first babies were hatched on April 24 and others have been hatching ever since. Out of 10 adults, only 2 died. We now have 30 or 40 young ones. They are fed artemia once a day."

Dispute Puts D. C. Fund Up To President

By James D. Secrest.

The fate of the 1937 District supply bill was thrown squarely up to President Roosevelt yesterday after Representative Thomas L. Blanton, chairman of the House conferees, rejected the Chief Executive as an arbiter in the Senate-House dispute over the Federal lump-sum payment.

"I've voted for five unconstitutional bills that the President has sent up here," the Texan shouted at a tumultous conference, "and I'll be damned if I follow him on anything else."

Senator Thomas, chairman of the Senate conferees, predicted that the President will have to allocate relief funds to maintain the District government for the first half of the next fiscal year after the House managers had rejected alternative proposals made by the Senators.

"That will cost the Federal Government about $20,000,000," Thomas said, "instead of just $5,700,000."

Hectic Conference.

The Senate dual proposal, made during a hectic two-hour conference, was (1) that the decision of whether the Federal contribution should be $2,700,000 or $5,700,000 be left to the President, or (2) that the $5,700,000 be appropriated this year and that an impartial commission be named by the Chief Executive to determine the fiscal relations between the Federal and District governments for the future.

Blanton, acting as spokesman for the House managers, flatly turned down both suggestions.

The House managers offered as a counter proposal to recede on all but three of the 84 Senate amendments, providing the Senators would recede on the three—the lump sum payment, the character education appropriation, and the ban on outside work by all District employes earning $2,400 a year or more.

The prospect that the District government may start the fiscal year July 1 without an appropriation places the issue before the President of whether he will take a hand in the House-Senate budget row before adjournment and force an agreement or will consent to the allocation of Federal relief funds to maintain the National Capital.

The Senate managers rejected this plan as unthinkable although they intimated they might be agreeable to compromises on many of their amendments.

Keyed for Fight.

Senate conferees were keyed for a fight when the conference opened as the result of Blanton's introduction of a House resolution Wednesday. The Senators considered the action of the Texan a defiant threat to the Senate sub-committee and without precedent in Senate-House parleys.

"Blanton's resolution constitutes a new appropriations bill," Thomas said. "It's not a continuing resolution as we ordinarily consider such legislation; the elimination of the lump sum and the character education appropriation and the attachment of the rider barring outside work by District employes make it a wholly new measure."

Even should the House pass the resolution, the Senator said, the Senate would reject it, and another deadlock would occur.

"Unless there is some change very soon, the District will be left without any appropriation bill for the next fiscal year," Thomas declared. "Then there will be no other recourse except for the National Capital to go on Federal relief until Congress convenes next January."

Blanton, in a sudden surge of generosity, offered to raise the lump sum payment $100,000 or to $200,000. The Senators merely laughed.

Members Resentful.

Members of the Senate sub-committee made no secret of their resentment of the manner in which Blanton tried to dominate the conference and to threaten the Senators.

One of the Senators observed:

"He's dictated to the House sub-committee, then he tried to boss the Senate sub-committee, and now he wants to tell the President what to do."

Throughout the conference re-

2 Shot in Baltimore Truckmen's Strike

Baltimore, May 21 (AP).—A policeman shot and slightly wounded two Negro truckmen today in the most serious outbreak of the truck drivers' strike here. Neither was seriously hurt.

Patrolman Joseph Davis said he did not shoot at the men, but at the ground. He said he believed his bullets richocheted from the pavement.

The shooting occurred in front of the Davison Transfer Co. here. Davis said the two men boarded a slowly moving truck. He thought they were strikebreakers, and called them to come back.

When they failed to do so, Davis said, he fired.

The men are George Jackson and Charles Grover.

Bel Air, Md., May 21 (AP).—Clyde L. Peterson, Baltimore, went to jail today on charges of disorderly conduct preferred in connection with the Baltimore truck drivers' strike.

Peterson was arrested by State police in connection with the stopping of a truck driven by Bynum John McKelvey, Baltimore.

Senate Group Agrees to Tax Compromise

Proposes Flat 18% Rate on Corporations, 7% on Surplus.

Victory for Byrd Bloc; Bill May Be Reported by Monday.

By Robert C. Albright.

The Administration's proposed tax on undistributed corporate profits yesterday was whittled down to a lean 7 per cent, and a flat tax of 18 per cent imposed on corporation income, as a Senate Finance Committee, completely at the mercy of Senate conservatives, grasped at a compromise.

Reached after a bitter committee controversy, the agreement tossed into the discard a proposed 1 per cent increase in individual income tax rates, and ripped into shreds House undistributed earnings tax rates running up to a 42½ per cent maximum.

The compromise corporation tax schedules, aimed at $642,000,000 in additional revenue, were finally approved by an 18 to 1 committee vote, with only Senator James Couzens, independent Michigan Republican, holding out against the substitute.

Passage to Be Sped.

The vote broke an impasse of several weeks and removed the last serious impediment in the path of reporting the bill to the Senate, which will probably receive the revised measure Monday. Along with the committee ballot came an informal understanding that may lead to expeditious Senate consideration and passage without a lengthy fight. The critical contest is expected to come later in conference with the House.

The tax compromise, reached after three preliminary votes, embodies the following features:

1. Raising of the corporation income tax (now 12½ to 15 per cent) to a flat 18 per cent.

2. A 7 per cent surtax on all corporate earnings not distributed to stockholders in dividends.

3. A $1,000 flat exemption from both the income and surtax for all corporations earning less than $20,000.

See $810,000,000.

4. Strengthening of a so-called "pressure" section in the present revenue law (Sec. 102), giving the Internal Revenue Bureau new administrative weapons to stop "unreasonable withholding of dividends."

The committee also decided to continue the present capital stock tax of $1.40 per $1,000, and the existing excess profits tax. This, it was contended, would add $168,000,000 revenue to the bill, bringing a total from corporate sources to $810,000,000.

The 80 per cent "windfall" tax on processing tax refunds, previously approved, would add another $100,000,000. The Treasury gave out no estimates on yesterday's revision, and all figures were unofficial.

Before quitting for the day, the committee decided tentatively to make banks and insurance companies subject to the flat 18 per cent corporation income tax, but to exempt them from the proposed 7 per cent surtax. Existing restrictions on personal holding companies, referred to as "incorporated pocketbooks," lifted by the House, were returned to the bill. The committee decided to exempt from taxation insurance taken out for the specific purpose of paying estate taxes.

Under the compromise plan adopted by the committee, dividends received by individuals from corporations would become subject to the normal 4 per cent tax on individual income, for the first time. This change was recommended by the President.

While not achieving all they had striven for, the committee compromise was a notable victory for Senator Harry Flood Byrd, of Virginia, and a group of Democrats and Republicans who have opposed inflexible schedules in the Administration plan ever since they learned it would ease taxation on some larger corporations and seriously handicap smaller competitors.

This group had control of the situation almost from the time they entered the committee room yesterday but agreed to make concessions in the interest of harmony after Chairman Pat Harrison is said to have threatened a vigorous minority report carrying the fight to the floor.

Conservative strength was shown on an initial motion by Senator Walter F. George (Democrat), of Georgia, that current corporate surplus be taxed at no greater rate

3 British Soldiers Shot in Jerusalem

Jerusalem, May 21 (AP).—A battalion of British troops and an artillery battery were en route tonight from Cairo, Egypt, to Palestine, where three British soldiers and two Jews were reported wounded in a shooting affray.

The British soldiers will reinforce the present Palestine garrison of two battalions and a company of light tanks. The Jewish Tellegraphic Agency said their arrival would bring the military forces in Palestine to 3,500, almost double the normal number.

This agency stated all three British soldiers hurt when Arabs ambushed a Jewish bus and four private cars on the Jerusalem-Jaffa road were seriously injured, while one of the Jews suffered major wounds. Troops scouted hills and villages in the vicinity tonight for the assailants.

Townsend Quits Stand In Rage; Defies House Inquiry to Arrest Him

Bell Group Plans Action for Contempt; Doctor Is in Baltimore.

Enraged by what he termed the "unfriendly and unfair" attitude of the Bell committee investigating his activities and those of his old-age pension plan, Dr. Francis E. Townsend stalked defiantly from the Congressional hearing in the caucus room of the Old House Office Building late yesterday afternoon, refusing to testify further unless "brought back under arrest."

White with rage, the be-spectacled, shaggy-haired California physician, who claims to be the messiah of millions of the Nation's aged, threw the committee into an uproar by his action.

He had been excused early from the morning session, and he did not appear until late in the afternoon, entering the crowded room as Mrs. Juanita Jackson, former O. A. R. P. leader in Jackson, Mich., was finishing her testimony.

"I have a paper I wish to read to the committee," said the doctor when he was called in cross-examination.

Statement Ruled Out.

The paper, a typewritten half-sheet, fluttered in his right hand. He laid it on the table, but the committee ruled that he might not have it made a part of the record.

"In that case, gentlemen," announced the retired "small town" physician in his sing-song voice, "I must say this.

"In view of the unfriendly attitude of this committee toward me and my movement, I deem it my duty no longer to testify or attend. I am tired of this inquisition. I will not appear or testify again unless I am brought here under arrest."

Swiftly, almost before the committeemen could realize what was happening, the doctor, flanked by his attorneys, Sheridan Downer and former Senator Thomas Hardwick, of Georgia, moved toward the doorway, where Capitol police stood guard.

"Stop that man! Stop that man at once!" cried Representative Clare Hoffman (Republican), Michigan and one of the leading committee members, springing to his feet.

"Stop the doctor!" shouted Representative Joseph Gavagan (Democrat), New York. "Shut that door!"

But the lean-faced, 69-year-old father of the OARP, who has described himself as being a "gentle old fellow, generally well-liked," moved on, undisturbed. The packed caucus room was left behind in confusion as he hastened down the halls, to a waiting automobile.

Decide on Contempt Action.

After a hasty conference behind closed doors, the committee decided to cite Dr. Townsend for contempt of the House because of his refusal to testify under subpena.

Procedure will be arranged this morning, Representative C. Jasper Bell, Missouri Democrat, said. Before Dr. Townsend can be brought to trial, action of the full House will be required on recommendation of the investigating committee.

Dr. Townsend was the first man to flaunt a Congressional investigating committee in almost six years.

Back on June 30, 1930, Bishop James Cannon, jr., of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, walked out on the Caraway lobby investigating committee in the Senate.

Following the walkout yesterday, Townsend motored to Baltimore with Gerald K. Smith, chief of the late Huey Long's share-the-wealth movement. From Baltimore Smith and Townsend issued a joint statement in which they announced their combined protest.

"Without reference to any plan for recovery, we here and now join in what shall be a protest against this Communistic dictatorship in Washington," the statement read. "The assassination of Huey Long and the persecution of Dr. Townsend call for action."

Smith returned to Washington last night, saying that Townsend would remain for a while in Baltimore.

Smith indicated that he and Townsend would confer soon with Father Coughlin. He said, however, it was too soon to comment on an alliance between Coughlin's Union of Social Justice and the Smith-Townsend organization.

"What the Townsend movement

3 Republicans Refute Farley's Landon Attack

Reps. Lambertson, Short, Carlson Assail 'Slur' on Prairie States.

Quick and heated response came yesterday to Postmaster General Farley's first attack on Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas as the probable Republican nominee to oppose President Roosevelt.

Congressional representatives of Midwest farm States, holding that Farley, as Democratic national chairman, had slurred the entire Plains section of the country in his reference to Gov. Landon, rushed to do battle with the director of President Roosevelt's campaign for re-election. Mr. Farley, addressing the Michigan State Democratic convention at Grand Rapids on Wednesday night, had referred to the Kansas executive not by name but only as "the Governor of a typical prairie State," unheard of prior to a year ago.

Representatives Dewey Short (Republican), of Missouri, and Lambertson and Carlson (Republicans), of Kansas, took up the Farley challenge as soon as Congress met yesterday.

Short, emphasizing that he was not "advocating" Gov. Landon, took the House floor to express resentment at "the slur the Postmaster General passed not only on the great State of Kansas but on Missouri, Illinois, Indiana and every other prairie State."

Lambertson, in a statement, charged the Farley speech shows that the Democratic campaign chieftain "looks with disdain upon anything that might come out of the Mississippi Valley."

Carlson declared that, "Unable to find anything with which to 'smear' the man he feels will be the Republican nominee, he 'sneered' at the entire Middle West."

"The West," Carlson continued, "will give Mr. Farley his answer in November."

The Lambertson statement said: "He (Farley) complains about our

Tariff Raised Against Cloth From Japan

By Felix Bruner.

President Roosevelt took steps yesterday to stem growing imports of Japanese cotton textiles by ordering a tariff increase averaging 42 per cent on certain classes of cotton materials, including nearly all of those coming from Japan.

The order followed a report of the Federal Trade Commission showing that 302 important spinning and weaving companies had lost almost twice as much money during the first six months of 1935 as during the last half of 1934.

The tariff increase was based upon a report of the Tariff Commission covering the difference between production costs in the United States and in Japan. The law authorizes the President to raise duties as much as 50 per cent after Tariff Commission investigations.

Effective June 20.

The cloths on which duties are increased constituted about 58 per cent, on the square yardage basis, of the total cotton cloths imported in 1935, and about 90 per cent of the cotton cloths imported from Japan in that year. The new duties will become effective June 20.

The commission investigation and recommendations to the President resulted from a resolution of the Senate. In its report the commission compared costs of production of domestic cloths delivered in New York, the principal market, with costs, as evidenced by invoice prices, of similar Japanese cloths at New York.

The commission found that the United Kingdom supplied the bulk of the cotton cloths imported into the United States prior to 1931. Switzerland was the leading source from 1931 to 1934. Late in 1934 Japan began to assume leadership,

Lynched Negro's Parents Win $2,500 in Suit Against Sheriff

By the Associated Press.

New Orleans, May 21.—A Federal Court jury awarded a $2,500 judgment—described as the first of its kind on record—to the parents of a lynched Negro today in a damage suit against a sheriff.

The verdict directed Sheriff Lezin H. Himel of Assumption Parish, and his surety, to pay the damages to Louis and Lilly Moore. Their 16-year-old son, Fred Moore, was lynched in 1933.

The Moores sued Himel for $10,000 charging him with negligence in failing to prevent the lynching.

They produced evidence tending to show two of Himel's deputies assisted the lynchers. The deputies denied the charge and Himel testified he had no advance knowledge of the mob action.

One deputy, Abel Landry, testified the mob, of between 50 and 100, overpowered him and took keys to the jail cell occupied by Fred Moore.

Presiding Judge Wayne B. Borah told the jury, composed of white persons, they must consider the action of the deputies binding on the sheriff.

The case was carried to the Federal Court because the parents reside in another State, Arkansas.

Fred Moore, accused of killing a white girl, was seized the night of October 11, 1933, and lynched near Labadieville, La.

R. B. Eleazer, chairman of the commission on interracial co-operation, said in Atlanta that his records, dating back to 1882, showed the case was unique.

"Investigation of scores of lynchings show officers have been responsible either through negligence or actual connivance," Eleazer said.

"When such can be proved, the officials involved undoubtedly ought to be made to answer both to the law and the families of the victims."

2 Rail Groups Join to Provide Dismissal Pay

Management, Labor Units Agree on Jobless Aid in Consolidations.

By Sidney Olson.

Railroad management and railroad labor joined yesterday in signaling a clear track ahead for the long-sought consolidation scheme of the Administration.

"Dismissal wages" for employes thrown out of work by mergers of railroads, joint use of terminals to avoid duplications, and other operation improvements, is the primary feature of the agreement.

The culmination of many weary months of haggling over details, during which representatives of both management and labor were urged by President Roosevelt to speed their negotiations, came just before dawn yesterday morning.

After a day and a night of steady argument, the last details were ironed out satisfactorily, and the documents of accord signed by George M. Harrison, chairman of the Railway Labor Executives Association, and H. A. Enochs, chief of personnel, Pennsylvania, Railroad and chairman of the committee representing railroad managements.

Call On President.

Then a score of spokesmen for both groups called in a body at the White House to outline the plan to the President. Harrison said that the group told the President of their success because "He asked us to do this," and "we simply reported to him that it had been done."

On a Sunday afternoon in March, the President had written a letter to the two groups asking them to keep the question out of Congress and the courts, and to keep pushing toward some mutually satisfactory basis of protection for employes.

The "dismissal wages" are provided for on a basis of the period a worker has been employed.

Employes who are shifted to other jobs by consolidations are protected by a clause prohibiting reduction of their wages, and are granted payments for expenses incurred in moving to new posts.

The agreement for five years beginning June 18, was immediately hailed in many quarters. Joseph B. Eastman, Federal co-ordinator of transportation, said:

"This clears the way for many improvements in railroad operation, in line with the Government's program of co-ordination. I am delighted the question is settled. The agreement will be capable of ready modification from time to time as need may be shown by actual experience.

"It has the further advantage that no constitutional questions can be raised."

Legislation providing compulsory employe protection would probably be open to constitutional challenges, it was held.

It appeared that the Wheeler-Crosser bill providing such compulsory protection would be dropped. Mr. Harrison, after his conference with the President, predicted this, and shortly after word of the agreement reached the Capitol, the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee called off a hearing on the bill which had been set for yesterday afternoon.

Lauds Both Groups.

Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins sent a telegram congratulating the groups for setting "a worthy example of the possibilities in collective bargaining when entered into in a spirit of friendliness and sincerity."

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, also lauding the agreement as "an achievement in collective bargaining," said:

"This marks a most historic development in the application of principles of collective bargaining and of an economic philosophy long evolved and expounded by organized labor."

The President's order to Eastman to hold up orders for unification of railway terminal facilities in 11 cities until an agreement had been reached by the management-labor groups will now be remanded, it was assumed.

The Federal co-ordinator probably will move immediately to work out the pooling agreements to end wasteful duplications of terminal and other equipment. Eastman has stated repeatedly that consolidation of terminals could be affected in 5,000 or more cities with profit to the railroads.

Eastman's term expires June 16. Opinion in Congress is divided over renewal of his office. Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, has introduced a bill extending Eastman's appointment for two years, but action on the measure is uncertain, although the President has indicated approval of Eastman's work.

The three provisions for financial allowances to employes affected by co-ordinations are provided for as follows:

1. An employe affected by a co-ordination, if placed in a job paying less monthly salary than he received before, must be paid the difference by the railroad for at least five years.

2. An employe who loses his job in a co-ordination, receives a "co-ordination allowance" based on length of service equal to 60 per cent of his average monthly salary for the previous year.

3. An employe eligible for compensation under the agreement may choose a lump-sum "separation allowance" in preference to other protections and benefits. These are scheduled in ratio to length of service.

Moving expenses for employes who are required to change residence in co-ordinations, including living expenses during the transfer period, also are provided. He must also be reimbursed for any loss suffered in the sale of his home in such a move, and is protected against loss of equity to a fair extent if under a contract to purchase a home.

Politics and People

The Astute Mr. Farley Slipped Badly When He Slurred 'Prairie States.'

By Franklyn Waltman

WHATEVER one may think of the Hon. James Aloysius Farley as a statesman, he has earned virtually universal respect and admiration as a sure-footed political practitioner. In the art of ward, district and State politics and in understanding public psychology, Mr. Farley has no peer in this country at this time.

WALTMAN

But his foot slipped—and slipped badly—in the speech he made to the Michigan Democratic State convention on Wednesday. In attacking Gov. Alf M. Landon, whom he conceded would be Mr. Roosevelt's opponent this year, Mr. Farley, perhaps without thinking much about it, sneered at the Prairie States.

Who is this man Landon? asked Mr. Farley in effect, but without mentioning the name. Why, he answered, he is just a nonentity that no one in the civilized East ever heard about until a year ago and—further said Mr. Farley in effect—what is worse, he comes from just a "typical Prairie State." He left the impression that no one from a Prairie State knows anything about national affairs—much less international affairs.

Perhaps Mr. Farley did not mean that or intend that his words should be taken as a reflection on the people of the large Mississippi Valley which, incidentally, remains the battleground of this year's Presidential campaign. But, despite his intentions, that interpretation of his words will be pinned on Mr. Farley and he will rue the day when he let his cockiness and enthusiasm put such words in his mouth.

No sooner had the House met after the Farley speech than Representative Dewey Short (Republican), of Missouri, was on his feet expressing resentment at such a slur on the people of the prairie States, in which he included Missouri. Representative William P. Lambertson (Republican), of Kansas, also came to the defense of the people of his State as well as of his Governor in a lengthy statement broadcast to the Nation by the press associations.

Representative Frank Carlson (Republican), of Kansas, asserted that the Democratic chairman had given emphasis to what he regarded as the real issue of the coming campaign, a "fight between the city machine politician and the great mass of the American people."

It might be observed that such Republican retorts to Mr. Farley were to be expected—except that the Republicans have not been quite so quick on the trigger recently—and that it is nothing to get excited about. But actually, these Republican spokesmen are but keynoters for the press and the boys back home.

The latter already have taken up the refrain which the Lambertson-Short-Carlson trio has started to sing. In the Republican press of Missouri, Kansas, Iowa, Nebraska and the other "Prairie States" there will be editorials bitterly resenting Mr. Farley's aspersions, while the campaign orators will make the Democratic chairman's words better known in that section than anything else he has said in many, many months. Indeed, as things now look, Mr. Farley soon will be wondering just what he did say.

Of course, the Landon camp is overjoyed. In his first attack on their candidate, Mr. Farley not only gave him the prestige of being regarded as the Republican nominee, but he played right into the Kansan's hands by driving his own people to his support.

The trouble is that the New York viewpoint predominates in the New Deal. Not only are both the President and Mr. Farley native New Yorkers, but the Democratic publicity director, who in all probability wrote the Farley speech, has the New York viewpoint by long association. They just cannot help thinking that intelligence ends once the Hudson River is crossed.

Speeches reflecting on "typical Prairie States" may be powerful orations in New York City but they are political dynamite in the Prairie States, and it does not take long these days for such a speech to get back to the section which is its target. Indeed, sectional appeals, in addition to being vicious, have become poor politics.

In addition, Mr. Farley's references in Michigan to Gov. Landon were not very smart. In the first place, he clearly indicated to Republicans that Gov. Landon is the potential opponent most feared by the Roosevelt camp. Has anyone ever heard Mr. Farley attack Senator William E. Borah, or even make a slighting remark about him?

Indeed, the Democratic publicity bureau has in various ways done all it could to help the Idahoan, and the suspicion is strong that this is not only because they wish to stir dissension in the opposition party, but because they realize President Roosevelt's reelection would be assured by Senator Borah's nomination.

Secondly, Mr. Farley apparently found little on which to attack the Kansas Governor, so he decided to dismiss him as a nonentity. This, of course, demonstrates that there are not many vulnerable places in the Landon armor. Everyone who knows Gov. Landon's Kansas record knows he is not a nonentity and the fact that, in the short space of a year, the man has become the foremost contender for his party's Presidential nomination indicates he must have something on the ball.

No, "Smiling" Jim did not do so well in his Michigan speech.

Senate Passes $397,500,000 Flood Measure

But Provision for Resource Conservation Board Is Rejected.

The Senate passed the $397,500,000 omnibus flood control bill yesterday in substantially the same form as it left the Commerce Committee, but it rejected Title II of the measure to set up a permanent board to co-ordinate conservation of natural resources. Title II, sponsored by Chairman Copeland, of the Commerce Committee and Senator Hayden (Democrat), of Arizona, was said to have been favored by President Roosevelt.

Approval of the flood control portion came late in the afternoon, after a bitter fight had been waged all day to amend and enlarge it. There was no roll call—only a voice vote, but Senator King, of Utah, and Byrd and Glass, of Virginia, announced they would have voted against it had there been an opportunity.

Using as a weapon a broad threat of Presidential veto, Chairman Copeland forced the Senate to beat down by a vote of 55 to 15 the amendment offered by Senator Bilbo (Democrat), of Mississippi, to revise those sections of the bill calling upon States and local communities to pay land damage costs under the program.

Bilbo Talks Two Hours.

Bilbo extolled the merits of his amendment for more than two hours to a chamber almost completely devoid of Senators. When he had finished, and after a quorum call, Copeland arose and said his committee could not accept the proposal.

"If you want a bill," he shouted, "that amendment must be killed."

Bilbo promptly asserted that Copeland was employing unusual tactics, and was resorting to "veiled threats" instead of facts.

The amendment was defeated on a roll call demanded by Bilbo. Senators Clark, of Missouri, and Davis and Guffey, of Pennsylvania, were among those supporting him.

After the amendment to saddle all costs on the Federal Government had been rejected, the Senate approved the proposal of Senator Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, permitting Army engineers to proceed with dam construction as soon as sites are acquired. Originally, construction of projects would have been delayed until all necessary land was available. Chairman Copeland did not oppose the amendment.

Guffey Motion Loses.

Later, an amendment offered by Senator Guffey to make the Federal Government pay the cost of relocating railroads and improved highways adjacent to flood projects was rejected by a vote of 52 to 11. Senators Johnson (Republican), of California, and Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, led the opposition.

Throughout the day, Chairman Copeland objected to and defeated every proposal to enlarge the number of projects, but he accepted all surveys on navigable streams, and many Senators took advantage of the opportunity to get surveys on their home State rivers. The bill carries an allocation of $10,000,000 to pay for them.

Before Title II was sidetracked by sending it to the Public Lands Committee, Senators King, of Utah; Vandenberg, of Michigan; O'Mahoney, of Wyoming, and Pittman, of Nevada, argued against it as invading the rights of the Departments of Agriculture and Interior. Senator O'Mahoney promised, however, that the Public Lands Committee would give the proposal prompt consideration.

Meanwhile, as the Senate debated the omnibus flood control bill, the House was considering another flood-control measure—the Overton bill, already passed by the Senate.

By a vote of 78 to 36, House members agreed to increase the cost of the bill for flood control projects on the lower Mississippi River from $272,000,000 as it left the Senate to $398,000,000. The added authorization would provide for the construction of 26 reservoirs on the Arkansas and White rivers.

Approval of the omnibus flood-control bill in the Senate brought nearer to conclusion a problem that has been before both Houses since the beginning of the Seventy-fourth Congress. The bill now goes back to the House for consideration of Senate amendments, and eventually to a conference committee of both Houses where the final bill will be written.

The House approved the bill last year, but not before it had added "pork barrel" amendments totaling more than $700,000,000. A Senate filibuster by Senator Tydings (Democrat), Maryland, prevented its passage.

Slash by House To Halt Works, Ickes Declares

Says Coulee Dam Depends on Putting $58,000,000 Back Into Bill.

Abandonment of more public works projects, unless the House restores to the Interior Department appropriation bill amendments written in by the Senate, was predicted yesterday by Secretary Harold L. Ickes.

The House Wednesday refused to accept Senate additions to the bill totaling $58,000,000. The projects upon which work would have to be stopped, according to Ickes, include the Grand Coulee Dam in Washington, funds for which he said would be exhausted by October 1.

Ickes added that where contracts already have been awarded the Government might be liable to heavy damages if the work does not go on. He said he doubted whether work relief funds would be available.

Among the other projects which may have to be abandoned are the Gila and Salt Lake projects in Arizona and the Casper-Alcova development in Wyoming.

Appropriations for these projects were not included in the original House bill but were added in the Senate at the request of the Interior Department.

Congress recently refused additional appropriations for two other large projects, the Passamaquoddy tide harnessing development in Maine and the Florida ship canal. A last minute attempt is being made to push through an appropriation for them. If this is unsuccessful, work will have to stop.

Blanton

porters, sitting outside the closed doors, could hear frequent shouts and an occasional pounding of fists upon a table.

The voices raised above the general hub-bub were those of Senator Carter Glass, peppery chairman of the full Appropriations Committee, and of the ranting Texan. It was not the first time that the two had engaged in a verbal pyrotechnic display.

Blanton's refusal to accept the President as an arbiter in the fiscal relations dispute was the first instance of his outward defiance of the Chief Executive, although he has several times on the House floor stated that he would no longer support questionable Administration measures.

He verged on criticism of the President during the debate on the Hagood incident but always just studiously avoided saying anything that might be quoted as an attack on Roosevelt.

The lump sum payment was the first and so far has been the only stumbling block to an agreement on the District supply bill.

Senate managers have intimated they might be willing to accept a compromise on the House rider barring outside work by District employes.

As one Senator explained it, the rider might be acceptable if the minimum salary range were raised to $3,600 or $4,000 from $2,400. The Senators believe that a family man earning only $2,400 should be permitted to do outside work pay, if necessary, to supplement his income.

While there has been no discussion of a possible compromise on the character education appropriations, it is understood that the Senate sub-committee might agree to a compromise on it although not to the deletion of the entire fund.

Other compromises along the line of the 84 amendments would be easy, it is believed. A change in the authorization for a new Chain Bridge is even desirable as the District Commissioners have changed their minds about the amount necessary and now want only a $350,000 instead of a $450,000 authorization.

Later last night Blanton released a statement which was headed "Not just part, but all the facts about the conference." Part of this statement follows:

"Since Senator Thomas can't keep his agreement not to divulge executive proceedings, which faithfully all House conferees always have kept, fairness requires that all, and not just part, should be made public.

"We would have made the House look ridiculous had we accepted Senator Thomas' proposal to let the President instruct Congress how to legislate, and what to appropriate. His budget merely outlines his financial program. It is not binding on Congress. He had disapproved the Chain Bridge, the fire apparatus, the Eastern High School and the new Police Court Building. On thousands of items the Congress goes under and over the budget. The executive and legislative departments are separate and distinct. Many Senators and Congressmen would resent it if the President attempted to invade or usurp their functions.

"The House conferees were more than fair. There are 87 amendments, many involving large amounts, and important legislative matters. The House conferees proposed to recede on 84 Senate amendments if the Senate conferees would recede on only 3; yet they refused. And, in addition, in the last hopes of getting a bill, the House conferees agreed to add another $100,000 to the Federal contribution. Only to get a bill would the House have made such great concessions. The House wanted the District to have the needed fire apparatus, the Anacostia Bridge, the Eastern High School, the Chain Bridge, the Police Court Building and the other new improvements the House subcommittee provided for the District in the House bill."

Flood Leaves Rocky Road to Brookmont

Flood-Wasted Brookmont Area Barred Relief, Still Desolate

Potomac Drive Littered With Boulders, Debris; Men Carry Wives Up Hill to Go to Town; Nearby Canal Carries Disease Threat.

Two months ago the Potomac River roared out of its banks and swallowed a street in Brookmont, Md. Today jagged boulders jut out from the road that never has been repaired, mosquitoes breed in low places that never have been drained, mud stands like jelly between the rocks, and, for 80 persons who live along the road, there is no relief in sight.

The State, they claim, refuses to help them in the task of restoring to life a town the river killed.

They claim other communities in flood-battered Montgomery County have obtained relief. "But we," they said, "have nothing."

Potomac drive once was a cool, shady lane—a good road—flanked by pretty cottages. That was before the flood came.

Now it is a jungle.

Houses, shattered into splinters, form kindling wood beside trees and undergrowth that haven't been cleared for months. Yet, if fire were to flare along that road it would be impossible for engines to get within 200 yards of houses along it.

Brookmont itself straddles the District line almost a mile away from the section of rocky road. Every day housewives must trudge up a hill at a 45-degree angle to buy groceries in Brookmont. Then they must clatter down the rocky hill, pulling at undergrowth, for the return trip, hugging close their groceries. Men must carry their wives up the steep hills on rainy nights when the family goes to town.

The people can't get laundry service.

One of them complained she can't even move.

"Why," she exclaimed angrily, "I couldn't get anyone to move my piano up this hill. It would be suicide to the one who tried."

They can't get mail delivery, they said.

The children have no place to play. Back yards are swamps of mud.

For amusement, some of them sit at night on their porches and shoot at huge rats which live like flies along the undrained river banks.

The canal cuts a snake-like swath along the road it parallels. The canal is almost dry. A film of stagnant water covers its surface with slime. The stench is breath-taking.

Arnold Thomas lives along the drive in a little house that stood against the raging Potomac. The flood swirled around his doorstep and deposited debris in his yard. He is a waiter in a downtown Washington restaurant, a Swiss immigrant who came to this country six years ago. He has two robust children.

He spoke in angry tones with a foreign accent:

"What are we gonna do. Cheeldren—they have no place to play. The road—she ees terrible. I have a car. But drive it? No. I have to leave it parked wan mile away. We have ask for help. But do we get it? No."

Thomas, a young man, stroked the head of his little boy, Jackie. Jackie is three years old, a robust child. He was trying to ride a tricycle over the boulders. But he couldn't even move it.

Thomas looked sad. "No use, Jackie," he said.

"Poor Jackie," Thomas exclaimed, his expression changing from anger to sorrow," he has no place to play."

"Why, Mrs. Charles Sarantevo broke her ankle here just last week. She lives across the street."

"The Citizens Association, what have they done? They have tried everything, but it didn't do any good."

The Citizens Association has 65 members. C. W. Abernethy is president.

"We have done all we know to do," Abernethy said. "Still, we get no relief. All the other communities have obtained relief. But what do we get? Not a durn thing."

Typhoid, they all claim lurks behind the undrained lowlands. Mosquitoes they said hum around their heads at night. The children are in danger—from boulders, debris disease.

"What will we do when winter comes?" one of them asked. "We can't bring coal down here."

Thomas said he got some wine boxes from the restaurant and burned them this spring. He said he "couldn't tote coal" down the long hill. "I'd break my neck."

"We have petitioned everybody—from Congress up and down," Abernethy declared. The fight for an appropriation has been raging for two months, Abernethy said.

Abernethy stumbled home over the rocks last night, paused to talk to a neighbor. He said four words: "I believe we're stumped."

States Robbed, President's Kin Tells Senators

P. J. Roosevelt Scores Plan of M. & St. L. Railway 'Destruction.'

By the United Press.

Philip J. Roosevelt, New York investment dealer and a distant cousin of the President, told a Senate Interstate Commerce sub-committee yesterday he was afraid the Government might be willing to "abet the robbery of its citizens."

His testimony startled the Senators hearing testimony on a proposal to dismember the Minneapolis & St. Louis Railroad, which Roosevelt opposed as too drastic for the "public interest." He is chairman of the road bondholders' protective committee.

The pending proposal would be in the public interest only "if it is in the public interest for the Government to abet the robbery of its citizens—and certain actions at Washington lead me to believe that the Government would not be averse to doing that," Roosevelt said.

"You don't mean that, do you?" asked Senator Harry S. Truman (Democrat), of Missouri, New Deal stalwart. "I can't believe you mean the Government would rob one set of taxpayers for the benefit of another."

"I don't know what else I can say," Roosevelt snapped back. "Is it in the public interest to take money away from one individual to benefit another? That's the whole basis of this relief business. You take money away from New York and give it to some backwoods State."

This exchange lasted only a few moments. Chairman Henrik Shipstead (Farmer-Labor), Minnesota, quickly ended it and brought the testimony back to the question before the committee.

Roosevelt said he thought the bondholders and other interested parties should be permitted to continue operating the M. & St. L. Railway. He believed they could earn "some return on our capital investment."

Jurors Award Balm of $5,000 In Dill Action

Former Senator, Sister-in-Law Lose Ohio Damage Suit; Appeal Planned.

By the Associated Press.

Mount Vernon, Ohio, May 21.—A Common Pleas Court jury returned for the second time tonight a $5,000 verdict for Margie Heaton Dill in her $25,000 alienation of affections suit against former Senator C. C. Dill and Mrs. Grace Dill.

The court, which had refused a previous verdict for the same amount, accepted it.

Judge Phillip L. Wilkins an hour and a half earlier had refused to accept a $5,000 verdict on the ground that the jury had failed to answer adequately a special interrogatory in which he had required explanation for connecting the former Senator with the case if a judgment were given against Dill.

The verdict was concurred in by all four men and five of the eight women jurors, only a three-fourths majority being required under the law.

Plaintiff Satisfied.

"I don't care about the money. I got my satisfaction," commented Margie Dill on learning of the verdict against her mother-in-law and her uncle by marriage. Neither she nor any of the Dill family was in court when the verdict was read.

In its first verdict, the jury had answered the question of connecting the former Senator with alienation of affections of his nephew, Wendell Dill, from Margie, with the words, "Party to the plan."

On the court's orders, they then returned and gave the answer:

"We find Clarence C. Dill did counsel and advise Wendell Dill against continuing further marital relations with the said Margie Dill because it would interfere with the educational and financial career of Wendell Dill."

The interrogatory in no way affected the case against Wendell's mother, Mrs. Grace Dill, who was charged with her brother-in-law, the one-time Senator from Washington.

The verdict did not refer to Margie's complaint that Mrs. Grace Dill arranged an illegal operation upon her in Washington, D. C., in 1934.

Dill, who had returned to Washington, declared before he left:

"I will appeal to the highest courts of the State before I will pay a penny in this case."

needs is a little of the Huey Long vigor," he said. "We are going to raise hell over these committees calling people in and persecuting them.

"If they tamper with us too much, we may not wait for an election," Smith said vehemently. "The power of the people is supreme."

Before it was learned that Townsend was in Baltimore considerable mystery prevailed regarding his whereabouts. Smith cleared this up last night.

"He's not running away, at all," confided the curly-haired Downey, a Townsend follower and a figure in the scrambled politics of California, after the witness had vanished.

"But he'll not testify under any kind of pressure. The doctor is a great old man, and a brave one!"

It was learned last night that the statement the doctor wanted to introduce when he returned to the caucus room late yesterday afternoon was virtually the same as the one he made verbally just before cries of "stop him" and "shut that door" from the committeemen were unavailing.

The written statement, in lengthier form, announced his refusal to testify further.

Chairman Bell of the committee later issued a statement in which he said: "Dr. Townsend's walkout was one of the moves anticipated by the committee since it was determined to call him as a witness. * * * Letters indicated to investigators some time ago that this avenue might be adopted."

Threat to Quit Claimed.

The statement added that the "anticipation of Dr. Townsend's probable walkout was further heightened by a story that appeared in one of the Los Angeles papers May 13, which said:

"'I am going to Washington to testify on May 19. I'll tell the committee what I want them to know. Then I'm going to say "that's all." ' "

"Evidently," said Bell, "he told us more than he wanted us to know."

"His house of cards is about to collapse on him," said Representative Gavagan (Democrat), New York.

A dignified Michigan matron prominent in the Daughters of the American Revolution in her home city of Jackson and founder of the first OARP Club there, was the principal witness yesterday afternoon, leaving the stand in tears a few moments before Dr. Townsend, against whom she testified, electrified the packed caucus room by his dramatic exit.

She was Mrs. Juanita Jackson, quietly dressed and wearing tortoise-shell glasses, descendant of pioneers and Revolutionary soldiers and a constant church worker.

Asked if Dr. Townsend ever had told her of how he conceived the plan he claims will pay monthly pensions of $200 to all persons over 60 years old, Mrs. Jackson thought, then spoke in a soft voice that went back to January, 1935, as she reminisced.

Tells How Idea Originated.

"We talked a lot about the movement then," she recalled, addressing herself to Representative Scott Lucas, of Illinois.

"The doctor, as I remember it, and I remember it plainly, said he had come in after working on a late case, and was shaving in his house.

"Then he said he looked out of the window, and through the panes of glass he saw some old women picking bits of garbage from trash pails. It made him so mad, he said, that he swore, and his wife told him to keep quiet or the neighbors would complain.

"But right then and there, the doctor told me, he got the idea for the OARP."

Mrs. Jackson, who described herself as a "believer in cosmic things," said that when she first became interested in the Townsend movement, one of the slogans was:

"He is as right as the rain—

"God has raised him up to do good."

"Did you believe that?" she was asked.

"Well, I took it with a grain of salt," said Mrs. Jackson, "and later I learned it wasn't so at all."

Lectured on Atheism.

"Well, once he said he had delivered lectures on atheism."

Mrs. Jackson told the committee after this and other statements by the man who was to lead the aged to leisure and the Nation to prosperity, according to his claims, she lost faith in him.

At another point, telling of her club's activities during the time she was active in it, Mrs. Jackson said:

The idea of the OARP was not original with Dr. Townsend, she later concluded, Mrs. Jackson testified.

"I got to reading about such plans," she informed the committee. "I read the ideas of Thomas Payne, written 'way back at the beginning of the eighteenth century. Then, too, there was Bruce Barton and all of the others, and they, too, had ideas about such things."

Mrs. Jackson went into a discussion with Representative Lucas about the theory of "mercy death for urplus labor," which, according to Townsend's statements on the stand, constitutes one of the salient points in his prosperity plan.

"I went into the plan and followed Dr. Townsend because I wanted really to help the aged."

"Is there still a Townsend club in your town?"

"Yes; it is a corpse, and functions as a corpse, and smells to high heaven," said Mrs. Jackson with emphasis.

Westerner on Stand.

First witness yesterday afternoon, in the absence of Dr. Townsend, was Clarence A. Linn, beetle-browed, stocky San Francisco lawyer. Running his hand through his close-cropped, stubby hair, Linn told of his dealings with Edward J. Margett, now California leader of the OARP and one of Dr. Townsend's right-hand men.

These dealings went back to 1919, when Margett was indicted with some others on a charge of transporting 400 cases of whisky from then-wet northern California to then-dry Washington State.

Fifty-two cases of whisky later disappeared, Linn recalled laughing. One morning, he continued, some Department of Justice agents followed a shipment going toward dry territory.

"But they found Margett sitting there on one of the trucks," recalled Linn.

"What did they do?"

"They couldn't do much. You see, Margett had a gun in his hand."

Linn told the committee, under questioning, that Margett's reputation in California was "extremely bad."

During most of the morning session the hollow-cheeked, saucer-eyed doctor sat quietly as James Sullivan, counsel for the committee, introduced evidence he hoped would substantiate his charge of using the mails to defraud.

Occasionally he leaped to his feet, however, and half-shouted:

"This is all more or less soporific."

Claims $11,490 Raised.

Sullivan informed the committee that he had found that $11,490 was raised for a "Congressional action fund" by an appeal to 5,000 faithful Townsendites through the mail in the form of "Townsendgrams."

These he took as a basis for the use of the mails to defraud charge, asserting they contained fraudulent statements in their appeal—that the organization said more money was needed when it already had a fund on hand.

"Doctor," snapped Sullivan, "did you make any attempt to stop these contributions?"

"No," replied the doctor. "We were after contributions."

"Did you do anything to stop this use of the mails to defraud?"

"I don't concede it was use of the mails to defraud."

The "Townsendgram" appeals were made when there was more than $21,000 on hand, Sullivan developed. The money was to be used to "contribute to Congressional action" for the plan.

Sullivan further brought out that the "Towsendgrams" were signed by Earl Clements, former partner of the elderly doctor, and Charles H. Randall, of Los Angeles, chairman of the National Strategy Committee.

Next he introduced testimony given by Randall before a sub-committee in California, in which the OARP worker said he was behind the original drive for funds which brought in $24,490, but denied connection with the "Townsendgram" appeal.

"Randall," said Sullivan, "claimed his name was forged to the 'Townsendgrams.'"

Dr. Townsend did not reply to this, but later denied that he had discussed the campaign with his co-workers.

were up about 10,000 feet," the pilot, a 6-footer, who weighs 200 pounds, declared, "so I came down to about 3,000 feet.

"At 3,000 feet, she took off her goggles and her helmet, letting her hair blow free. I thought she had thrown them overboard — but it helped later; her hair gave me something to hold onto."

When he saw her half out of the ship, he said, he twisted and grabbed her by the hair. As she struggled high over the harbor, Sutherland asserted, he struck her with his fist on the top of the head "about three minutes' worth."

Airport officials said the girl had flown before, once at night. Today, they said, she paid in advance for an hour's sightseeing flight.

At East Boston Police Station, where she was taken first, she wept and only shook her head as police questioned her.

Youth Ordered To Leave State In Holdup Case

Mother of Ex-Midshipman Pays His $255 Fines on Two Charges.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., May 21.—Col. Amos W. W. Woodcock, president of St. John's College, coined the phrase "Dementia collegiorum," today in making a plea as defense counsel for Ferdinand Henry Noble, 20, St. John's student and former midshipman, who was arraigned on a charge of assault with intent to rob.

Magistrate Harrison M. Sandrock, of Round Bay, who held Noble in $2,000 bail after a previous hearing, today continued the charge of assault with intent to rob, and released Noble on his own recognizance in custody of State's Attorney Roscoe C. Rowe and Col. Woodcock.

He fined the student $150 and costs on a charge of operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of liquor or drugs, and fined him $100 and costs and sentenced him to a year in the Maryland House of Correction on a charge of carrying a concealed weapon and discharging it.

Term Suspended.

The prison term was suspended, with the approval of the State's attorney, provided Noble leave the State within ten hours. The youth, through Col. Woodcock, pleaded guilty to the charges on which he was sentenced. Sandrock had State Patrolman John C. Gates swear out the additional warrants following the hearing of May 15.

The student's mother immediately paid the $255.75 total of fine and costs and left with her son for Washington. Col. Woodcock, who previously announced the youth had to leave college, said he would be taken to the Noble country home in Colorado.

Arrested After Fray.

"I think he was mentally not responsible, whether by reason of drink, or suffering from some mental derangement," he said. "If you will recall the trial of Harry Thaw, some years ago, you will remember a pleading of 'dimentia Americana,' if you will allow me to paraphrase, I would call this 'dementia collegiorum'."

Noble, special student at St. John's, and former Naval Academy midshipman, was arrested following a shooting affray at the Roma Inn, at Revell, on the Annapolis-Baltimore boulevard. It was testified he had entered the inn wearing a handkerchief over his face and held up John Y. Hall, jr., a customer, at pistol point. Hall said Noble fired at him as he ran to get a shotgun, which he later fired at the student.

Mrs. Dixon's Burial In Arlington Today

Funeral services for Mrs. Charlotte V. Dixon, 85, widow of Capt. William S. Dixon, Navy Medical Corps, will be held today at 1:45 p. m. at the Hines funeral home, 2901 Fourteenth street. Burial will be in Arlington National Cemetery beside her husband.

Mrs. Dixon died Wednesday after a short illness at the home of her son, Dr. Taylor Boyd Dixon, 1609 Kennedy place.

Born in Baltimore August 10, 1850, she was a descendant of the Hopkins family on her maternal side, early settlers of the Eastern Shore of Maryland. For the past 44 years she lived in this city.

For a number of years she had been a member of the Army and Navy League. She is survived by her son.

Presbyterians Pick Dr. Price As Moderator

By the Associated Press.

Augusta, Ga., May 21.—Dr. P. Frank Price, for 46 years a missionary to China, was elected moderator of the Presbyterian Church in the United States tonight.

The gray Southerner, born 71 years ago in Richmond, Va., won after three ballots.

Mrs. Price, who served in China with her husband, smiled broadly as the new moderator was escorted to the speakers' stand.

Dr. Price pledged his efforts to forwarding work of the church during his term.

Dr. Henry H. Sweets, retiring moderator, tonight urged unity in solving social, political and moral problems of the day.

Preaching the opening sermon of the diamond jubilee assembly of the church, the Louisville, Ky., pastor said:

"There is great disunion in the political, industrial, social, moral and intellectual realms. There is not such unity of message and purpose and plan of the churches as the cause and the times demand."

Merger Proposed.

St. Louis, May 21.—Consideration of a merger of the Northern Baptists with the Disciples of Christ (Christian Church) was proposed today to the Northern Baptist Convention by the Rev. George A. Campbell, St. Louis, former president of the International Conference of Disciples of Christ in America.

Campbell said he was not speaking officially for his denomination, but he felt certain "all Disciples would approve of my statement."

The Rev. James H. Franklin, president of the Northern Baptist Convention, remarked that the applause which greeted Campbell's proposal was significant. The proposal will be presented to the general council of the convention, which indicates official action of some nature will be taken.

Mentioning that the Disciples were founded by persons who left the Baptists in 1830 because of a disagreement, Mr. Campbell said.

"The Disciples would be happy in conferring without concerning a reapproachment."

Referring to the denominational unions recently accompanied or proposed, he said the developments "seem to indicate that the era from which sprang so many divisions has come to a close."

Earlier the Rev. H. L. Alldredge, of Fort Branch, Ind., appearing as a fraternal delegate from the General Baptist Convention, said he "would be glad to see organic union between these two bodies."

Methodist Merger Urged.

High Point, N. C., May 21 (AP).—Dr. Jesse M. Bader, of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ, said in an address to the Methodist Protestant General Conference here today that the proposed unification of the three major branches of Methodism would be "the greatest thing that has happened in the last decade."

We who make whiskey suggest:
"SAY 'NO'
WHEN IT'S ONE DRINK TOO MANY"

THERE is a common problem which you as consumers and we as distillers share. It is the right use of liquor—drinking in moderation.

Your interest is the continued enjoyment of your personal liberty. Our interest is the many millions of dollars we have invested in American plants, payrolls, grain and good-will.

This provides justification for us to speak frankly about our common problem, moderation in drinking.

American Public to be Congratulated

The American public is to be congratulated on the discretion and sobriety which has accompanied the return of legalized drinking. But here and there we still find the thoughtless individual whose excess discredits the moderate use of liquor by countless thousands.

More often than not this thoughtless individual is not recognizably the "enemy of society," or the "alcoholic." He is just plain John Citizen, who takes just "one drink too many."

Moderation vs. Excess

Every intelligent person realizes that there are two kinds of drinking.

One is moderation: The enjoyment of good liquor for its taste, its aroma, its warmth, and the friendly feeling it engenders.

The other is excess: With the unpleasantness, embarrassment and regret it generally brings.

Between these two there is a sharp dividing line. That dividing line is the extra drink that is "one too many."

"Just One More"

Everyone accustomed to drinking knows this: There comes a point when an extra drink brings no extra pleasure.

For those who thoughtlessly or through good-natured response to a host's persuasion, drink more than they need for pleasure—there is just this to remember:

There can be no better judge of moderation than the individual himself.

A thoughtless minority must not be allowed to endanger the liberty and enjoyment of countless thousands who consume whiskey as it should be consumed—in moderation.

Pacts Annuled By Sanctionists, Italian Asserts

Gayda Says Commercial Relationships of Rome Must Be Revised.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, May 21.—Italy considers all her trade treaties with sanctionist nations canceled and her foreign trade "must change its direction," an authoritative source declared today.

This view was taken by Virginio Gayda, informed writer of the Giornale D'Italia and a friend of Premier Mussolini.

"Fifty-two sanctionist states introduced in a system of commercial accords a new unilateral practice of arrogating to themselves the arbitrary privilege of opening and closing the faucets of trade with Italy," he wrote.

"Commercial treaties with sanctionist countries have been in fact annuled by the initiative of sanctionists. They must therefore be considered a nullity and the subject of radical revision."

Badoglio in Asmara.

Rome, May 21 (U.P.).—Marshal Pietro Badoglio, Viceroy of Ethiopia and chief of the Italian general staff, arrived at Asmara, Eritrea, today, en route to Italy.

Authorized press messages quoted Badoglio as saying he was "on a few days brief furlough."

However, it was believed that Badoglio's return from East Africa was hastened by official preoccupation regarding the Austrian situation, brought to the forefront last week by a bloodless coup d'etat in which Premier Benito Mussolini's protege, Prince Ernst von Starhemberg, was ousted as co-dictator.

Troops Believed Topic.

Other informed sources said Il Duce recalled Badoglio to consult him regarding distribution and replacement of troops now in East Africa.

So far there has been no official statement as all government offices were closed in honor of Ascension Day.

If Badoglio remains in Italy, Marshal Rodolfo Graziani, who commanded Italy's Somaliland forces, undoubtedly will be named Viceroy of Ethiopia. Graziani relieved Badoglio yesterday as head of the colonial government with the title of regent.

Italy's 'Informant' Named in London

London (Friday), May 22 (AP).—The Daily Herald said today the mysterious Col. Pedro Lopez, accused by Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden as a "purveyor of false information" about Ethiopian wartime purchases, actually is Henry Lawrence, one-time music hall magician, of Merton, South London.

The paper stated Lawrence spent two hours at the war office yesterday, where he was questioned by officers of the military intelligence department about his associations with the Italian Embassy.

Eden told the House of Commons Monday that a self-styled "Col. Pedro Lopez" provided "fabricated evidence" to Italy that Ethiopia bought dumdum bullets in England, and that the British foreign office had warned the Italian ambassador of the man's unreliability.

Lawrence was said to have told the Daily Herald that he offered his services to the Italian Embassy and agreed to obtain information for it in London.

"I never had a penny from them (the Italian Embassy) apart from expenses," the Herald quoted Lawrence. "That's why I broke away."

Hill Memorial Service To Be Today at G.W.U.

Memorial services for Dr. Charles E. Hill, professor of political science in George Washington University and a leading authority in the field of international law, who died May 10, will be held at noon today in Corcoran Hall. The Rev. Joseph S. Loughran, pastor of the Cleveland Park Congregational Church, will officiate.

Dr. W. Reed West, professor of political science and dean of the university's school of government, will pay tribute to Dr. Hill as a "colleague and a friend." Dr. Charles E. Tansill will speak of the "Man and the Scholar," and Frank H. Witzel, member of the class of '31, will speak of him as a teacher. Friends and former students of Dr. Hill are invited to attend.

French Mission School in Addis Ababa Ablaze

Italian troops advancing upon the Ethiopian capital, found many buildings still burning, including the French Mission School. This photo was among a number sent by a record air journey from Addis Ababa to Washington, going by plane from Ethiopia to London, thence by plane to Frankfort, Germany, where they were placed aboard the Zeppelin Hindenburg, flown from Lakehurst to Newark, N. J., from which point they were sent by plane to Washington.

of defense co-ordination, disclosed to the House of Commons the government was subsidizing extension of private automobile factories to speed up plane production for the royal air forces.

Inskip, in his first long speech before the Commons since taking over the defense post, disclosed these factors in the defense program:

1. The nation's air forces are to be increased to three times their size in 1934, and 1,600 new pilots have been enrolled since last year.
2. Private automobile firms have been told the government will pay for new plants or extensions to existing plants devoted to manufacture of new planes for the nation's defenses.
3. Sir William Beveridge, former secretary of the ministry of food during the World War, has been appointed to head a special committee to study means to provide the civil population with food during time of war.

Inskip described conservation of food as an important question and called on all persons interested in storage of commodities to cooperate with the defense committee.

Dino Grandi, the Italian ambassador, and Sir Robert G. Sittart, undersecretary of foreign affairs, conferred late today in Grandi's first visit to the foreign office since he handed it a copy of the Italian decree annexing Ethiopia.

General discussions of the Ethiopian situation were carried out, it was authoritatively stated, but informed sources refused to elaborate.

Movie to Contrast Farm Conditions

A motion picture designed to contrast the living conditions of farmers in the Arkansas and in the Tennessee River valleys will be shown today at 8 p. m. in the Friends Meeting House, 2111 Florida avenue northwest. The public is invited.

Entitled "A Tale of Two Rivers," the film seeks to demonstrate the effectiveness of the TVA in improving conditions of Tennessee River Valley dwellers. Its timeliness is enhanced by the strike called this week by share-croppers in the Arkansas Valley.

Comment on the film will be supplied by Gardner Jackson, chairman of the national committee on rural social planning and former AAA official, and Lois Jameson, of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom.

Aimee McPherson Service Postponed

Aimee Semple McPherson, the evangelist, will appear at Constitution Hall June 9 instead of May 27, as originally announced. The postponement was made because John Lewis Meehan, tenor, who was to have been Mrs. McPherson's accompanying soloist, was called by his motion-picture company to go "on location." Meehan was to have appeared with the evangelist in several programs in the East.

Dr. Albert Harned and his National Capital Choir will appear with Mrs. McPherson, as originally planned, when she speaks here.

Memorial Service.

A memorial service in memory of deceased telegraph workers will be held by the Association of Western Union Employes Sunday night at 7:30 o'clock on the Sixth Presbyterian Church. The service, second of its kind, is nonsectarian and, following its initiation here last year, was widely duplicated by othre telegraph workers throughout the country.

World Headed For War, Says Labor Official

New Trade Policy of U. S. Praised at Geneva by H. B. Butler.

By the Associated Press.

Geneva, May 21. — Preparations for war "in every continent" and "on the largest scale are being pushed with feverish energy under the spur of panic," Harold B. Butler, director of the International Labor Office, said today.

His report will be submitted to the International Labor Conference, opening its twentieth session June 4. Delegates from more than 60 countries, including the United States, will attend.

"Industrial and agricultural measures are being adopted," said Butler, "which aim at insuring the largest attainable degree of national self-sufficiency in foodstuffs, raw materials and productive capacity in the event of war. * * *

"Economic recovery is an impossible dream until the fear of another and more catastrophic collapse of the international political system has been dispelled.

"Europe once more stands at a turning point of its fate. The same may be true of Asia. Should another outbreak of violence occur in either region, the hopes of any real prosperity would be effectually destroyed for this generation, even if the present fabric of civilization survived."

Reviewing social and economic conditions of the past year, Butler said it "furnishes more food for doubts and queries than for confident interpretation."

"Should this past year be regarded as marking the emergence of the world into the flowing tide of recovery," he asked, "or as merely an interlude of mitigated depression?"

He intimated that increases in steel and related industries might be due to the "great expansion of armament manufacture taking place in all the principal industrial countries, either for their own account or for that of foreign customers."

France Drafts Protest Over Priest's Ouster

Ethiopian Expulsion Called "Inacceptable;' Pope's Action Awaited.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, May 21.—The French government termed the expulsion of a French priest from Ethiopia by Italian forces "inacceptable" tonight and a protest to Rome seemed likely.

The government likewise refused to withdraw troops from Diredawa, Ethiopia, despite an Italian request, or to permit railroad shipments of Italian supplies.

Joseph Paul-Boncour, acting foreign minister, called the expulsion from Ethiopia of Mgr. Andre Jarosseau, 78, head of Catholic missions there, and "apostle of lepers," "inacceptable."

Pope's Reaction Awaited.

An authoritative source said a protest is being withheld until the order is officially confirmed.

Officials also waited the Pope's reaction, saying international law requires the Vatican's consent for the replacement of missionaries.

Mgr. Jarosseau, who has been in Ethiopia for 50 years doing much work among lepers, was ordered from the country yesterday on grounds of having made "hostile demonstrations against Italy."

"The sole question to discuss," said Paul-Boncour, "is whether the expulsion was justified. We think it was not."

He went into conference with Charles Roux, French Ambassador to the Vatican, and later said Count Charles de Chambrun, Ambassador to Rome, might make representations to Premier Mussolini.

Official sources disclosed that France had refused an Italian request for the withdrawal of 150 colonial troops guarding the shops of the French-owned Djibouti-Addis Ababa Railroad at Diredawa, a key point of the line.

Italy, in asking the withdrawal, insisted her soldiers were capable of maintaining order.

Would Mean Recognition.

Officials said they believed a withdrawal would be equivalent to recognition of the Italian regime in Ethiopia and said France also declined to allow shipment of 840 tons of provisions from Djibouti to Italian troops in Addis Ababa on the ground that the railroad's wartime neutrality is still applicable.

Leon Blum, Socialist leader of the leftist People's Front, who is expected to become the next premier, conferred with Dr. Joseph A. C. Avenol, secretary general of the League of Nations, preparatory to taking charge of France's foreign policy. The League Council meets June 16 on the question of Italy's annexation of Ethiopia and Germany's remilitarization of the Rhineland.

The suggestion that King Leopold of the Belgians, who flew to England yesterday, may have gone to ask Great Britain to relent toward Italy was expressed in some French quarters, whoch are anxious to see an end of the Anglo-Italian tension.

Cost of Upkeep In Parks Fixed At $715,000

$2,500,000 Estimate Cited to Miss Baker Is Not Correct, Says Finnan.

The sum of $715,000 is being spent during the current fiscal year on parks maintenance, and not $2,500,000, as reported recently by Sibyl Baker, superintendent of District playgrounds, according to a statement yesterday by C. Marshall Finnan, superintendent of National Capital Parks.

Branding Miss Baker's statement "incorrect and misleading to the general public," Finnan pointed out that the maintenance outlay for this year is $10,800 below the allotment for 1932, despite the fact there are 600 more acres of park land to be kept up.

"It is easily demonstrated," said Finnan, "that the actual regular appropriations available for maintenance are now considerably less on a per acre basis than they were a number of years ago. In the justification for the park appropriation for the present fiscal year, it will be found that during the past six years appropriations for maintenance purposes have gradually decreased from $158 per acre to $129 per acre.

"The parks office this year is spending more money than is represented in the total amount available for maintenance. This money, however, has been specifically allocated for new construction and is not available for any phases of maintenance work, as the public might be led to believe after reading the aforementioned article."

Alcohol, Narcotic Law Wins Praise

The alcohol and narcotic public school and instruction law is one of the best and wisest possible to teach the young people the dangers of drugs, Dr. Edgar B. Brossard, member of the United States Tariff Commission, said last night in an address delivered over Radio Station WOL in Washington.

Today is the semicentennial anniversary of the passage of the law in the District, and Dr. Brossard outlined the benefits derived from its application.

A giant mass meeting for all residents of Washington and nearby Maryland and Virginia will be held tonight at 8 o'clock in the Central High School auditorium in celebration of the anniversary. Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas, former chairman of the Senate District Committee, will preside at the meeting.

Senator Elbert D. Thomas, of Utah, will be the chief speaker of the evening. The program will also include short talks by Mrs. John S. Bennett, former president of the Women's City Club, and Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, present president.

Park Aid Assigned.

Richmond, May 21 (AP). — The State Department of Public Welfare announced the appointment today of Miss Mabel Besecker, social welfare worker, to supervise the evacuation of between 75 and 100 families from the Shenandoah National Park.

Champions Add Second Victory In Bridge Event

Stidham, Brooks Members of Winning Teams at Annual Contest.

By Marian H. Barre.

Alfred Stidham and Benton Brooks, "dark horse" champions in the recent Old Dominion Bridge Tournament, added another victory when their team won the Washington Bridge League annual team-of-four contest, at the Shoreham Wednesday.

Stidham played with V. A. Clarke, in the north-south position, while Brooks was paired with Roy Thurtell, in the east-west. In addition, Brooks and Thurtell also made the individual high pair score, east-west, an honor that was won in the north-south by S. F. Gerber and Dr. E. B. Connolly.

There were no surprise features in this match. Of the three teams picked to win in matters of contract, the Thurtell outfit won 20 boards, the Whist Club team—Gerber, Connolly, McIntyre and Watson—won 18½, as runner-up, and the women's team—Mrs. M. R. West, Mrs. Eugene Nolan, Mrs. C. B. Pennebaker and Mrs. B. C. Kelsey—finished third.

The game was run in two sections, nine teams competing in section "A," eight teams in "B." In the latter section, the team consisting of Mrs. E. B. Swanson, Col. Edward Clifford, and Mr. and Mrs. B. P. Holland, jr., was in top position with 13½ boards. Two teams, scoring 12 boards each, tied for second place: Mrs. Alma Byrne, I. A. York, Mrs. Eva Milligan and H. S. Klein, and the team of Mrs. Clair Arbaugh, Mrs. M. R. Reddy, Mrs. Pauline Wilson and P. W. Shepard. Individual top pair scores for this section were won north-south, by Mrs. C. W. Zimmer and Mrs. Florence Clites, east-west, Mrs. C. F. Shaffer and John Donavan.

The team-of-four match is an annual feature with the Washington Bridge League. It closes a season in which similar contests are run monthly, with the recorded percentages for the entire series regulating the teams' standing. This year's event offered an additional competitive feature because of the American Bridge League award of one national master point for each player on the winning team in section 1. The American League is the national organization with which the local league is affiliated. This is the first time in Washington that national points have been awarded in a purely local contest. It is American League's recognition of the high standard of play among Capital players. At least 30 champions competed Wednesday.

Handsome silver trophies were awarded to the winners in both sections, with silver league pins for the top score pairs. Lieut. Comdr. W. A. Corley, president of the Washington Bridge League, and A. P. Stockvis, official scorer, directed the match.

Man Breaking In Auto Slashes Owner; Jailed

John A. Fibison, of Takoma Park, Md., was cut on the face yesterday by a Negro who allegedly was surprised in the act of breaking into Fibison's car.

Three police scout cars were dispatched to the scene in the first block of M street northeast, when Fibison was attacked by the man. Several passerbys came to Fibison's aid and the Negro was subdued.

At the Second Precinct Station the man said his name was Russell Jones, of the 1200 block Fourth street northwest. He was held under an open charge.

Gunston Hall Holds Festival Tomorrow

Speech and drama pupils at Gunston Hall School will stage their annual spring festival in the school assembly hall at 1906 Florida avenue tomorrow night.

Jane Mayer will be festival queen, with Lavinia Sargeant as her royal escort, and Ellen Hall and Virginia Teter as attendants.

The Greek play, "Alcestis," by Euripides, will be presented by a cast including Barbara Gruber, Nelle Caskis, Sky Phillips, Alice Colhoun, Anne Woolworth, Jane Van Stone, Harriet Freeman, Jean Small, Ruth Hawks, Sadie Young, Virginia Lewis, Lawrence L. Gourley and Phyllis Weissinger. In the chorus will be Suzanne Ludey, leader, and Jo Ballantine, Jean Besson, Jean Bowers, Virginia Conrad, Beverley Easley, Marion Foster, Jane Goolrick, Jane Hanna, Nellie McCain and Alice Young.

Mrs. William Channing Johnson will direct the play and dancing, and Marjorie Lowe will direct the chanting. Edythe Marmion Brosius will be harpist.

Zoning Board Sets Meeting on June 3

The District Zoning Commission will hold a public hearing on Wednesday, June 3, at 10 a. m. at the District Building. Changes in zoning of 28 properties will be considered.

One application to be considered will be that of the Fairfax Hotel at Twenty-first street and Massachusetts avenue northwest. Change from 60-foot "B" restricted area to residential 90-foot "C" area is requested.

Several requests for changes from various classes of residential areas to commercial are among the applications to be considered.

Arlington Gets Engineer Data On Light Plant

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Cla. 500. Clarendon, Va.

Lower electric rates might be realized for county residents through a county-owned power plant, according to a report received by the county board yesterday from Wiley & Wilson, consulting engineers, of Lynchburg.

The report said in part:

"While the new rates scheduled to go into effect as of May 1 by the Virginia Public Service Co. represent quite a reduction in Arlington County, they are still very much above the Braddock Power Co.'s rates on the average, and it looks like the Braddock Power rates might be realized through establishment of a county-owned system."

The Braddock company is a subsidiary of the Potomac Electric Power Co.

No action will be taken by the board until after June 1, when Frank C. Hanrahan, the new county manager, takes office, George M. Yeatman, chairman of the board, said.

The board will consider the application for rezoning Washington avenue, near the Lee boulevard, as requested by J. E. Spaulding at a meeting at 9 a. m. today.

The change in the zoning in that section is asked by Spaulding to permit the development of duplex homes. A development representing an outlay of between $900,000 and $1,000,000, is contemplated.

At a special assembly and drill the cadet corps at Washington-Lee High School yesterday celebrated the establishment of the corps.

The cadet corps was established in the spring of 1926 with two companies of boys and a girls' auxiliary unit of one company. Now there are three companies of boys, three of the auxiliary and a complete cadet band.

T. J. Frack, cadet commander, announced the promotions of Ray Wheeler to cadet colonel and assistant professor of military science and tactics, and James R. Alderton, cadet colonel.

Mrs. William G. Watt was elected president of the Woman's Club of Lyon Village at its meeting held at the home of Mrs. Robert N. Owens. Others elected were Mrs. Alba McKnight, vice president; Mrs. A. J. Sherdian, recording secretary; Mrs. George De Vaughn, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Edwin V. Bryne, treasurer.

Two Negro Couples Arrested in Robbery

Two Negro men and two Negro women were arrested here last night and held on charges of investigation in connection with the robbery of J. E. Woods, proprietor of a filling station in Marlboro, Md., yesterday morning.

They were arrested on Rhode Island avenue near the District line.

Those arrested were: Henry Smith, 23, Lakeland, Md.; Thomas Fleming, 26, Bladensburg, Md., and Marian Seeley, 25, 4707 Nash street northwest; Florence Jackson, also of 4707 Nash street northwest.

St. Patrick's Pastor Lauds Boys' Clubs

Indorsing the membership campaign, which is now being carried on by the Metropolitan Police Boys' Clubs, the Right Rev. C. F. Thomas, pastor of St. Patrick's Church, said:

"Maj. Brown and his excellent police force are to be complimented on their efforts to supply an existing need and develop a laudable undertaking. Wherever boys' clubs have been conducted on a high standard they proved their worth beyond question. The most tangible result of such agencies of carefully planned and well supervised recreation has been the lowering of the delinquency rate in the areas in which they operate. Far more emphasis should be placed on the positive value of such organization in developing the character and raising the moral tone of the lives of the great number of boys who participate in their activities. This work is of the utmost importance particularly in those crowded sections of the city where youngsters are forced to find their recreation and amusement outside of the home."

The board of directors and committee chairmen for the drive will meet at the Willard today at 12:30 for a final report.

Knox Indorses '32 Democratic Fiscal Pledges

Urges Republicans Adopt 'Repudiated' Planks of Opposition.

By the United Press.

Chicago, May 21.—Frank Knox, Chicago publisher campaigning for the Republican Presidential nomination, tonight urged that the Cleveland convention "adopt the principal economic planks of the Democratic platform of 1932."

Knox said the Administration had "completely repudiated" its 1932 pledges and that the Republican convention might profitably incorporate the unfulfilled promises in its platform. The Chicago publisher warned, however, that the party should adopt no pledges which it cannot keep.

Knox presented an eight-point platform which, he said, would rectify conditions attributable to the Administration:

1. A balanced budget.

Urges Cut in Costs.

2. Cut the cost of government to the bone.
3. A sound currency "to be preserved at all hazards."
4. Removal of government from competition with private enterprise.
5. Restore to the States their proper functions, including relief.
6. Remove civil service from partisan politics.
7. Permit "every farmer to be lord of his own acres, free to plant whatever and how much of it he pleases."
8. Recognition that intelligent national self-interest demands that we co-operate with other nations to stabilize currencies and remove artificial barriers that now encumber the flow of goods and services between nations.

Assails New Deal.

Shenandoah, Iowa, May 21 (AP).—Senator Lester J. Dickinson today declared the National Administration employed "genial leadership and plausible platitudes" to urge acceptance of "socialism, regimentation and planned economy in disguised forms."

The Iowan, in an address prepared for delivery before a "Dickinson day" farm audience, asserted the Republican Party was taking the leadership in a national crisis "to return the American Government to the American people."

Dickinson quoted George N. Peek, first administrator of the AAA, in fixing "socialized farming" as the objective of the Administration's agricultural policies.

Michigan Unit Rule.

Grand Rapids, Mich., May 21 (AP).—The Michigan State Democratic Convention adopted a resolution today instructing its delegation to the national convention in Philadelphia to cast the State's 38 votes as a unit for President Roosevelt "from start to finish."

Morgan Claims Indiana.

Indianapolis, May 21 (AP).—W. Forbes Morgan, secretary of the Democratic National Committee, said Indiana "appears to be safely in the Democratic column in the November election," after a brief visit with party leaders here today.

"From conversations I had with Gov. McNutt and State Chairman Omer S. Jackson, Indiana looks to be very safely on the Democratic side," he said.

The secretary was asked if Indiana is completely in the good graces of the national party leaders, in view of the fact that it was slow to join the movement for President Roosevelt in Chicago in 1932.

"Any feeling that Indiana is not in the good graces is entirely unjustified," Morgan said. "There certainly is no such attitude toward this State in Washington. National Chairman James Farley doesn't play that kind of politics."

Treasury Cites BankruptcyBill 'Utility Joker'

By the Associated Press.

Treasury counsel said yesterday the corporation bankruptcy bill recently passed by the Senate contains a "joker" which would permit dismissal of reorganization proceedings involving a $50,000,000 Federal tax claim against the Associated Gas & Eelctric Co.

The Senate Judiciary sub-committee was told that the provision in question was proposed by Tom D. McKeown, who said he now represents Associated Gas but did not at that time.

McKeown is a former Democratic Representative from Oklahoma.

The bankruptcy bill, passed last week but recalled on motion of Chairman Ashurst (Democrat), Arizona, of the Judiciary Committee, included a retroactive clause requiring that petitions for reorganization must represent 5 per cent of a company's indebtedness.

C. M. Hester, Treasury lawyer, told the sub-committee this would permit dismissal of long pending reorganization proceedings against Associated Gas, in connection with which the Treasury had filed a $50,000,000 tax assessment against the company.

Senators O'Mahoney (Democrat), Wyoming, and Van Nuys (Democrat), Indiana, chairman of the sub-committee in charge of the bill, said they had not known Associated was interested in the retroactive clause nor that reorganization proceedings were pending against it.

Yesterday's hearing ended with presentation of an amendment to which the Treasury counsel and others present agreed. It would provide that the retroactive clause should not require petitions to represent 5 per cent of the company's indebtedness if the petitioners did not represent as much as $25,000.

Swanson Pays Visit To Meeting of Cabinet

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Swanson yesterday left the Naval Hospital, where he has been confined four months, and paid a surprise visit to a White House Cabinet meeting.

Smoking a cigarette, Swanson drove in an open car to the south grounds. President Roosevelt immediately adjourned the Cabinet and all stepped out for photographs.

The President got into the car and chatted with the Navy Department head while Vice President Garner and members of the Cabinet grouped about the two. Swanson returned to the hospital after the call.

Republicans Answer Farley

Governor's inexperience and the fact that he hasn't been known much over a year. Nobody ever heard of Jim's statesmanship before he came to Washington. A few had heard of his being a boxing commissioner, and when this big Tammanyite talks about a perilous experiment, should Landon be successful, it's enough to make the country laugh out loud."

Lambertson said Farley "would like to hang the Du Pont Liberty League crowd on our party, but he can't do that for a minute."

"That is the baby of the Democratic Shouse and Al Smith," Lambertson said. "It is the Landons and the Borahs, Vandenbergs and Steiwers that are articulating for the Republican Party today. Not a finger of any of these four has been touched by the Liberty League.

"The Democrats have to ask for re-election this year on their record and the record is that of tremendous increase of national debt, and undiminished unemployment. * * *

"No, Jim can't smear that one who is coming up from the grass roots from coast to coast to meet the crying need, like Lincoln in his time. Tinkling cymbals and sounding brass won't win this election."

Lambertson said Farley "tries to belittle Landon because he is from a prairie State, indicating that he looks with disdain upon anything that might come out of the Mississippi Valley."

"The only time we ever elect a Democratic President is when the Republicans are divided," Lambertson added. "It was the Republican votes that elected F. D. R. Landon is a harmonizer. He will solidify the Republican Party again, and that is all we need, but along with it we are going to get a lot of Democrats who believe in some old pioneer principles."

A few minutes later Short attacked Farley.

Assails Dual Jobs.

"It is wholly indefensible," Short shouted, "that any member of the President's Cabinet should at the same time hold the office of chairman of a national committee. I was astounded to read the dispatch that Postmaster General Farley, acting as chief dispenser of patronage, traveling all over the country, referred to Gov. Landon as the Governor of 'a typical prairie State.'

"I want it clearly understood that I am not advocating Gov. Landon or anyone, as we have at least 100 eminently qualified candidate possibilities. But I, as a citizen of a great prairie State, resent the slur the Postmaster General passed not only on the great State of Kansas, but on Missouri, Illoinois, Indiana and eery other prairie State."

Short added that when Landon goes fishing "he takes cane pole in hand, and does not take a trip on a million-dollar yacht of some social parasite."

New Deal Indorsed.

Nashville, Tenn., May 21 (AP).—Tennessee Democrats unanimously indorsed the Administration of President Roosevelt today and instructed their delegates to the national convention to cast their 22 votes for his renomination.

A resolution adopted at the State convention said the "record of achievement" of President Roosevelt and Vice President Garner "stands without parallel in American history."

Indorsement was given the records of Senators K. D. McKellar and Nathan L. Bachman, Gov. Hill McAlister, House Speaker Joseph W. Byrns "and the other Democratic Congressmen of Tennessee who have stood loyally by and supported the national Administration."

Senator McKellar, the keynote speaker, indorsed by the resolutions committee for re-election as national committeeman, asked that his name be withdrawn and that Edward H. Crump, Memphis political leader, be named.

BEST UNDER THE SUN
Sarthe and Sarthe-St.Croix

Best when lying in charred oak casks on the sunny shores of the sleepy Caribbean—best under our own summer suns in a tall glass with clinking cubes of ice.

Get under the sun with Rhum Sarthe in a cool, clinking Collins.

You will marvel at the mellowness and richness Rhum Sarthe attains under the sun. Rhum Sarthe makes a stimulating highball, too—in an old-fashioned it is like bonded whiskey—so versatile and useful, in fact, it has won the distinction of being known as "The One Bottle Bar."

For a Daiquiri or the famous Virgin Islands cocktail insist upon Sarthe-St. Croix. It, too, has that under-the-sun distinctive flavor found only in rums from the Caribbean.

Rum that has never been aged and mellowed under the blistering suns of the tropics lacks the punch and character that discriminating drinkers look for.

(Sarthe is pronounced: S-A-R-T-H—no "E")

SARTHE-ST.CROIX

RHUM SARTHE
King of Rums from Haiti.... gives added zest and newfound freshness to a Collins or a Planter's Punch.

A Welcome Showdown.

Congressman Blanton's so-called "continuing" resolution, together with his refusal to consider the very reasonable compromise offers of the Senate conferees, is intended to give friends of the District a case of the jitters. By bringing forth this distressing alternative to acceptance of his demands, Mr. Blanton undoubtedly hopes to win larger concessions from the Senate group. But his strategy is so obvious that it is not likely to make much impression upon those who are fighting to secure fair treatment of the District in Congress.

It is the customary practice, when the two houses become deadlocked over a supply bill, to pass a resolution making available the same appropriations granted the previous year. That is not, however, Mr. Blanton's intention. His "continuing resolution" contains several of the most objectionable features of the 1937 appropriation bill as passed by the House. Consequently, it is not worth considering as anything more than a reflection of the Texan's mental processes.

Moreover, the basic issue growing out of this contest between the Senate and House conferees is not merely a question of funds. Important as it is that the Federal Government pay its equitable share of the cost of supporting the Capital City, that problem is temporarily overshadowed by the efforts of the gentleman from Texas to establish himself as a virtual dictator over the local government.

The real purpose of the provisions, which Mr. Blanton is determined to foist upon the District, is to penalize local agencies that have dared to resist his meddling. Denial of funds for the character education experiment is intended to be a slap at the schools. The proposed ousting of part-time employes is aimed at the "damned doctors" who had the nerve to expose the disgraceful health conditions in Washington. And, of course, the threat to eliminate the Federal contribution to the Capital City is aimed directly at the citizens' associations, the press and other institutions that advocate some rational system for adjustment of the fiscal relations between the local and national governments.

Naturally, the Senate has found it impossible to surrender to this sort of demagoguery. To yield on these important items in the appropriation bill would be to leave the Capital City to the mercy of Blantonism, with all that term implies. As between that contingency and the failure of the regular appropriation bill the choice is a simple one. Congress will not adjourn without voting funds to the District in some form. Consequently, there is much to gain and probably nothing to lose by a showdown that may bring the influence of President Roosevelt into the controversy.

Cuba's New President.

Dr. Miguel Mariano Gomez assumes the presidency of Cuba at a time when the economic situation of the island is better than it has been for several years and relative quiet reigns in the political sphere.

It was a hopeful sign that the election of January 10 (in which Dr. Gomez was the victor) was carried out with a minimum of disturbance. Yet there was one ominous note struck. The liberal and radical elements that had played a prominent part in the overthrow of Machado refused to participate in the balloting. By their attitude they gave indirect but unmistakable notice that they would not consider themselves as bound by the results but might, should the opportunity arise, seek to overthrow the new regime by force.

Even though Cuba today is enjoying a welcome period of quiet, there is no certainty that this happy state will continue. Beneath the surface the same volcanic forces that again and again have burst forth in recent years are still active. It will take skill and statesmanship of a high order to keep Cuba truly serene.

The son of a great Cuban revolutionary leader and president of the republic, himself twice mayor of Havana, Dr. Gomez is plainly not of the dictatorial type. His inaugural address shows clearly that he will try, so far as he can, to bind the nation's wounds and seek to heal the scars left by many years of depression and dictatorship.

Although a conservative, Dr. Gomez is not a reactionary. This his inaugural address made clear. In an effort to solve the grave social and economic problems facing his nation he favors a great many reforms. He wants wealth better distributed, the tax system improved, sanitation extended, the trusts curbed, a public works program put through to relieve unemployment, and the relations between labor and capital placed on a harmonious basis. How far he will succeed in achieving these laudable aims remains to be seen.

But at any rate he starts off on the right foot by promising a regime of civil liberty and proposing a general amnesty that will return political prisoners to their homes and exiles "to the free soil of their fatherland." In this way would he curb the urge for revolutionary action. For the first time in many years Cuba may have a constitutional regime in fact as well as in name.

The Door Is Still Open.

The invalidation of the Guffey coal act does not mean that the industry must be left without protection against the destructive competitive practices and wasteful exploitation of natural resources that have been a matter of concern for a good many years. There is no occasion for adopting a defeatist attitude in face of the challenge presented by the decision.

The Court has merely emphasized the necessity of turning to a solution not only adapted to the ends sought but constitutionally valid as well. That such alternatives exist was tacitly admitted by President Roosevelt himself when he stated that further efforts will be made to achieve the objectives of the outlawed act. The revamped measure introduced by Senator Guffey, however, is economically unsound, even if less vulnerable on constitutional grounds than the original proposal.

As a matter of fact, considerable progress had been made toward a solution of the industry's marketing problems through purely voluntary agreements before the NRA provided the operators with a code of fair practice. In the Appalachian Coals Case, decided in March, 1933, the Supreme Court provisionally approved the establishment of an exclusive sales agency by the coal producers of four States, holding that it was "not to be condemned as an undue restraint merely because it may effect a change in market conditions, where the change would be in mitigation of recognized evils and would not impair, but rather foster, fair competitive opportunities."

This liberal decision indicates that the Supreme Court will not stand in the way of reasonable agreements to prevent destructive competitive practices, even if they involve some restraint of trade. Thus, without any new legislation, the coal industry is in a position to achieve a very large measure of self-protection. According to reports, steps have already been taken to resume operations under central selling agencies. Such action would not only afford safeguards against future price cutting, but it would also indirectly help to stabilize wages and hours of work, as organized labor realizes.

If voluntary co-operation does not meet the needs of the coal mining industry, there will still be a possibility of effective Federal regulation of interstate marketing activities. At any rate, the majority decision did not deny the constitutionality of the price-fixing and marketing sections of the Guffey act. It simply did not pass upon that question. The dissenting minority of three and Chief Justice Hughes, in a separate opinion, held that these sections of the act ought to be sustained.

Although statutory regulation of prices and marketing practices of the type imposed by the original Guffey act and the proposed substitute is thoroughly undesirable, it would be quite possible to turn to a less rigid and arbitrary system of Federal regulation, or simply exempt the coal industry from the restrictive provisions of the anti-trust laws. Suggestions have also been made for the regulation of marketing practices through interstate compacts among the chief coal-producing States.

At present the industry is well organized and for the most part operating under union agreements covering wages and hours of work. With the principle of collective bargaining recognized, labor ought to welcome the opportunity to negotiate independently. If President Green, of the A. F. of L., wants Congress to stop short of fixing wages "by legislative fiat, as in Fascist countries," why does he deplore the passing of the Guffey act and fear for the validity of the Wagner act? Both those measures lead away from freedom toward the form of Government domination which he deplores.

The decision in the Guffey case has not only checked this dangerous trend, but it has called attention to various better remedies for industrial maladjustment that lie within the limits set by the Constitution.

Fickle Jade Of The Movies.

Whether it be an art or an industry, the motion picture has by no means solved all its problems. Commercially speaking, box-office difficulties are even more baffling than the problem of the third dimension—and no approach has been made to a formula for discovering what the spectator will want next.

A case in point is current. Only this week, Washington theatergoers, despite everything reviewers could say, refused acclaim to "The Dancing Pirate." Now, when that picture has been withdrawn, these same theatergoers are crowding to its successor, a new version of "Show Boat." The latter production is brilliant, with a cast of well-known performers, settings which improve upon those of the previous "Show Boat" and most of the songs which turned that vessel into a "golden galleon," plus several new melodies.

But "The Dancing Pirate" possessed what any critic (even any manager) would have wagered were equal attractions. It was a pleasant and picturesque musical-comedy, romantic in theme, the highest triumph of technicolor yet achieved, and it featured one artist, Steffi Duna, who is likely to secure—who already deserves—a place in the high brackets of Hollywood.

One hears a good deal about "sure fire stuff for the screen." Actually, there is no such material. Not a few publishers have starved in their endeavor to guess what sort of novel readers would be wanting. Many a producer of plays for the stage has been driven mad by his quest for something that would please his patrons. But the taste of the motion picture public is still more unpredictable. Compared with it, the winners of the Irish sweepstakes and the decision of a jury are easy speculation.

Jim's Two-Edged Sword.

Sunny Jim Farley has announced the beginning of the Presidential race between Franklin D. Roosevelt and Alf M. Landon. Even more than the 4-to-1 victory of Gov. Landon over Senator Borah in the New Jersey primaries, the clumsy shafts which Mr. Farley directed at the Kansas prairies suggest that political minds have narrowed the November contest to these two. Of course, Sunny Jim's first thought was to put a coating of his campaign mud upon Mr. Landon before he obtains the nomination. Even so, he must have been tempted by this opportunity to add another feather to his cap as a political prognosticator.

It is safe to assume that most of the political firing from the majority side will now be directed at the Kansas Governor. He is so far in the lead for the G. O. P. nomination that only a miraculous upset could deny him the privilege of matching wits with Mr. Roosevelt during the five months following the Cleveland convention. To hear the nominal head of the Postoffice Department recognize this fact so far in advance of the convention must be music to the ears of Mr. Landon's supporters.

In only one instance did Mr. Farley make a telling thrust against Gov. Landon. The prospective G. O. P. candidate, he told his Michigan audience, is "a gentleman of whom none of you had even heard a little more than a year ago." It is true that the Kansan has come very quickly into national prominence. But if Mr. Farley were a realist he would know that this fact is likely to add zest to the campaign. For the public will be asked to choose between one candidate with whom it has recently become familiar and another who may be too well known.

But Democrats and Republicans alike will be left cold by Sunny Jim's masterstroke—his statement that the election of Alf Landon would be an experiment. Was the distributor of spoils in a dozen newfangled agencies for untried undertakings insinuating that experimentation is not all that it has been cracked up to be? This sounds like heresy from the very mouthpiece of the New Deal. If Sunny Jim hopes to keep his audiences serious-faced in the forthcoming campaign he should remember that even three-job officials are sometimes incapable of wielding a two-edged sword.

A Poor Compromise.

The compromise tax plan that has issued from the Senate Finance Committee is not as bad as the bill passed by the House. That, however, is about the only good word that can be said for a proposal which bears all the earmarks of having been conceived hastily in response to the President's appeal for action.

Chairman Harrison estimates that the committee's substitute measure would raise "somewhere over $500,000,000." The yield is entirely inadequate by comparison with the size of the prospective budgetary deficit, and is also well below the revenue which President Roosevelt said was needed to cover the loss of processing taxes and amortize the cost of the bonus. At the same time it is an oppressively large sum to exact from the incorporated business of the country, which alone is called upon to pay.

The already high taxes levied upon corporate net income would be raised to 18 per cent and in addition a flat tax of 17 per cent would be levied on undistributed profits. While the Senate Committee plan would not force distribution of earnings in the erratic and inequitable fashion proposed by the House bill, its aim is similar and it, too, employs the taxing power for the ulterior purpose of influencing dividend policies. The new bill is also subject, to a lesser extent, to the charge that it would tend to make business more unstable by dissipating capital needed as a "cushion" in periods of depression.

The Finance Committee has simply dodged its responsibility by reporting out this makeshift excuse for a tax program instead of turning to the only kind of new taxes which can be well distributed over the entire community and which can be relied upon to yield adequate returns. Taxes upon gross income, either general business turnover taxes or special sales taxes, are plainly indicated as the most effective aid to budget balancing. Unfortunately, Congress lacks courage to face the situation in a Presidential election year.

Wisecracking will interfere quite definitely with your reasoning powers.—Sir Edward Beatty. Is this statement a poor example of the use of reasoning power, or a bum wisecrack?

Reply To Mr. Cohen.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: With reference to Mr. Arthur Cohen's letter which you printed some days ago, I should like to make a few comments.

The National Symphony Orchestra management had made several press announcements stating that they had sufficient funds to proceed with winter concerts but that summer concerts were "off." Mr. Bunchuk, it is logical to assume, simply intended to employ, for the summer concerts, the same National Symphony Orchestra personnel, thereby assuring the same quality of orchestral performance.

Mr. Oyster, it is stated by Mr. Cohen in substance, has failed in the past 5 years to associate himself with the National Symphony Orchestra; may it not be because he disapproves of the present head of that organization?

In regard to the union's stand on imported musicians: The union during the early part of this controversy printed its stand in the press and said that it did not object to any importations when necessary but that it did object to those imported men being given full privileges to compete with the musicians who are already here and established in the field of music. In other words, if a musician is imported from another city to fill a particular post in the orchestra, the union, I gather, feels that it has a right to restrict that man to work in the orchestra and not to play also in a hotel, a theater, or a dance band.

The truth of the matter is that the National Symphony Orchestra Association does not pay high salaries as do the New York Philharmonic and the Philadelphia orchestras, that they cannot induce a fine musician to come to Washington for $40 per week, but that by their promising him an unlimited field in which to work, he could thereby augment his inadequate symphony salary at the expense of the Washington musician who is not in the orchestra and who depends entirely on work other than in the orchestra for his livelihood. The artistic excellence of the orchestra is not menaced by the stubbornness of the union but by the slim salaries paid to the orchestra by the association.

It would seem that enough has been written in the newspapers. The orchestra association has the permit to use the Watergate. The Government officials concerned have given the association their co-operation as to the barge and the shell. Let Mr. Cappel now settle his differences with the musicians' union and proceed with the summer concerts for which all Washington is waiting. The "dog in the manger" attitude is not very pleasing.

A Conference To Prepare For Peace.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Davenport's question in The Post's letter columns of May 18, asking how it can further international good will to hurt Italy, indicates that he knows the answer, but nevertheless tries to prove that black is really white.

If Italy can violate the four obvious commandments of God: (1) "Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor, (2) Thou shalt not covet, (3) Thou shalt not steal, (4) Thou shalt not kill," and can get away with it on a mammoth scale, notwithstanding her violation of her two solemn treaty promises to the League of Nations and to the Kellogg-Briand pact, she will encourage similar wars in coming centuries. She will delay for ten centuries the vision of Isaiah that the time will come when swords shall be turned into plowshares.

If the conviction of Abraham Lincoln, of Ulysses Grant and of Henry Ward Beecher that the time would come when there will be an organization of nations for the peace of the world, has actually been postponed by Mussolini for 1,000 years, and democratic government has been so terrified by the blustering of that international bully that its sense of righteousness and of responsibility to God for the welfare of the whole people has been lost sight of, then Mussolini has shown himself to be the greatest enemy of the common people of all ages, the betrayer of humanity, a veritable anti-Christ—a curious product of sunny Italy.

The United States and every self-respecting nation which is not honeycombed by graft must say to Mussolini, as David said to Goliath, "Thou comest to me with a sword, and with a spear, and with a shield, but I come to thee in the name of the Lord of Hosts, the God of the armies of Israel, whom thou hast defied."

The cornerstone of world peace is not military force, but the word of honor of the nations. Italy has shown that she has no such sense of honor. She might be conquered by the united military forces of Great Britain and of the United States, but she would not be brought to her knees in repentence, as she would be if the United States, recognizing her own inexecusable neglect, should call a conference of all those nations which renounced war when they signed the Paris Pact, and if those nations, mobilizing the moral convictions of all nations, should pronounce Mussolini the Judas of humanity.

It is not the severity of a punishment but its certainty and justice that will prevent the repetition of such a crime.

The repetition of Japan's and Italy's violation of the Paris Pact, and of the covenants of the League of Nations, can be better prevented by an immediate call for a conference of the offended nations than in any other way. They believe in keeping their word of honor, and may organize themselves into the United States of the World for Peace and International Justice, as Lincoln, Gen. Grant and Henry Ward Beecher prophesied.

When Japan camouflaged her capture of Manchuria—China's territory—by alleging self-defense, Secretary Stimson said that the foreign policy of the United States, established by the Pact of Paris, will not recognize "any situation, treaty or agreement" brought to pass by defiance of the pledge in the Paris Pact. If the United States fails to act promptly, in supporting that doctrine which was indorsed by the League of Nations, she will prove herself a quitter when her fidelity to peace is most needed.

If the United States means to continue in honest adherence to the pact and to her moral obligations to the nations which followed her lead in its formation, Congress must act promptly and adhere to the principle of the American doctrine of the non-recognition of territory of property acquired by aggressive war.

As Britain and other nations owing us for the Great War are, like ourselves, under the heavy expense of increasing their national armament in time of financial depression, we owe it to our honor and to the nations which at our suggestion have outlawed war to call for a conference to prepare for peace, utilizing modern scientific methods for nipping in the bud plots and conspiracies, before they develop into a monster war machine, and instituting an international police force, which itself will be unable to endanger the peace of the world.

If the churches and peace organizations will petition Congress for such a conference, Congress will grant it, and the people will elect next November those persons to office whom they consider most likely to protect the people from war makers, and from the rule of grafting politicians.

The passage of such an act by Congress without waiting for a reformation of the League of Nations, or for the working out of the theories of the New Deal, will issue in the greatest era of peace and plenty the world has ever known.

Grand Manan History.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The latest number of the Grand Manan Historian is just being issued.

With noted members such as Willa Cather, Poultney Bigelow and Joseph Pulitzer, which the society has this year, this Boston enterprise should have considerable interest.

Grand Manan, New Brunswick, itself is of a good deal of international importance, owing to its historical connection with the Quoddy power project. Moose Island, on which Eastport is located, was admitted to be legally a part of Nova Scotia in the boundary negotiations at New York in 1817, and the American commissioner exchanged Grand Manan for Moose Island and two other small islands. Had it not been for this exchange the Passamaquoddy power project might never have come into existence. The boundary decision was signed at New York, November 24, 1817.

A Harvard graduate of 1762, Moses Gerrish, a native of Newbury, Mass., and a loyalist in the Revolution, began settlement of the island in 1784, under a license of occupation from Nova Scotia. Nevertheless, it was long expected that the island would be awarded to the United States, and Mr. Holmes, the American commissioner, was severely criticized for agreeing to the decision referred to above. Grand Manan has always been a fishery of very great value, and it was then considered the most important of all the Passamaquoddy islands.

"Groundling's" Thanks.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Please accept my poor thanks for the complete pillorying of the WPA racket in Westchester.

While the people suspect all this and are upset, not knowing what to believe or to do, such facts as Mrs. Meyer gives to the world serve as guides to help us decide.

In Pennsylvania from Gov. Earle down to the poor, ignorant iron puddler, all are inoculated with this deadly virus.

The remarks of Mrs. James Roosevelt in which she is quoted as saying "I don't see why so much fault is found with the President. He is doing all he can for the people," made me "blow up." It was of the same tone as an indulgent mother would use when the teacher made a complaint about her boy: "Oh, no—my boy wouldn't do that."

When she spoke of "the people" that was too much—the same attitude toward us poor groundlings that Marie Antoinette had.

A Veteran's View.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: For the past two years a lot of us rank and file folks around the country have been trying to draft Mr. Hoover for a second term. We knew he didn't seek it. We hoped he might be persuaded. We were and are grateful for his powerful patriotic campaign against New Deal cowardice, folly and waste.

Mr. Hoover's Chicago statement declaring himself out of the race seems to assure Gov. Landon's nomination. Landon's talk at Attica, Kans., proves he has the genius of common sense. That's what we need most in the Government at Washington.

We old-timers might just as well accept the fact that the generation which served in our World War armies—Landon was one of them—is taking over control of American politics, just as Confederate veterans did in the South and Union veterans in the North, following the Civil War.

Anybody who thinks the vets are going to let this country go in for state socialism has another thought coming.

The Post Impressionist

Walt Whitman, Newspaperman.

Post Office, Friday.

THIS columnist, for one, doesn't see why we newspapermen should take pride in any former newspaperman just because he is that. Whenever one of those formers writes a book on metaphysics, or gets elected dogcatcher, we working newspapermen stick our chests out and our noses up and say:

"And, you know, he used to be a newspaperman!"

When a metaphysician or a dogcatcher goes into newspaper work—and more of them go into it than you'd guess, Mr. Layman—you don't hear the other metaphysicians and dogcatchers saying:

"He used to be a metaphysician!" . . .

"He used to be a dogcatcher!"

And yet they ought to—they ought to.

Why do we do it, when they don't?

* * *

Is the phenomenon an expression of what—during the days when people believed in Freud—was called "a mere defense mechanism set up against a strong inferiority complex?"

Walt Whitman furnishes the latest case in point. Somebody recently discovered the sole remaining copy of that violent journal the Brooklyn Freeman, so we newspaper people have to go poking into Whitman's "career as an editor." We even have to recall the well-forgotten fact that he once worked on the Brooklyn Eagle.

This isn't nice. The Freeman was a short-lived sheet, and the Eagle has long since successfully lived down the newspaper activities of Walter Whitman.

Whitman worked as a printer's devil when he was a boy. Later, he started the Long Islander over at Huntington, then deserts that mild adventure for school teaching jobs in Queens and Suffolk.

He preferred politics to poetry, in those days. He listened to Daniel Webster, was caught up by the whirlpool of Manhattan politics, joined Tammany Hall and made speeches.

For a while, before 1846, he did some freelance newspaper writing—not with phenomenal success. But the Eagle was then only five years old and staunchly Democratic: it chose him as its editor.

As the modern Eagle admits, he editorially "carried the banner for the local Democratic organization through two campaigns—meeting defeat both times."

In 1848 he changed his views.

If you forget what the Wilmot Provision was (we're always forgetting it ourselves) ask the first schoolboy you meet. It was a rider to an appropriation bill and sought to forbid slavery in that little plot of land of which this country had just relieved Mexico. Lincoln's sole surviving speech as a Congressman attacks General Lewis Cass for shifting his opinions about that Proviso: Cass had stated his case in a letter to A. O. P. Nicholson, of Nashville.

Well, although Whitman had not been extreme as an abolitionist, he was all for the Wilmot rider. He was the first editor to support it, in print, flatfootedly. At first, Northern Democrats were of one mind with him, but their Southern brothers took the other side, whereupon the Democratic organization of Brooklyn took it, too. So, after Whitman had published an editorial assault upon the Cass letter, Whitman—to put it mildly—resigned.

He went to New Orleans for a few months—odd place for a man of his opinions—and returned to Brooklyn to launch a paper of his own in the cause he had so definitely espoused.

That paper was the Freeman. It supported the candidates of the Free Soil Porty: Martin Van Buren and Charles F. Adams.

It had hard luck from the start—fire destroyed the plant. Whitman started the plant all over again—was a delegate to the State Free Soil Convention—but, at the election, Kings County went lock, stock and barrel against the Free Soil ticket.

* * *

That was enough for Whitman!

He dropped politics. Though he sold occasional bits to the papers—the Post-Impressionist remembers Talcott Williams telling how Whitman used to "call in" at the old Philadelphia Press offices—he really dropped practical newspaper work, too.

* * *

So poetry gained by the election of Taylor and Fillmore.

Politics didn't lose by it—so far as Whitman was affected by it.

And, we submit, the newspaper profession didn't lose a lot when it lost Whitman.

"He used to be a newspaperman!" Those fellows who leave newspaper work, whether for a professorial chair or the dog pound, generally leave because they're pretty poor newspapermen.

In the near future, thinks Henry, you may look out of a train window and be held spellbound by the picture of great waving fields of ripening carburetors or charmed by the pastoral scene in which the farmer harvests a crop of tire "lugs."

Court Point Is Gained By Mrs. Bartholomew

Los Angeles, May 21 (AP).—A judge who has indicated strongly he is considering giving Freddie Bartholomew back to his mother, pondered his decision today as Mrs. Lillian Bartholomew, of England, won her second straight court battle over her actor son.

Superior Judge Robert R. Kenny denied a motion to dismiss Mrs. Bartholomew's demand for an accounting of the guardianship of the 12-year-old boy. He earns $1,000 a week.

Freddie is in custody of his aunt, Miss Myllicent Bartholomew. The mother argued the aunt had not set forth every item in the expenditure of his income in a previous report to the court.

Three Dictatorships

Totalitarian States, Designed To Help Masses, Reflect Failure Of World To Solve Problem Of Organization.

The Post presents the fifth installment of a history and interpretation of present world events by an authority on current affairs. The articles are based largely on a more detailed study by the author, "The Dangerous Year," published by the Foreign Policy Association, New York City.

By Raymond Leslie Buell,
President of the Foreign Policy Association.

EUROPE now has three great dictatorships: the dictatorship of the proletariat in the Soviet Union, and the dictatorship of the middle class in Nazi Germany and Fascist Italy. While differing in methods, these dictatorships are all inspired by a concern for the well-being of the masses. Each realizes that popular well-being is not only an economic but a psychological problem.

By an unprecedented use of propaganda technique, military parades, symbolic arts and public rewards, each dictatorship has brought into existence a new national mystique—has created the illusion that the humblest worker forms an integral part of the state. Each displays a concern for humble people which had not existed under old-style capitalism.

To achieve its social ends, each dictatorship follows economic policies which constitute a radical departure from orthodox economics. In the Soviet Union private enterprise has largely disappeared, and the ownership of the means of production is in the hands of the state. By contrast, in Fascist countries the means of production remain for the most part in private hands and the profit system continues to exist.

These differences between fascism and communism, however, appear to be narrowing. Both in Germany and Italy large-scale enterprise is subject to far-reaching regimentation. Price-fixing by government agencies is widely practiced. Under both regimes private profits are limited to 6 per cent, any surplus going into government securities. In theory, private capitalists are trustees of the state.

IN THE SOVIET UNION state capitalism of a different type has supplanted early efforts at communism. The saying in Moscow is that the regime has destroyed the three old classes, but created eighteen new ones. By 1935 the regime had returned to the wage system and various forms of piecework. The principle of private property, moreover, is admitted to a limited degree.

In certain respects the Soviet class system appears as obnoxious as that found in capitalist countries. The Spartan-like life once demanded by Soviet leaders has largely disappeared. Those at the top of the social hierarchy live in relative comfort, while the masses still have a low standard of living. Officials travel in private cars or first-class compartments. In Moscow a distinction is even made between first and second class medicines. For the present, the Soviet Union has a system which may be described as state capitalism.

Despite similarities between the three dictatorships, the fact remains that the Soviet Union is proving more successful in raising the standard of living of its people than either Nazi Germany or Fascist Italy. That the Soviet Union is proving more successful than the Fascist states is partly due to differences in economic systems. But in even larger measure, the relative success of the U. S. S. R. is due to geographical advantages.

Continental in size and relatively underpopulated, the Soviet Union is more self-sufficient in raw materials than any other country in the world except the United States. By contrast, Italy and Germany depend on international markets. With the collapse of these markets during the depression, their standard of living declined, despite desperate efforts to become self-sufficient. Should Germany or Italy adopt communism, their economic conditions would change but little, unless they succeeded in forming a bloc with the U. S. S. R. and Poland.

ALL THREE dictatorships succeed in arousing mass loyalty and creating a new national confidence by cultivating the fear of a foreign enemy and preaching the virtues of militarism. All three hold countless military reviews; elevate the army to a position of supreme importance, and inculcate a military view of life on the part of youth.

Unable to solve Italy's social problems, Mussolini resorted to war against Ethiopia in 1935. Will Hitler eventually follow Mussolini's example? Although the masses do not want war, youth in the Soviet Union, Germany and Italy, which does not know the horrors of the last war, is being trained to militarism. The great danger of dictatorships is that, finding it impossible to prevent a decline of the standard of living at home and realizing that continuance in power depends on new successes, they may plunge the country into war.

Despite their preoccupation with mass welfare, all three dictatorships follow arbitrary and repressive methods of advancing their ends. In the Soviet Union this policy takes two principal forms. The first is exploiting the worker by "speeding up methods" and piecework which can be approved only by old-fashioned capitalists. The second form of repression is continuance of the terror—the ruthless extirpation of all those suspected of sympathy for the past and the old bourgeois classes. Of all the dictatorships in Europe, that of the Soviet Union has taken the greatest toll of human life. Instead of withering away, the state is becoming more and more omnipotent.

In Germany the Nazi regime also relies on an arbitrary policy. Social Democrats, Liberals, Communists, pacifists and Jews have been forced to flee the country or herded into concentration camps. The independent labor unions, probably more advanced than in any other European country, have been destroyed. Freedom of the press and freedom of thought in the universities have disappeared. A system of espionage, called the bloc-wart, penetrates every city block.

Fascist Italy also rests on arbitrary repression. The secret police continue their task of ferreting out opposition; the Island of Lipari continues to receive its political prisoners. The editorial and news policies of the Italian newspapers are determined by the ministry of propaganda.

In all three dictatorships education is not an unhampered quest for truth, but one more method of propaganda. The schools and the press habitually present a distorted view of the outside world.

While these grave defects in the dictatorial regimes must be admitted, one outstanding fact should be remembered. The glorification of war and of a distorted nationalism in the dictatorships is a reflection of economic needs which have not been satisfied by international organization and a form of defense against failure to solve internal social problems. Science and industry make it possible to meet all of the needs of the population of the world; the problem is to work out a system of distribution on an internal and international scale which will meet the legitimate needs of every people. The future peace of the world depends upon the ability of the democratic states to solve this problem. Will they take the lead?

Reading In Small Doses

By W. L. Phelps.

A Book of Essays.

Prof. Raymond Woodbury Pence, of DePauw University, Indiana, has prepared a handy volume of strictly contemporary essays, which I think will be found useful and entertaining by thousands of readers.

The book is called "Essays of Today" and is published by the Macmillan Co., New York.

Although it is not a large or cumbersome volume, it contains 50 essays and 632 pages. An appendix gives biographical information about every one of the 50 writers, accompanied by a bibliography giving the titles of other books of essays by the same persons.

Although there have been a number of anthologies of essays, I do not remember seeing any book of this kind so useful as this, containing such a wide variety of material in so small a space, and so truly representative of contemporary essay writers.

The subjects covered are almost as various as literature itself. Here are some of the titles: "Diminishing Returns in Modern Life," by James Truslow Adams; "The Myth of Rugged American Individualism," by Charles A. Beard; "I am in the Book," by Robert Benchley; "Manners: American and English," by Mary Borden; "On Essays," by G. K. Chesterton; "Young Men in Politics," by Gov. Cross; "The Biographer and His Victims," by Claude M. Fuess; "Let Us Talk About Unpleasant Things," by Robert Herrick; "Vulgarity in Literature," by Aldous Huxley; "Americans Are Queer," by Stephen Leacock; "In Praise of Idleness," by Bertrand Russell; "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes," by Vincent Starrett; "The Great Diarist," by C. B. Tinker; "The Unintentional Charm of Men," by Frances L. Warner; "The Secret Garden," by Edith Wharton, etc.

WPA Charge By Mrs. Meyer Brings Reply

Bryan, Westchester County Chief, Denies Works Inefficiency.

alleged I made such a statement, inasmuch as the word 'dog-traitor' is not in my vocabulary nor in the dictionary, and the only person whom I have ever heard use this peculiar hyphenated term is a local newspaperwoman who, perhaps, is the particular friend mentioned by Mrs. Meyer and who reproduced in her own words her conception of my policy in this connection."

Cites Statement.

"The only statement that I have ever made which might be garbled and exaggerated into the one quoted by Mrs. Meyer was to the effect that of two fully qualified individuals applying for a supervisory job with the WPA I would favor the one who was entirely in sympathy with the aims and purposes of the WPA and loyal to the President and his Administration in carrying out the work program. I made this statement at a meeting of the mayor and council of the City of New Rochelle, following which I gave an affirmative answer to the query of one of the councilmen that he assumed by my statement that I would not give a Republican a job as a foreman unless he were a Roosevelt Republican.

"On several occasions since I have confirmed that policy and received favorable comment from several anti-Administration newspapers which stated that such policy was entirely allowable and not inconsistent with public policy and interest. I have also pointed out on several occasions that this policy applies only to supervisory non-relief postiions, which constitute less than 5 per cent of WPA personnel and does not affect the 95 per cent of those workers on WPA who are requisitioned in accordance with our rules and regulations from the National Re-employment Service and in connection with whose individual assignment I have absolutely no control so long as they are willing and qualified workers.

"The first matter mentioned by Mrs. Meyer is that of delayed pay checks.

"It is quite true that delays have occurred in the payment of workers. That is general knowldege and has caused much criticism to be directed at the WPA. The specific case mentioned by Mrs. Meyer as having occurred on Saturday, April 25, was occasioned by a statement which had been made by this office in answer to a query made by a reporter that the WPA finance division had brought all pay rolls up to date in the City of White Plains. It was assumed and so published that this was synonymous with the workers actually having received their checks. It was not mentioned in the news article that although the WPA finance division had brought all pay rolls up to date on that occasion that the pay rolls were still in transit through the Treasury accounts office and disbursing unit and that the checks would not be actually distributed for several days.

Caused Concern.

"The garbled release naturally caused concern among those workers who had not actually received their checks, especially since the local welfare office of the City of White Plains immediately stated that no further relief would be given to any individual who claimed that his WPA delayed wages had not been received. The error was immediately corrected and the workers did not suffer thereby. As promised, the checks were actually distributed to the workers in a few days. Prior to the decentralization of the Treasury Department and during the transition period there have been, as you know, several cases of delayed pay checks. At the present writing this condition appears to be entirely cleaned up and I feel assured that in the future all checks will be received exactly six days following the termination of each pay period.

"Mrs. Meyer's inference that records of employes' time was lost is entirely an assumption on her part. Mrs. Meyer then gives vent to certain generalizations charging that the WPA is primarily an Administration weapon ruthlessly used to intimidate the helpless and to destroy local government. She alleges that a partial dictatorship already exists in Westchester County and that the rest of the country is frankly exploited for the benefit of those friendly to the Federal Administration.

"I have never met Mrs. Meyer personally, but I understand that she should know something about a dictatorship because in her position of chairman of the Westchester recreation commission she has ruled as a virtual dictator. She became very much exercised at the inception of the WPA because of the fact that one of the largest white collar projects proposed to the WPA and in continuation of one existing under the TERA, and I believe previous relief agencies, was sponsored by the recreation commission of Westchester County. This project was Mrs. Meyer's pet, and the fact that under the WPA a definite supervision and responsibility has been exercised by our organization has rankled Mrs. Meyer not a little. She has been extremely antagonistic to any move on the part of the WPA to interfere in any manner with the dictatorial attitude of Mrs. Meyer's commission with respect to this project.

"It is my understanding that this project under the TERA was attacked on many occasions by the local press as the A-No. 1 boondoggling project of Westchester County. For that reason, as well as the fact that it is general WPA policy, I demanded at least equal authority with the Westchester County recreation commission in carrying out the recreation program. I have demanded the qualifications of those persons whose service, according to Mrs. Meyer and her commission, were absolutely indispensable on this project. It was quite evident that Mrs. Meyer was using her position to place her adherents in supervisory positions on this project. At one time it looked as though this project would be repudiated by the sponsor rather than permit the WPA having any jurisdiction over its operation, other than the most perfunctory and superficial inspection. Upon my demand, and as a joint enterprise, this project is working out more and more satisfactorily.

"Mrs. Meyer has made mention on several occasions of the very efficient work under the former relief agencies of the Westchester County Work Bureau, an organization of approximately 100 employes which at the time of the inception of the WPA was operating works projects employing approximately 3,000 workers. She seems to lose sight of the fact that in my district of five counties there were 14 similar bureaus employing an administrative staff of over 400 employes. In Westchester County alone five such units operated, the county work bureau above mentioned and a work bureau in each of the four cities.

"The total county load at the time was approximately 6,000. The WPA not only doubled this load to 12,000 in a few months, but consolidated the 14 works bureaus in the district into eight, with a total administrative personnel of 232 for the entire district. In other words, the WPA in this district, with its present administrative forces of 232 as compared to the 100 employes of the former work bureau, is handling six times the load of the latter.

"As to the statement that a larger proportion of administrative workers in the county work bureau were relief cases, I can merely repeat a statement made to me on many occasions by both Democrats and Republicans to the effect 'that you had to be a Republican to get on the relief rolls in Westchester County.' I have no proof of this statement, but I believe that it is closer to the truth than any of the political allegations made by Mrs. Meyer.

"Mrs. Meyer's next statement criticizes the WPA for not taking over—lock, stock and barrel—the administrative employes of the Westchester County bureau. This would have been an excellent idea for Mrs. Meyer, inasmuch as this would have given her continued control for political purposes of the work program in Westchester County. She acknowledges, however, that the WPA did absorb several of the employes of this bureau, several of whom were promoted to much more important positions in the WPA and others dropped to minor. She mentions the latter but not the former, which is quite significant.

Attacks Statement.

"Mrs. Meyer's next point is that under the WPA, political appointees got the jobs, but I notice that in her most recent tirade she isn't quite as ruthless in misstating facts as she was in her statements made at a meeting in the Town Hall in New York City on the evening of February 27 of this year. I quote from the Herald Tribune of New York City of February 28, in which the following statement is attributed to Mrs. Meyer:

"'In Westchester County, where I have been recreation commissioner for 12 years, we had our own county work bureau which for three years dealt successfully with unemployment. The first act of the WPA was to disband this bureau and substitute their political agents who know nothing of the county, nothing about public works and nothing about administration.'

"This statement was so flagrantly erroneous that it was considered as a joke by Mrs. Meyer's associates here in Westchester County, who happen to be conversant with the qualifications of those in charge of the WPA in this district. Modesty forbids me from concurring with Mrs. Meyer in her acknowledgment that I as director of the WPA in this district am an engineer of repute and well regarded by everyone as a professional man. This statement, however, she makes as a left-handed compliment and states that I receive more sympathy than criticism because of the fact that I stand between two fires.

"She then states that I really do not select my subordinates, that this is done for me by Mr. William Cronin, the Democratic county boss, and Mr. Francis X. Heyd, one of my subordinates. She goes on to say as my subordinates are not beholden to me for their jobs, there is no discipline in any of the WPA projects and the county officials have still less influence over these Democratic appointees.

"Mrs. Meyer becomes immediately inconsistent in stating that I have the power of dismissal, but she infers that this power seems to be freely exercised only under great emergencies such as she will later describe, but fails to do so. I scarcely need mention more than a few occurrences to prove conclusively that this is all tommyrot. To begin with, I have on several occasions dismissed employes where they were found to be not as efficient as their experience sheets led me to believe. This is done in all organizations. It is inconceivable that in an organization of the size of the WPA in my district, organized in an extremely short period of time, that certain changes would not have to be made.

Several Changes.

"I have made several major changes in personnel, promoting, demoting and discharging, especially in the early months of organization. I have merely to quote from an editorial appearing in the White Plains Daily Reporter under date of December 27, 1935, to show the fallacy of Mrs. Meyer's allegations. The White Plains Reporter is a Republican newspaper and I quote in part from the editorial as follows:

"'We can find no fault with the way that District Director Bryan has handled the task of organizing the administrative staff and the 15,000 or 16,000 relief employes put to work on WPA projects.

"'It is true that Democrats are getting most of the non-relief jobs under him, but we can not see that we expected anything else than that. The Democrats are in control of the Federal Government. If the situation were reversed the Republicans would be getting the majority of the non-relief jobs. In the face of that condition, Mr. Bryan has not made himself popular with the Democratic political leaders, for he has insisted that the Democrats that get such jobs be competent to handle them after they get them. He has discharged some impotant Democrats.'

"Mr. Francis X. Heyd, whom Mrs. Meyer seems to consider a patronage dispenser, was originally engaged as an estimator at $135 per month. Mr. Heyd is possessed of an excellent background as a contractor. He demonstrated considerable ability in the work assigned to him and when the WPA took over and doubled the TERA work relief load in this district, he further proved his ability as an executive, engineer and construction manager. He was successively promoted by me, entirely on his ability, to field engineer, zone office manager, construction manager of Westchester County and finally supervisor of the division of operations of the district. Mr. Heyd has never belonged to any Democratic organization. Considerable criticism, as you know, has been heaped upon me, and it is true also in the case of Mr. Heyd, by Democratic politicians who bemoan the fact that the WPA cannot be used for political patronage.

Project Selection.

"Mrs. Meyer claims that I am helpless when it comes to the selection of projects. She clarifies this statement by saying that it took the WPA from July 1 to December 2, 1935, to begin to function because of the necessity of projects having to be submitted to Albany and thence to Mr. Hopkins' office in Washington. She cites the fact that some projects intended for summer operation were not approved until December and then could not be operated because of climatic conditions. She attributes a great deal of the apparent confusion of the early days of the WPA to the lack of suitable projects and the lack of ability on the part of foremen and supervisors whom she claims were appointed for political reasons.

"She does not mention the fact that the WPA not only absorbed the entire TERA work relief load in this district, but actually doubled that load in approximately six weeks. On the last two days of November, 1935, over 5,000 workers were assigned to projects in this district. This called for twice the number of foremen and timekeepers already employed on work relief projects in this district and it is to be expected that some of the new appointees were subsequently found not as fully qualified as they appeared to be when interviewed.

"As I pointed out heretofore, this happens in the most efficiently operated construction corporations, and there is no need to make any apologies for the few changes in personnel required from time to time in order to perfect a more efficient organization. Mrs. Meyer also loses sight of the fact that because several of the local projects operating under TERA were not immediately approved by the WPA, it was necessary, rather than throw the workers on such projects onto the relief rolls, to transfer them to new projects which had been approved.

"This was the sensible and humane thing to do. Mrs. Meyer now criticizes us for so doing. She also fails to mention the fact that several projects operating under the TERA were not approved by the WPA at all because they could not meet the more rigid requirements of the WPA for good, useful projects of permanent value to the community. Mrs. Meyer infers, although she knows better than to state it, that relief workers endured misery without hope of appeal from WPA officials who asked but one question, 'How do you vote?' Every one knows that the WPA has no control over the selection of relief workers on our projects. The responsibility of assignment is entirely in the hands of the National Re-employment Service. WPA officials are privileged to appoint only supervisory workers, and a 10 per cent nonrelief allowance was provided for in the rules and regulations of the WPA to insure proper supervision of these projects. Although permitted to make 10 per cent nonrelief assignments, I have only made 4.6 per cent.

"Mrs. Meyer next endeavors to explain her conception of how WPA subordinates are selected. Certain mythical individuals have, so she claims, explained to her the channels through which one must go in order to obtain a job with the WPA. I have heard much more startling and interesting explanations than the one given by Mrs. Meyer. In fact, one of those explanations I heard claimed that each job cost the recipient $50, of which I personally received half. Mrs. Meyer should have heard the story from one possessed of a much better imagination than this mythical individual who gave her the 'facts' in the case.

"Getting away from vague generalities, Mrs. Meyer then endeavors to prove, as she calls it, that only Democrats are getting WPA jobs. She gives a list of 27 supervisory employes, most of them foremen, with their political affiliations, alleged political positions as district leader or Democratic worker, and also the former occupation of each. It is stated at the top of this list that all supervisory WPA employes receiving an amount higher than a security wage are included in the tabulation. It is significant to note that this list is not complete. The names of those men holding some of the most important supervisory positions in this area are missing from Mrs. Meyer's list. Upon checking the political affiliations of these men, we find that they are all Republicans.

"Outstanding among these men is Robert Hare, who is a field superintendent and receives a salary of $195 monthly, practically the top salary paid in the field to any WPA employe. Mr. Hare was selected for his ability in the construction business and the fact that he was a Republican did not militate against him. The same is true of four general foremen, also paid in the upper brackets of our pay schedule. These men are Cozzolino, Dimando, Testa and Girouda, the last mentioned being a relief case and all of these men were formerly connected with the TERA organization. They were taken over by the WPA when it was found that they possessed the necessary qualifications as supervisors of construction operations. Their political affiliations were not questioned. If one were to believe Mrs. Meyer, they would have been immediately discharged and their places filled with beer salesmen, saloonkeepers and other such individuals.

Says Name Was Omitted.

"Even when Mrs. Meyer has included the name of a Republican in her list, his political affiliation had been omitted. This was particularly noticeable in the case of one Tony Martino, an extremely active and lifelong Republican who held appointive positions under the Republican regime in the town of Mamaroneck. Here again, the individual was selected for his construction knowledge and ability, and Mrs. Meyer stated that he had no regular occupation; whereas he had been employed by an internationally known engineering construction corporation as a timekeeper and labor foreman.

"It is also very significant to note that Mrs. Meyer gives only ten names of supervisory employes in City of White Plains. Perhaps she is of the opinion that they constitute the entire list of supervisors directing the activities of some 1,500 workers in that area, but I rather believe that by now the most prejudiced person will agree that Mrs. Meyer is using only the names of those employes that will serve her purpose. It seems rather singular that she should omit the name of the field superintendent in the town of Mamaroneck, who is a Republican, but place at the head of the list the field superintendent in the City of White Plains, who happens to be a Democratic district leader. Not only that, but she endeavors to make it appear that the latter is unqualified by stating that he was formerly a mail truck driver; whereas he has had an excellent background of construction training and experience, the position of letter carrier and driver of a parcel post truck having been held following his service in the United States Army during the World War. He held this job for only four years and then entered the construction business, in which industry he has had over 12 years of experience.

"Were it not for the fact that she would be laughed to scorn by even her friends and associates, Mrs. Meyer would try to make one believe that I, too, am unqualified for my job. When I was taking graduate work in engineering at Harvard, I spent my summer vacations running a steam shovel, driving a truck and even more minor operations. One summer, I drove a charcoal truck and peddled that commodity all oyer Brooklyn. Mrs. Meyer has just as much right to call me a former charcoal peddler as she has to cast aspersions of a similar nature on men of ability and background in the construction industry. She has either gone back 10 or 20 years in a man's career, or has cited something he did by dint of economic pressure during the past five years of depression in the construction industry, to endeavor to distort the picture and create an erroneous impression."

Outlawed Coal Board Assails Rates Increase

Commissioner Continues to Function Despite Ruling of Supreme Court.

Though stripped of its regulatory powers by the Supreme Court decision that outlawed the Guffey act, the National Bituminous Coal Commission yesterday carried on aggressively by fighting proposed increases of freight rates before the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Thomas M. Woodward, consumers' counsel of the NBCC, presented formal arguments on a brief which seeks to prevent establishment of permanent surcharge increases on bituminous freight rates.

Such action by the coal commission is authorized by section 18 of the Guffey act. With the newly introduced Guffey-Vinson bill unlikely to pass before adjournment, the commission is staking its hopes for survival on this and other nonlabor provisions which did not run afoul the Supreme Court.

In the decision handed down Monday, no objection was found to those sections of the Guffey act authorizing the NBCC to conduct investigations of mine operations and personnel, marketing etc., and to make complaints to the Interstate Commerce Commission to safeguard interests of those concerned with transportation, mining, selling and consumption of coal.

The brief argued yesterday by Woodward said the surcharge increases proposed by the railroads would tax producers and consumers $30,000,000 a year. About $25,000,000 of this amount, said the consumers' counsel, would revert to 28 lines originating 94 per cent of all bituminous tonnage.

It was the railroads' contention that the surcharges are necessary as emergency revenue relief to lines in poor financial condition. Those roads which are actually in financial distress would benefit little, if any, by the higher freight rates, the brief held.

Heart Attack Kills Famous Coast Guard Officer Who Piloted NC-4.

Announcement was made yesterday by the Navy Department of the death of Commander Elmer F. Stone, 49, who piloted the historic NC-4 on the first successful transatlantic flight and who for six years was attached to the Bureau of Aeronautics of the Navy Department here.

He was stricken by a heart attack Wednesday at the Diego, Calif., Coast Guard station, where he was serving as commanding officer of the Air Patrol Detachment. For several years he was attached to the Coast Guard's Washington air patrol.

A veteran flyer, Commander Stone was a holder of the Navy Cross and was decorated by the British and Portuguese governments. In 1934 he set a new world's amphibian speed record at 191 miles per hour, a mark since bettered by Maj. Alexander P. de Seversky.

Commander Stone was 23 years old when he entered the Coast Guard Academy in 1910. Upon graduation he was commissioned a third lieutenant and assigned to the cutter Onondaga at Norfolk, Va. While there he was commended for his share in the rescue of the crew of the schooner C. C. Wehrum off False Cape.

In March, 1916, he was assigned to the Naval Air Station. The following year he became the thirty-eighth naval aviator to be appointed in the country. During the War he was with the aviation unit of the U.S.S. Huntington, which assisted in the convoying of troops. For his war-time service he received the Victory Cross.

In April, 1919, he was assigned to the NC plane division, and the following month was made first pilot of the NC-4 on its epoch-making flight across the Atlantic Ocean.

LIEUT. COMDR. ELMER STONE, U. S. N.

Three ships, the NC-1, NC-2 and NC-4 took off the night of May 16 from Trespassey Bay, Newfoundland, but only the NC-4 successfully fought its way across the ocean through fog and rain to the Azores. In all the plane flew 4,514 miles in 57 hours and 16 minutes.

For the flight Commander Stone was awarded the Navy Cross and the Congressional Medal.

From 1920 to 1926 he was assigned to the Bureau of Aeronautics. While at that post he was made lieutenant commander. His promotion to the rank of commander came a year gao.

After his stay with the Bureau of Aeronautics he returned to the Coast Guard, serving both here and at the Cape May station. He set the world's amphibian speed record in a flight at Langley Field in December, 1934.

Last year he was assigned to San Diego Coast Guard Station.

Offer of 'Deal' With U. S. Cited In Liquor Case

Attorney Named in Jury Tampering Trial at Roanoke.

By the Associated Press.

Roanoke, Va., May 21.—An alleged offer of a Rocky Mount attorney to make a "deal" with the Government entered the record today in the trial of 23 persons charged with conspiring to influence the jury in the Franklin County liquor conspiracy case.

Edgar T. Marshall, of Forest Hill, Md., one of three pleading not guilty, testified that efforts were made to "trap" J. Brady Allman, the attorney, after a reported offer to make a "deal" if Marshall "would tell all I know on Carter Lee."

Carter Lee is the Franklin County Commonwealth's attorney, indicted in the liquor-conspiracy case, but acquitted after the ten-week trial.

Marshall took the stand after Judge John Paul announced that Allman felt it necessary to retire as Marshall's attorney because of an unforeseen "situation."

The witness is the son of L. E. Marshall, who served on the jury in the original liquor-conspiracy case, and who testified that he never heard of any proposal to influence the jury.

Frank S. Tavenner, jr., assistant United States attorney for the Western District, denied Marshall's charge of a "deal" with any representatives of the defendants in the liquor trial. There were no offers made by the district attorney's office or other Government officers, Tavenner declared.

Cruiser Vincennes Launched by U. S.

Quincy, Mass., May 21 (AP).—The United States Navy's most modern fighting ship, the 10,000-ton cruiser Vincennes, slipped down the ways at the Fore River shipyard today.

High ranking naval officials and about 5,000 spectators watched Miss Harriet Virginia Kimmell, daughter of Mayor Joseph W. Kimmell, of Vincennes, Ind., christen the $10,000,000 ship with champagne from Vincennes, France.

Admiral William H. Standley, chief of naval operations, and Rear Admiral Walter R. Gheradi, commandant of the Boston navy yard, attended the ceremonies, together with a delegation of citizens from Vincennes for which the cruiser was named.

Equipped with 8 and 5 inch guns, the Vincennes, like her sister ship the Quincy, launched here a year ago, represents the highest development of vessels of her type.

Workman Rescued From Water Tank

Prompt action on the part of fellow workmen yesterday saved Joseph Panassidi, 37, a cement finisher, from drowning when he fell into 15 feet of water in an excavation at the District Sewage Treatment Plant, Blue Plains, D. C.

Panassidi fell into the excavation from a rowboat while working on a tank being constructed in a pool. Two police from the Eleventh Precinct assisted in the rescue. The fire rescue squad treated the cement worker and then took him to Casualty Hospital. He was released within a few hours. Panassidi is an employe of the Charles H. Tompkins Co.

The Senate yesterday confirmed Samuel B. Hill, of Washington State as member of the Board of Tax Appeals for a 12-year term. As a member of the House he has been active in shaping tax legislation.

Honduran Rebels Get Free Plane Ride Home

Tegucigappa, Honduras, May 21 (AP).—President Tiburcio Carias furnished free airplane rides today to several exiles who participated in the recent frustrated rebellion against his government.

The President, granting the former rebels amnesty, ordered that they be permitted to return unmolested to Honduras from the neighboring countries to which they fled when dispersed by government forces.

Twelve such exiles were brought from Managua, Nicaragua, today by special airplanes at government expense.

Caucus Is Called On Lynching Bill

By the Associated Press.

A Democratic House caucus was called yesterday for tonight to discuss anti-lynching legislation.

The party meeting was forced by a petition signed by 27 members—two more than necessary.

Several bills to provide Federal penalties in connection with lynchings are pending before the House Judiciary Committee. Representative Ford (Democrat), California, who started the caucus movement with Representative Gavagan (Democrat), New York, said the specific objective of the meeting was "to try to influence the committee to bring a bill out."

Representative Bankhead (Democrat), Alabama, and other House leaders have expressed doubt that any action would be had this session on anti-lynching legislation.

Shooting Reported In Caracas Strike

Maracaibo, Venezuela, May 21 (AP). Shooting punctuated a demonstration of 20,000 residents of Caracas, unconfirmed reports said today, as labor unions here and in the capital began a 48-hour general strike.

Workers sought dissolution of the National Congress which the labor unions criticized as "hand-picked" by the late dictator, Juan Vicente Gomez.

Earlier the National Parliament was reported to have passed a law making profession or suggestion of Communistic doctrines a criminal offense.

The demonstration in Caracas followed a similar exhibition against the congress by a group of students Tuesday. Police charged the students, but no fatalities were reported.

Army, Navy and police detachments patroled the city after the strike committee invited all unions to participate in a fresh demonstration against the actions of an "unpopular and undesirable Gomezistic congress."

9 Revolters Slain.

Mexico City, May 21 (AP).—Dispatches from Durango today described the slaying of nine rebels in two encounters with federal troops. One of the slain men was Raude Leon, described as a leader of the Durango insurrectos.

Blacklist one! Blacklist all!

We all stand on the same ground!

Strikes have been called in a few shops. Only these have been blacklisted. Mechanics, some of them employed by us for years are walking the streets, many because of the fear that only strike sympathizers will have jobs.

We're pledged to an 'open shop' and The Merit System...the right of any man to work. We pay and have always paid fair wages.

Some of these men have already returned to work...others would like to do so.

Strikes should be called in every shop, or none, but the public must have service and we are going to give it even if we have to obtain other men to fill regular jobs in our organizations.

For men returning to work promptly there are still jobs but the public interest will not allow us to hold them open indefinitely

U. S. to Launch Rum Law Drive, Tax Campaign

500 Men Will Be Added to Revenue Bureau Force Before July.

By the Associated Press.

Plans for a coast-to-coast drive by 4,500 officers to tighten up enforcement of liquor laws and the collection of alcohol taxes, were revealed last night by the Treasury.

Officials made known that 500 men would be added to the Internal Revenue Bureau's present force of 4,000, and that the campaign was expected to be fully under way before July.

Treasury Department spokesmen said the offensive would seek to draw a tighter net against tax evaders, bootleggers, moonshiners and other law violators. Additional men also will seek to provide a more thorough check on liquor and beer manufacturers and dealers throughout the country.

At the same time Treasury officials said yesterday the United States has accepted $3,000,000 from Canadian distilleries for customs duties on liquor smuggled into this country during the prohibition era.

Agreement Reached.

Treasury officials, some time ago, announced an agreement had been reached with these distillers, following conferences with representatives of the Treasury, State and Justice departments.

To the present Internal Revenue staff in the new drive will be added 260 new inspectors, 126 storekeeper gagers and more than 100 investigators. They will be assigned to duty in all 15 revenue districts, but with concentrations in specific areas where there is now a shortage of men.

Officials said many of the new investigators would go to New York, Cleveland, Kansas City and San Francisco and the others assigned to distilleries in Kentucky, Tennessee, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Indiana and California.

Distillers are now producing 250,000,000 gallons of spirits annually, Stewart Berkshire, deputy commissioner of internal revenue, reported. This is an increase of approximately 87 per cent over last year, he said, adding that the number of distilleries and plants under the bureau's supervision also had doubled.

Only One Officer.

Instead of having 2 or 3 storekeeper-gagers at each distillery to check all spirits manufactured, Berkshire added, the tax unit has had only one officer. He contended a continuance of this type of supervision "is not safe."

Distillers now have approximately 250,000,000 gallons of spirits in storage, Berkshire estimated, and a large part of the daily production is going into storage as a back-log for bottled-in-bond several years hence.

"From now on," Berkshire said, "there is going to be more good whisky than ever before. And the more good whisky there is and the lower the price, the easier it will be to collect the tax, and the harder for the bootlegger to compete with good liquor at the right price."

Tax Accord

than the normal tax on individual income—4 per cent. The George motion carried by a 12 to 8 vote. A dozen Senators lined up for the lower tax, as predicted in a poll recently published in The Post.

$20,000 Firms Favored.

It was this vote which precipitated a committee row, splitting the group into two camps, and almost ended in each adjourning to draft its own schedule. Holding out for higher surtaxes on this ballot were Senators Harrison, Black, Barkley, La Follette, Guffey, Connally, Costigan and Clark.

A motion to impose an 18 per cent flat corporatoin income tax was adopted by a nearly identical vote—11 to 8. Pointing out that this increase would jump the tax now paid by small corporations (12½ per cent) by 5½ per cent, Senator Byrd proposed a motion to provide flat exemption of $1,000 for companies earning $20,000 and less. It carried unanimously.

It was only after the conservative camp had assurances from Harrison, they said, that the leadership would not fight for higher surtaxes in the Senate, or in conference, that they agreed to raise the surtax on undistributed earnings to 7 per cent.

Certain of their power to force a lower tax in the committee, the conservative group nevertheless was said to be wary lest a controversy on the floor of the Senate might upset what they had accomplished. They decided to make minor concessions, and when Harrison offered the composite compromise, incorporating the 7 per cent surtax, they voted for it.

Couzens Explains Vote.

Couzens explained later that he voted against it because of what he considered the injustice of imposing a higher tax on undistributed earnings than on dividends. He objected also to the failure to provide cushioned rates for debt-laden corporations.

Following the meeting, Chairman Harrison insisted the substitute rates "carry out the suggestion of the President, but not to the extent the House bill did."

"We got into a great deal of crossfire," he admitted, "and finally it was a matter of compromise. It did not look so good for awhile, but those things are now settled."

Byrd Accepts Surtax.

Senator Byrd, who said his whole purpose in fighting the House bill was to make it possible for small business to expand, told reporters:

"By reason of continuing this vast spending program, I realize that additional funds must be raised by taxes, and while the plan adopted by the committee does not exactly meet my views, it is a vast improvement over the House bill. I view the proposed 7 per cent tax on surplus as a normal tax on undistributed earnings."

Senator Peter G. Gerry (Democrat), of Rhode Island, who fought with the conservative bloc, expressed "gratification" at the committee's action.

"While the committee has adopted what is in effect a surtax upon so much of the taxable net income of corporations as they wish to withhold," he said, "it retains the principle of a flat tax upon the statutory net income which has been a part of the revenue laws since the inception of this form of taxation, and avoids measurement of the tax by the amount of the withholding as a means of compelling the making of dividends."

Floor Fight Likely.

Although yesterday's compromise is expected to avoid a pitched Senate floor battle, there will be attempts on both sides to revise the measure upward or downward. Senator La Follette may be counted on to propose his amendment to increase both normal and surtax individual income tax rates. Higher surtaxes on corporate earnings may be offered independently, but are believed to have small chance of success. On the other hand, moves will be made to modify the bill, to provide relief for companies carrying a heavy debt burden, and to remedy several alleged inequities in the plan.

Hindenburg Reported East of Newfoundland

New York, May 21 (AP).—Radio Marine Corporation reported tonight the dirigible, Hindenburg, making its second return trip to Germany from the United States, was about 340 miles east and slightly north of the coast of Newfoundland at 6 p. m., E. S. T.

Its exact position was given as 51:40 north and 44:53 west. The airship's message said it was traveling at a speed of 90 miles an hour and added "All well on board."

Lindbergh Anniversary Recalls Paris' 1927 Ill Feeling for U. S.

French Were in Midst of Anti-American Wave, But Atlantic Flight Caused Nation to Change Her Attitude Completely.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, May 21.—Nine years ago today, France experienced a complete change in her feeling for the United States.

The change was caused by one man—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh. He reached here May 21, 1927, after the first solo flight across the Atlantic. But there were no official celebrations of the feat today.

Back of the story of Lindbergh's triumphal reception—back to the most delirious night Paris has known since the armistice—lies one of the most romantic, if little known, stories of Franco-American relations.

In April, 1927, France was in the midst of one of her periodic anti-American waves. The pride of her people had been hurt by the debt settlement which had been swallowed with difficulty.

French aviation records had dropped, one after another, into American hands. To cap all, Nungesser and Coli had been lost in a hazardous flight to America.

Then, somehow, as Lindbergh, oblivious of the terrific thunder of acclaim that was to greet him, steadily approached Paris, there came a change in popular feeling.

Crowds began gathering in the twilight at Le Bourget, buzzing with speculation on the character of this unknown American who suddenly had caught the world's imagination.

News of his passage over Ireland, the swift flight over Cherbourg where today thousands of American tourists can read a commemorative plaque, brought new thousands to the field, eager to catch a glimpse of him.

Just after 10 p. m. came the drone of the motor. Searchlights picked up the plane, bathed it with silver light and followed it to the ground. It was Lindbergh.

Even before it had seen him, Paris forgot its anti-American feeling and took Lindbergh to its heart. The rest followed like a fairy tale. Lindbergh's modesty completed the picture. From that day to this, France never has wavered in its love for the young American.

Lindbergh, taken secretly to Paris, went to bed at the American embassy. He had told officers he wanted to get to the Hotel Ambassador. They confused this with the ambassador's private residence, also called "hotel" in French.

When Ambassador Myron T. Herrick finally escaped from Le Bourget he found Lindbergh installed in his home. The ambassador, delighted at the outcome of the mistranslation, made Lindbergh his guest, loaned him pajamas, clothed him, counseled him and made him "unofficial ambassador."

Drill Test Won By Company A, Cardozo High

Company A, Tenth Regiment of the Ninth Brigade, commanded by Capt. Wendell Tracy, Cordozo Business High School, colored High School Cadets, was adjudged winner of the forty-fourth annual competitive drill yesterday at Griffith Stadium before a crowd estimated at more than 10,000.

The victory was the second consecutive triumph of A Company of Cardozo. Second honors were awarded Company B, Armstrong High School, Capt. Robert Fields commanding, while third honors were also won by Cardozo High School, Company B, Capt. Charles Winston commanding.

Under direction of Capt. Arthur C. Newman, 372d Infantry, D. C. N. G., the drill began yesterday morning at 9 o'clock, and continued until 6:30 o'clock, when the final awards were made. Judges of the competition were Maj. Clinton Peterson, 369th Infantry, New York; Capt. William Crigler, First Separate Battalion, Maryland National Guard; Lieut. Sylvester Blackwell, 372d Infantry, D. C. N. G., and Lieut. Wade Tomlin, 372d Infantry.

Features of the program were an individual contest, a silent drill by non-commissioned officers, guard mount, and brigade review. Dr. J. Hayden Johnson, member of the Board of Education, inspected and reviewed the cadets, Col. Cootes, of the Third Area Corps, R. O. T. C., accompanying him.

The winning captain received the Teachers' Diamond Medal, to wear until the end of the school year. He also was awarded a gold medal as a permanent possession, as were First Lieut. William McKenny, Second Lieut. James Watts and Second Lieut. Joseph C. Williams. Members of the winning company were awarded blue ribbons. Silver medals and red ribbons were awarded officers and members of the second company, while those of the third company received bronze medals and white ribbons.

These awards were presented by school officials, including Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools; Dr. G. C. Wilkinson, A. K. Savoy, Dr. Howard H. Long, Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, John H. Wilson and by Dr. Ambrose Caliver, of the Office of Education, Department of the Interior, and Judge Armond W. Scott, of the Municipal Court.

The roster of the winning company was as follows: Captain, Wendell Tracy; first lieutenant, William McKenny; second lieutenants, James Watts, Joseph C. Williams; first sergeant, Linwood Reavis; sergeants, William J. Barnes, Jerome Bunche, Earl W. Coleman, Leroy Crummer, Daniel J. Dickerson, Emmett W. Woolfork, jr.

2 Weddings, Annulment Required for Marriage

Kecskemet, Hungary, May 21 (AP). It took two wedding ceremonies, one annulment, and double license fees for Karl Burjan to marry Helen Szedesi today.

After the city clerk read the ceremony before Burjan, Miss Szedesi and Burjan's best man, the official discovered he had married the woman to the best man.

Hasty annulment voided the marriage, a new license was issued, and Burjan and Miss Szedesi became man and wife ten minutes later.

Cooke Is Named To New REA Term

By the Associated Press.

Morris Cooke, of Pennsylvania, was nominated by the President yesterday for a new ten-year term as rural electrification administrator almost mimediately after Mr. Rodsevelt signed a $410,000,000 farm power authorization for the same number of years.

Cooke will administer the extensive program provided in the new law, of which Senator Norris (Republican), Nebraska, was author. His nomination must be confirmed by the Senate.

Under provisions of the law, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation would be authorized to make loans to REA up to $50,000,000 the first year of the program. Appropriations of $40,000,000 a year for the nine years following were authorized.

The act is designed to extend power lines into rural areas with long-term loans to farm groups, municipalities, and private companies.

Illinoisan Says He Killed Wife In Marital Row

Tallmadge Drops Hold-Up Story When Sweetheart Gives Testimony.

By the Associated Press.

Oregon, Ill., May 21.—Ogle County authorities claimed a completed solution tonight of the "ragged hold-up man" slaying of Mrs. Bessie Tallmadge, announcing that her husband, Guy M. Tallmadge, a 58-year-old undertaker's assistant, had confessed the crime.

"He blamed it onto marital trouble," said a statement from the office of Prosecutor S. Donald Crowell, who gave out the word of the confession after Tallmadge had been subjected to an all-day questioning, part of the time with a "lie detector" machine.

"He said his domestic life had become unbearable and there seemed no other way out," the statement, which was made as the reputed confession was being transcribed, said.

Crowell said that Tallmadge, member of a prominent family in this vicinity, had stuck to his original story that he and his wife were halted at a highway intersection near here Tuesday night by a shabby stranger who robbed them and shot her, until confronted with the story of Mrs. Frances Birch, attractive 30-year-old widow.

Then, they said, he admitted the holdup man was a fabrication and that he shot his wife.

Mrs. Birch told authorities, the prosecution said, that Tallmadge had given her a diamond ring and said he would marry her as soon as he obtained a divorce.

Tallmadge was ordered held on a murder warrant, sworn out as his questioning was progressing during the afternoon. He had been in custody since a few hours after he reported the fatal shooting of his 53-year-old wife, without charge.

Events moved rapidly in the investigation today, starting with the returning of Mrs. Birch from Rock Island, where she had gone Monday to visit her parents. She is the mother of a 5-year-old daughter residing with the grandparents.

She related that she had met Tallmadge while working in a drug store at Rockford, Ill., and had had several "dates" with him later, meeting in a Chinese laundry near Tallmadge's place of business. She told authorities that Tallmadge detailed his domestic troubles, said he was "fed up with the way things had been going for the last four years" at home, and planned to settle down with her on a small chicken farm he had purchased recently.

Roland Carr Wins Bank Essay Prize

Roland J. Carr, of the Riggs National Bank, last night was announced as first prize winner in an essay contest conducted by members of the Washington Chapter of the American Institute of Banking and sponsored by the District of Columbia Bankers Association.

Second prize went to Elizabeth Michael Brotherhood, of the McLachlen Banking Corporation, and third prize to William Blum, jr., of the National Savings & Trust Co.

Judges were James C. Dulin, jr., treasurer of the American Security & Trust Co.; Robert H. Lacey, vice president and cashier of the Columbia National Bank, and E. Percival Wilson, secretary of the National Savings & Trust Co.

The winners will be guests of the bankers at the National convention of the American Institute of Banking, at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., May 28 to 31.

Russian Scientist Released on Coast

San Francisco, May 21 (AP).—Jacques Grossman-Gutzman, Soviet agricultural expert, was released from the Angel Island Immigration Station here today upon instructions from Washington, after detention for declining to answer a question concerning the overthrow of the United States Government by force.

He was paroled to the custody of the Russian consul general, Moissei G. Galcovitch.

Edward W. Cahill, immigration commissioner here, said Grossman-Gutzman would be subject to call pending a final ruling of the case by Washington officials.

No bond was required. Grossman-Gutzman is a member of the Soviet Arcos Trade organization, with headquarters in London. He said he wanted to visit this country to study the dairy industry.

Eclipse Expedition Reaches Russia

The National Geographic Society-Georgetown University Eclipse Expedition is now at Kustania, U. S. S. R., setting up 4 tons of astronomical appartus preparatory to observing the 2-minute total eclipse on June 19, the National Geographic Society announced yesterday.

A miniature observatory is being constructed and fully equipped. Although a full month is required to build it, most of the scientific observations will be made within the 127 seconds the sun is in eclipse.

Jordan Named Quartermaster Aid for Army

Roosevelt Sends His Name to Senate; Will Succeed Brig. Gen. Gibson.

Col. Richard H. Jordan, acting chief of the transportation division, office of the quartermaster general, yesterday was nominated by President Roosevelt for the position of assistant quartermaster general, effective August 1, 1936.

President Roosevelt, acting on the recommendation of Secretary of War George H. Dern, forwarded Col. Jordan's name to the Senate for confirmation.

Col. Jordan, who is promoted to the rank of brigadier general, will succeed Brig. Gen. William R. Gibson, who retires from active service July 31. The appointment is for a period of four years.

A native of Haymarket, Va., Col. Jordan entered the military service as a second lieutenant of artillery in 1901. Before the World War most of his service was with the Coast Artillery. During the war, after serving for a time at the port of embarkation at Charleston, S. C., he came to Washington as executive assistant to Gen. Frank T. Hines, in charge of embarkation service.

For his World War service the colonel was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal.

After the armistice he received an assignment with the peace commission in Paris. In 1919 he became military attache to the embassy in Brazil. Later he served with the American forces in China, and a few years ago was in charge of the graves registration service in France. In the latter capacity he had charge of the pilgrimage of the American Gold Star Mothers to the American cemeteries in Europe.

Culbertson On Bridge

"Dear Mr. Culbertson: I am taking the liberty of sending you a hand for analysis.

"My partner and I (90 per cent I) reached an optimistic, vulnerable, four-spade contract, were doubled and went down two tricks for a 500-point penalty. My partner criticized my play of the hand, saying I could have made it against the best possible defense. I have been breaking my head to discover whether this is true, but for the life of me can't see any chance of making ten tricks. From my viewpoint I bid too much and should have been satisfied with a part-score.

"Please look the hand over and let me know whether my partner's statement was well founded. The diamond queen was the opening lead. Yours very truly,

"F. L. B."

This was the hand.
South, dealer.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 spade	2 hearts	Pass	Pass
Double	Pass	2 spades	Pass
4 spades	Double	Pass	Pass
Pass

South overbid slightly in jumping from two to four spades. Three would have been a better bid, considering that he first had opened the bidding and then made a take-out double of two hearts. West's penalty double of the final contract also was on the optimistic side.

Now as to the analysis of the play. Whether the contract could have been made or not depended on how good a defensive player West was. One thing is certain. The declarer could have made matters "tough" for Mr. West.

The opening lead of the diamond queen should have been taken in either hand (it didn't matter) and two rounds of trumps led. Then, on the hope that West was out of trumps, the other high diamond should have been cashed and the third round led. West would have to win and his next play would decide the fate of the contract. If he should lead hearts the declarer would be "home."

On the ace and queen of hearts leads declarer would win the latter and run off every trump, so that all hands would be reduced to three cards. Declarer's would be the ten of hearts and the ace-queen of clubs. Wets would have to guard the club king (a card which his bid and penalty double marked him as holding) and would, therefore, be able to hold only the jack of hearts. Declarer then would throw him on lead with the heart and force him to lead from his club king up to the major tenace.

However, if West, when thrown on lead with the third round of diamonds, should exit in clubs instead of hearts, the contract could not be made. Again declarer could come down to three cards, but his would be the K 10 7 of hearts, while West should hold the A Q of hearts and the king of clubs. Thus a heart

Quadruplets Leave Mother Speechless

Before she left St. Mary's Hospital for her home in Little Ferry, she was taken to the children's special nursery just as Frank, second born of the four, was having his minute ration of milk.

Mrs. Kasper put one hand to her forehead and stared, saying not a word until attendants led her away.

Then she turned to Dr. Frank F. Jani, who delivered the quadruplets 12 days ago, and said:

"Thank you ever so much, doctor. I'm sorry for all the trouble I caused you."

The quadruplets, all pronounced in good physical conditoin, scaled today as follows:

Frank, 3 pounds 6½ ounces; Ferdinald, 3 pounds 12 ounces; Felix, 3 pounds 1½ ounces; Frances, 3 pounds 11½ ounces. This was a half-ounce gain for each of the boys and a quarter-ounce gain for the girl since yesterday.

Virginia Projects Receive Approval

The Works Progress Administration said yesterday that 1,846 projects in Virginia, estimated to cost $10,080,626, have been given Federal and State approval under WPA, according to the Associated Press.

"Some of these are under way," WPA officials said, "and others are waiting on the approved list."

Whether those that haven't been reached by June 30 will have a chance depends upon Congressional action on the pending deficiency bill, WPA authorities said. They explained that Administrator Harry Hopkins is withholding all plans for the next fiscal year until he learns how much he actually will receive from the $1,500,000,000 appropriation sought.

John Galleher, Virginia director for the National Emergency Council, reported here recently that he was prepared "to reduce the relief rolls in the State several thousand before June 15."

Works Progress officials said they had not been notified as to Virginia's plans for distributing the $2,000,000 State relief appropriation authorized by the 1936 General Assembly. They expected the State relief program to be "entirely separate from the Federal program, as it is in several other States."

25 Drowned by Floods In Puerto Rico Interior

San Juan, Puerto Rico, May 21 (AP). Twenty-five persons drowned and much damage was caused in floods today resulting from heavy rains after a record drought.

The heaviest losses of property were at the towns of Las Piedras, San Lorenzo and Humacao, agents of the federal emergency relief administration reported.

The district affected is the drainage area for Luquillo Forest Reserve in the island's interior, where there have been continuous heavy rains for more than a week. Relief officials rushed food and clothing to the stricken towns.

REA Unit Pledges Service in 60 Days

Richmond, Va., May 21 (AP).—The State corporation commission announced today that Farmers Rural Utilities, Inc., electrification co-operative, had agreed to furnish power service to the Doswell community in Hanover County, within 60 days.

A petition of Doswell citizens asking that the matter be reopened, scheduled for a hearing this afternoon, was dropped, Commissioner H. Lester Hooker said. He added that the commission would prepare an order embodying the 60-day provision for the completion of the 55-mile line to serve the Doswell section.

The agreement apparently ends an extended conflict betwen the commission and the Rural Electrification Administration, Federal agency, which is backing the FRU in its Virginia program.

FirmGets Right To Build Plant At Alexandria

Council, at Special Session, Approves Permit of Chemical Concern.

The Alexandria City Council last night granted permission to American Chlorophyll, Inc., to construct a plant on the property of the old Virginia-Carolina Chemical Co.

The permit was granted subject to certain provisions for fire protection recommended by the Virginia Insurance Rating Bureau and the chief of the Alexandria Fire Department. Some of the provisions were amended by the president of the company, R. H. Van Sant.

The council instructed City Manager E. C. Dunn to confer with officials of the Alexandria Water Co. to ask for the extension of a 6-inch water main to provide fire protection in the vicinity of the plant.

It was understood last night that construction work on the new plant would start immediately. The Washington plant of American Chlorophyll, Inc., recently was destroyed by fire

Last night's meeting was a special one called to consider the company's application for a building permit. However, a resolution authorizing an "extension of credit" of $50,000 to defray general city expenses in anticipation of tax collections for the current year was placed on its first reading. Action was withheld until next meeting.

Nazi Jobless Produce Arms, Churchill Warns

London, May 21 (AP).—Winston Churchill, renewing his oft-voiced warnings concerning German rearmament, said tonight the Nazis have put 4,000,000 unemployed to work, virtually all upon munitions or in the nation's fighting forces.

"The British public has no idea of the efficiency of German war production," he told the House of Commons, "of its enormous skill, nor with what marvelous smoothness it could be made to pour out an almost limitless flow of the most horrible weapons of human destruction ever placed in the unworthy hands of men."

In response to a question as to whether his figures were "mere guesswork and part of a game" to oust Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin, Churchill, who formerly held many cabinet posts, said his information was reliable.

Violation of Treaties Deplored by LeBrun

Colmar, France, May 21 (AP).—President Albert LeBrun of France said today he deplored disregard of international treaties.

In a speech inaugurating the national wine festival, the chief executive said: "Nothing is stable in the international situation.

"We see principles—notably those regarding fidelity to international engagements—collapsing. Various great peoples seek to combat their internal discontent by turning their backs on liberty and establishing regimes of force."

He asked for "optimism and confidence" to bring about full unity in France.

Senate Votes $25,000 to Settle Historic Prevost Nitrate Claim

Concurs in House Compromise; Bill Goes to White House; Case in International Litigation for Decades.

The Senate yesterday afternoon concurred in the House's decision of last Tuesday to satisfy a personal claim against the United States by granting a compromise appropriation of $25,000 for the relief of the late Teresa Prevost, who died here two months ago.

The bill will go to the White House for the President's signature probably today or tomorrow. By its terms the two daughters of Mrs. Prevost, Mrs. Rosita Raynsford and Mrs. Teresa Miller, of London, are the beneficiaries.

Both women, according to G. Mallet Prevost, attorney for the late claimant, are now in poor circumstances after having been reared in luxury.

The claim originates in the celebrated Alsop case, whose history goes back to 1867. Mrs. Prevost's case was based on a loan of $25,000 made in that year by her husband's father, Stanhope Prevost, to George C. Hobson, his partner in the New York firm of Alsop Co., which held a concession in the rich nitrate region on the South American coast, then a part of Bolivia.

Well Known Here.

The claimant, a daughter of the Count of Olmos, former president of Peru, moved to Washington to continue her fight for the nitrate fortune. During her long residence here she was known as a colorful figure, prominent in diplomatic and social circles.

During the dictatorship of President Augusto B. Leguia of Peru Mrs. Prevost was confidential agent for the government in this country. She was married to Charles A. Prevost, who died more than 20 years ago.

Mrs. Prevost died last March 11, after Senator Shipstead, of Minnesota, had introduced a bill in the Senate which asked for $100,000 to settle the claim.

The bill passed the Senate, but when it reached the House a compromise settlement of $25,000 was effected.

Before Mrs. Prevost carried her case to the United States she fought the Chilean government, against whom the Alsop claim was charged. She spent 30 years altogether in her struggle to acquire her husband's share of the award, which finally was made by King Edward VII of England.

Chile assumed the Alsop claim soon after the war of 1879, in which Bolivia, seat of the rich nitrate region, fought on the side of Peru against Chile. The victorious Chile annexed the nitrate fields, then valued at approximately $1,000,000.

Long international litigation resulted in the United States pressing the claim against Chile. King Edward VII's decision in favor of the United States resulted in a final settlement of $900,000.

Chile paid the money, which was entrusted to Secretary of State Knox, who, through Solicitor Clark, allocated the total among the various claimants, including the Hobson heirs and the Prevosts.

He failed, however, to include in the share of the latter the $25,000 loan, with accrued interest, which the original Hobson had ordered paid the Stanhope Prevost estate with any funds due him through settlement of the Alsop claim. The debt at present totals $138,750.

In her brief Mrs. Prevost said she exhausted every effort to gain a State Department order to the Hobson estate to pay her, as heir, the Hobson debt. She then appealed to Congress.

Tariff Raised Against Japan

and in 1935 and in 1936 to date, the commission found, that country was the principal source of imported cotton textiles.

During 1935 62,000,000 square yards of cotton goods were imported, of which 36,400,000 came from Japan. Imports from Japan for the first quarter of 1936 were 21,000,000 square yards. Of the total Japanese imports in 1935, a total of 33,000,000 square yards, or about 90 per cent, are covered by the tariff increase.

Total imports of cotton goods, however, were less than 1 per cent of the total American production of 7,300,000,000 square yards in 1933 and imports from Japan were about one-half of 1 per cent. The commission pointed out that since 1921 there has been a noticeable shift in production from the New England to the Southern States.

"Although the United States is the world's largest producer of cotton cloth, Japan in recent years has been the largest exporter," the commission report said. "The United States regularly exports more cotton cloth than it imports, but in recent years its export trade has fallen sharply, the decline due in large part to the competition of cheaper fabrics from Japan. Japan's exports of cotton cloth to the United States constituted in 1935 less than 2 per cent of its total exports of such cloth."

Seeks Agreement.

The United States has been seeking for some time to reach a gentleman's agrement with Japan to restrict exports of cotton textiles to this country to a moderate level.

The Federal Trade Commission's rport on the cotton textile industry showed that the 302 companies, with a total investment of $738,400,000, showed an average loss in the first half of 1935 of 1.63 per cent, compared with a loss of .88 per cent in the last half of 1934.

The President's order followed the Supreme Court decision outlawing the Guffey coal act, which is believed to have made impossible proposed legislation to create a "little NRA" for the textile industry.

The order also came in the midst of observance of foreign trade week.

Saito Cries "Unfair."

In connection with observance of the week, Japanese Ambassador Saito, talking before the Academy of World Economics, denied that Japan's success in the textile business is due "to cheap labor or government subsidies." He said such charges are "unfair." He attributed his country's success to "the art, the enterprise and the industry of our people."

Ambassador Saito said that trade between the United States is largely complimentary and not competitive. He quoted tariff commission figures to show that only 8.3 per cent of Japanese goods imported into this country comes in direct competition with American-made goods.

"International trade can not operate only one way," he said. "If a nation will sell, it must also buy."

Mrs. Field Accepts Gift, Saves Estate

Hartford Junction, Wis., May 21 (AP).—Financial aid offered by her late husband's fraternity was accepted today by Mrs. Eugene Field, widow of the poet, enabling her to save her beautiful resort estate threatened by a mortgage foreclosure.

Frank Hebert, the 80-year-old widow's attorney, said Harry E. Weese, of Chicago, chairman of the endowment fund of the Ne wYork alumni chapter of Phi Delta Theta, advised him upon Mrs. Field's acceptance that the money would be ready tomorrow.

The fraternity's offer to advance the $3,000 needed to satisfy a judgment against the 155-acre estate on Crystal Lake, near here, was telegraphed yesterday from Philadelphia by J. R. Mitchell, alumni commissioner of the order, when Mrs. Field's plight became known.

A hearing on confirmation of the foreclosure sale had been scheduled for tomorrow.

State Soon to Rest In Bathtub Killing

New York, May 21 (AP).—With a 13-inch piece of string as its most important evidence the State tonight prepared to close its case against a 24-year-old apprentice upholsterer charged with the murder of Mrs. Nancy Evans Titterton, author and literary critic.

District Attorney William C. Dodge said he would call two twine experts tomorrow who figuratively would tie John Fiorenza directly to the crime with the string.

The cord was found under Mrs. Titterton's body after she had been assaulted and strangled to death in her Beekman place apartment on April 10. Police said they traced it to Fiorenza.

The defendant listened impassively today as two homicide squad detectives testified that he told them he attacked the woman and left her body in the bath tub.

Factory Is Closed In Labor Dispute

Syracuse, N. Y., May 21 (AP).—The Remington Rand Co., manufacturers of typewriters and office equipment, closed its Syracuse plant today and announced that it planned to move the factory to Ilion.

Fifteen hundred factory workers left their jobs after a notice was posted that the plant would be closed "for the usual two weeks summer vacation."

Clair Bellows, president of the local union of the International Association of Machinists, said "we consider this in the nature of a lockout, but we don't say it actually is one. Neither do we say it is a strike."

Later, company officials issued a statement saying that the Syracuse plant was to be moved to Ilion and consolidated with the Ilion plant.

Town Talk.

New York, May 21.

There's one advantage to the odd hours a columnist keeps . . . I've learned, for instance, that the pigeons which sit on the ledges of New York buildings report daily at 5:45 a. m. standard time . . . Where they spend the nite, this correspondent knoweth not, but at 5:45, they come dashing through the air and take up their ledge posts . . . At that hour, they look better than a columnist who is just completing his route . . . George M. Cohan was so impressed by the pigeons of New York that he penned a play about them . . . Paul Whiteman had an unusual experience . . . Whiteman has just launched a Baby Talent campaign on radio, for Lennen and Mitchell . . . The day the contest started, a baby pigeon was born on the ledge running around the outside of the office . . . The staff has been feeding it crumbs and water ever since, but the mother pigeon still is suspicious of the kind attentions . . .

Magnificent Masquerade: Thrilling to realize the heights of courage which humans can scale . . . Under the spur of desperate crises . . . They operated on Producer Anatole Friedland several nights ago at Mt. Sinai Hospital, an infection of the leg demanding drastic action . . . The surgeons told Rolli (Mrs. Friedland) about it first . . . She took it like a trouper . . . Then they told Anatole . . . "Don't tell Rolli," was his only thought . . . The sight of these two, very much in love, very fearful, but very gallant, in the corridor of the hospital, was so thrilling that it brought tears to the eyes . . . Anatole, wheeled out on his stretcher, was telling jokes to her to make her laugh . . . The wife, stiff and straight as a West Pointer, walked down the last mile of hospital stone, holding his hand and pretending a gaiety that belied the cold terror in her heart . . . Certainly, he's getting better . . . You can't muffle the beat of a heart as game as that.

Mrs. W. B. Armstrong is one of the unusual habitues of the town . . . She used to frequent the hode-ho Onyx Club nightly with two ducks on a leash, the ducks apparently liking "jam" music . . . Recently, she went west to Arizona . . . She called last night from Tucson, and held the phone while the Onyx Club band played "I'se a Muggin'" and "In My Solitude" . . . Duncan MacMartin used to call Leon and Eddie's from Palm Beach, and hold the phone while Eddie Davis warbled three songs nightly to him . . . Victor Emmanuel improved on this . . . He staged an affair in England, and brought over an entire American show, for ONE nite Al Smith's pal, Kenny, was so dissatisfied with European barbers that he cabled back to Broadway on one occasion and had his barber race across on the Ile de France.

• • • •

Ambassador Hotel reports that A. L. Milks, of the Dairymen's League, Little Valley, N. Y., is a recent arrival . . . Weehawken, N. J., offers something new in night clubs, Prison Inn . . . The ads read: "See an orchestra of jailbirds, prison guards as waiters, a real electric chair, the padded cell. Wine and dine in real prison cells. Our floor show exposes prison life" . . . The place has been making money, and now that it has been commented upon, the idea will be lifted by some enterprising Broadway burglar and transplanted here.

All right, you sun-worshipers, here's the suntan recipe and I hope it does the trick . . . Mix equal parts of witch hazel, olive oil and vinegar . . . Shake well and apply . . . Then place a thin layer of vaseline over the exposed parts . . . Caution—This is not a sunburn preventive.

Al Tiffany asserts that Dempsey moved close to Refereee Dave Barry and said: "Don't look now—but Tunney is on the floor" . . . Night club scene: Lee Mortimer saying good night to a girl, who insists she must leave . . . The girl is Patricia Whitney, his ex-wife . . . Jackie Dunn, the ice-skater, has ruptured the Sonja Heine-Jeff Dickson romance, confirming an observation made here some time back.

Screen Star Is Bitter Against Fallacy of Diet

Sleep Governs Weight in View of Mary Boland; Hollywood Notes.

By the United Press.

Hollywood, May 21.—Mary Boland, 56 and fair but by no means fat, says Hollywood "reducing diets" should be given back to horses, the original owners.

"You don't have to eat hay to keep slim," she sneered. "If you are fat it's just because you sleep too much. Show me a fat man or woman and I'll show you a lazy one.

"I never diet, and look at me." Boland regarded her 5 feet 4 inches, and 125 pounds complacently in a prop mirror. "My father gave me a rule for keeping slim when I was a youngster, and I've never needed another.

"'Six hours sleep is enough for a man,'" he used to say. "'Seven hours is enough for a woman, and eight or nine for a fat fool.'

"I find seven hours about right for me. If I sleep long I gain weight, but to lose it I have only to sleep an hour or two less each night."

Anyhow, It's Good Excuse.

The Boland substitution of midnight oil for the vegetable plate is not a new idea in Hollywood, but she is the first actress to come out flat-footed in favor of it.

Some time ago Marlene Dietrich was quoted as saying her stayout habits were an aid to slenderness.

Immediately Carole Lombard, Ida Lupino, Madeleine Carroll, Joan Crawford and Jean Harlow adopted the idea, and announced great results.

Dietrich, however, spoiled everything by denying the belief that limited slumber had anything to do with the success of her famous figure.

Intelligent By Vote!

Ten actresses ranging from Gracie Allen to Mary Pickford were elected the "most intelligent in Hollywood" by vote of psychology students of Dr. John W. Todd at the University of Southern California.

Others tabbed "bright" by the sophomores were Norma Shearer, Ann Harding, Irene Dunne, Claudette Colbert, Grace Moore, Bette Davis, Ruth Chatterton and Jeanette Macdonald.

Without reflection on the lucky girls, popula. vote seems an odd way of determining intelligence, rather like the War Department's dubbing brand-new shavetails "officers and gentlemen," by act of Congress.

Speaking of the Orient.

Warner (Charlie Chan) Oland has a new "mandarin mustache comb," the gift of Gen. Wu Te Chen, Mayor of Greater Shanghai, whom he visited a few weeks ago. The comb is silver, and hangs about the neck on a chain, handy for use after meals.

Speaking of the Orient, the "China Clipper" company, including Pat O'Brien, Humphrey Bogart, Beverly Roberts, Ross Alexander and Henry B. Walthall, will journey to San Francisco Friday to shoot scenes at Alameda Base Port and give the natives a thrill. Movie "fliers," however, will make the trip by train.

Cutting Room Scraps.

Odette Myrtil, former Folies Bergere (Paris) and Broadway stage actress, signed by Samuel Goldwyn to play "Madame De Penable," in "Dodsworth."

Dorothy Dare lost her 15-year-old lucky collar button on a corner of the boulevard and in no time at all had a large crowd and a traffic cop crawling around looking for it.

Arts Club

"HOTEL UNIVERSE." The Dramatic Committee of the Arts Club of Washington presents the King-Smith Players in the one-act drama of Philip Barry, directed by William Whitehead and Forney Reese. At the Arts Club, May 20. Reviewed (repeat performance) by Richard Q. Jones.

For the first time within easy recollection, the Arts Club of Washington, in presenting last evening the first program of the summer season in its charming garden, went outside its own ranks for a dramatic production. Outstanding in their production of Philip Barry's "Hotel Universe" when they presented it on April 29, in their own theater, the King-Smith Players were accorded the singular honor of re-presenting this evening-long one-act drama before the Arts Club, under the sponsorship of the dramatic committee.

Presented with the same smoothness which characterized the earlier production, the Players again scored a rousing success in this unusually contrived drama. But one change was noted last evening, Doris Mead played the part of Lilly Malone, the actress, earlier played by Barbara Fulton.

Vernon Knight, Patricia Smith, Helen Fish, Carl Christianson, Winifred Dewey, Raymond Casford, George Farrington and Forney Reese repeated their former success. Mr. Reese had charge of the late rehearsals conducted for this particular performance, but the master handling by William Whitehead, the original director, was still manifest.

Iota Tau Tau Xi Installs Slate Tomorrow Night

New officers of Iota Tau Tau Xi Chapter of National University will be installed at a dinner meeting tomorrow night in the Mayflower Hotel.

Representative Robert Ramspeck, of Georgia, will speak, and Judge Nathan Cayton, Col. Julius Peyser and Mrs. Charles F. Carusi, sponsors of the chapter, will be guests of honor.

Officers to be inducted are Edith Turner, dean; Esther Gerber, vice dean; Mildred Coray, secretary; Sophie Lyman, treasurer, and Theresa Gluck, historian.

About The Showshops

THAT eminent innovator among the suburban motion picture tycoons, Mr. Sidney B. Lust, has laid plans for an experiment that will be watched with interest. Conscious of the prestige that has attached to the downtown, road-show engagements of such film productions as "A Midsummer Night's Dream," "The Crusades," "The Great Ziegfeld" and such-like celluloids that have drawn discriminating crowds to the National Theater on a reserved-seat, top-price-scale basis, Mr. Lust sees no reason why the same psychological reactions should not obtain in his slightly more remote temples of the titillating tintypes, which still cater to perceptive and solvent clienteles.

BELL.

With this thought in mind, he will present "A Midsummer Night's Dream" in his Milo Theater, Rockville, Md., and Cameo Theater, in Mount Rainier, on next Thursday and Friday, May 28 and 29, on a two-a-day plan at $1.10 top, all seats reserved. The same policy will prevail at the Arcade Theater in Hyattsville, Md., on Thursday and Friday, June 4 and 5.

If these engagements prove as successful as is anticipated, an effort will be made to secure "The Great Ziegfeld" for similar presentation. That they will be, seems to be forecast by the fact that reservations are already being made in considerable numbers for the best and highest priced seats. The admission charges, by the way, begin at 50 cents, with matinee reductions for children.

For the benefit of those who would like to see what Jeeter Lester looks like offstage, in the genial person of Henry Hull, I am informed by phone that the star of "Tobacco Road," now playing at the National Theater, will be in the book department of Woodward & Lothrop's Department Store this afternoon at 3, to autograph copies of Erskine Caldwell's novel of "Tobacco Road," from which the play was adapted. It was Mr. Hull, of course, who created the role of Jeeter Lester in the original New York company. He will continue through next week at the National, making three that the grim drama will have played here since last April 5.

Smashing the last of the house records, so Manager Jack Thoman tells me, Sam Cummins' Czechoslovakian prize-winning film of "Ecstasy" positively will continue a fifth consecutive week at the Belasco Theater. When the picture began its twenty-sixth day of continuous showing, it cracked the last previous record the Lafayette Square house could boast under its present policy—the 25-day run of "The Unfinished Symphony." Nice going.

• • • •

Rex Ingram, noted Negro character actor, who appears as "De Lawd" in the Warner Brothers' picturization of "The Green Pastures," will be a Washington visitor next Thursday. Ingram has been "lost" for many days. Having completed the film version of the famous Marc Connelly Pulitzer Prize winner, under the supervision of the author, he departed the West Coast by motor car and was not thereafter heard of, or from, on the Warner lot at Burbank. So here he comes, right out of the "Lost and Found" column.

Dots and Dashes.

"Rehearsal: Friday, at 7 a. m." . . . That's the notice for the Radio City Music Hall Glee Club posted on the callboard backstage at the Earle . . . Ordinarily, it would be a couple of hours or so later—but that is when the first showing of the feature picture is at 11 a. m., or later . . . Today, "The King Steps Out" will be projected first at 10—and five times thereafter, on an extended schedule that also will prevail tomorrow . . . The first presentation of the stage bill will be at 11:35 a. m. . . . Gus Eysell, manager of the Radio City Music Hall, largest of the RKO-Radio houses; Tom McCaskey, manager of the company's smallest theater, in Williamsburg, Va., and Jim Brennan, division manager of the Washington territory, were among yesterday's visitors in the Capital, making their headquarters in the office of Manager Hardie Meakin of RKO-Keith's . . . Master Meakin is feeling very gay these days over the flying start to which "Show Boat" got off Wednesday night . . . Since that item has popped up again, it may be said that yesterday morning's review should have remarked something of the realism of the New Year's Eve party at one of Chicago's gay night spots, 'way back when . . . There is a nostalgic charm in Irene Dunne's singing of Charles K. Harris' hit of World's Columbian Exposition Year, "After the Ball," and that old, cake-walk number, "Good-By, My Lady Love" . . . That must have been back about 1893—heaven forbid!

• • • •

More of the Same.

Gracie Allen has been chosen the "brainiest actress in Hollywood" by psychology students at the University of Southern California . . . Can you imagine! . . . Tonight at 8:30, the Little Theater of Alexandria, Va., will present two one-act plays on the stage of Lyceum Hall . . . "Stop Thief," Carlyle Moore's three-act farce, will be presented in Roosevelt Auditorium on Tuesday and Wednesday nights, June 2 and 3, by the Washington Players, under the direction of John M. Kline, jr. . . . Rebecca Tarwater heads the cast of G. Martinez Sierra's three-act comedy, "The Romantic Young Lady," at the King-Smith Studio Playhouse tonight and tomorrow night . . . Robert Bell directed . . . Francis Lederer has the largest office staff of any star in Hollywood . . . John Boles would need one, too, if he were going to stay here one more day . . . Just to handle those autographs!

Show by Marionettes To Be Given at Church

The Young People's Society of St. Margaret's Episcopal Church is sponsoring the presentation of Francis Shinn's marionettes in "The Legend of the Moor's Legacy," based on Washington Irving's story, at the church, Connecticut avenue and Bancroft place, tomorrow. There will be a performance at 3 p. m. and another at 8.

A public address system will make it possible for the entire audience to see and hear. The marionettes are 24 inches tall, and, in this particular play, 180 strings are required to manipulate them. Sets have been executed by Jawne Allen, of the National School of Fine and Applied Arts.

To Visit Woodlawn.

Through the courtesy of the Assistant Secretary of War and Mrs. Harry H. Woodring, Woodlawn, the historic home of Nellie Custis, will be opened at 3 p. m. tomorrow for the historic pilgrimage being sponsored by Lincoln Guild of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church.

Hollywood, May 21.

Margaret Sullavan dining with William Wyler and both appearing to be enjoying each other as much as they do the food . . .

SULLAVAN.

Hollywood is supposed to set the styles, but the visitor walking along the boulevard is always disappointed, for the well dressed actresses, models of the fashion, wear slacks and sport clothes . . . The Dietrichs and the Lombards are tired of posing, and this is the letdown . . . Al Jolson meets George Jessel and says: "George, I'm going to tell you a great gag you can use." Jessel answers: "Don't tell me the gag. Tell me a theater where I can play it."

• • • •

Josef Von Sternberg, when directing, lights the scene with the standins and then has the stars stand in, regardless . . . Director Archie Mayo always shouts, "Twist them," when he wants the cameraman to start turning the camera . . . Notice the advertisements for "Under Two Flags," and you'll see what a 5 per cent difference in type is like . . . Both Ronald Colman and Claudette Colbert must receive star billing, but Colman's contract calls for 100 per cent rating, and Miss Colbert for 95 per cent.

• • • •

A studio is a great big toy. Just have access to the film library and the projection room and you can have plenty of fun . . . You can look at a screen test of, say, Katharine Hepburn, and look at the scene she did when she was trying to get a job in the movies . . . Or you can call for one of the first Joan Crawford pictures, and try to recognize her . . . Or, if you know the right person, you can look at some reels of "blow ups" and see your favorite stars when they utter lines that shock you . . . And you can do tricks on the projection room screen . . . For example, I ran merely the sound track of the scene in "The Milky Way," in which Harold Lloyd is teaching Marjorie Gateson how to box . . . The dialogue without the picture slide would never pass any censor.

• • • •

Nat Pendleton has a valet and often, while reading a newspaper, Pendleton will finish a story, hand the paper to the valet and say: "Turn to the sporting page for me, please" . . . The theme music of "The March of Time" radio program was written by Harold Arlen. It was originally a song in the eighth edition of "Vanities" . . . It was called "The March of Time" and the lyric is by Ted Koehler . . . At a recent party, a bore, getting ready to leave, said: "I'll bet you miss me when I leave" . . . And Virginia Faulkner answered: "We even miss you while you're here."

• • • •

Cary Grant's name was Archie Leach, and when the studio made him change it, he gave his name to his dog . . . The only photograph on display in Gary Cooper's dressing room is one from an early picture in which he played a bit . . . A powerful and excellent flicker was previewed last night. It is called "Fury," and it is strong propaganda against lynching and mob rule . . . In fact, "Mob Rule" was the original title, but the censors wouldn't permit it to be used . . . It is from a story by Norman Krasna, and was produced by Metro—the studio which canceled the making of "It Can't Happen Here," because of propaganda.

• • • •

Herbert Marshall provides the laughs for the troupe on the set of "Girl's Dormitory." The other day he appeared with an article from a London newspaper, in which he was severely panned for being a bad actor. He gave the paper to every one to read . . . It is no longer novel to obtain a Garbo interview . . . She has been interviewed on a boat and getting off a train among other places . . . In fact, Garbo may get so that an interviewer will have to say: "Please Greta, don't bother me. I want to be alone. Now, Greta, go away. I don't want to know what you think of your new dressing room or what you think of Hollywood. I can't interview you, Greta. Now, why don't you be a nice girl? I knew you when you wouldn't give an interview. You hated them. You wouldn't believe that would you, but it's true."

Navy Department Buys 40 Planes and Parts

Forty observation airplanes and spare parts were contracted for yesterday by the Navy Department with the Curtiss Aeroplane & Motor Co., of Buffalo, N. Y., for a total cost of $759,630.

The planes are similar to the 135 planes ordered from the company in March, 1935, delivery of which was completed recently.

Looking for the Silver Lining!

Francis Lederer seems still to be a bit perplexed, but Ida Lupino evidently is beginning to discern a way out of the romantic difficulties they encounter in "One Rainy Afternoon," opening today as principal screen feature of the new week's bill at Loew's Fox Theater. This is the first joint production of Mary Pickford and Jesse L. Lasky for release through United Artists. It is a gay Parisian farce, enlisting the services of a distinguished comedy cast.

Writer Will Speak.

Albert W. Atwood, editorial and staff writer for Saturday Evening Post, will speak before the Washington Round Table at the weekly luncheon at the University Club today at 12:30 p. m. His subject will be "Radio and Freedom of Speech."

Shoreham Fans Hail Rilla Dau On Debut Here

By Chanticleer.

Rilla Dau made her debut to an American audience last night at the Shoreham, with diplomats and Senators and big-titled Government folks in her audience. The lovely soprano sings in French, German, Spanish and Italian as well as English (she was a favorite for some time with London and Paris audiences) and sings with her own pianist and violinist. Showmanship: she makes an effective entrance in a Venetian sedan 300 years old, appears in Venetian costume.

Maestro Barnee, of the Shoreham, takes a week's vacation—but like the postman, he'll work. He's going to Chicago to be a guest of Ted Weems and pick up some new tunes, arrangements and ideas.

Daugherty to Tour, Too.

Emory Daugherty, band leader at La Paree, also leaves the local precincts before long. Daugherty has a summer tour for the band signed up which includes points as far north as Maine and several Virginia appearances. The radio webs help do the job of booking the band through establishment of the name.

Cocoanut Grove opening, set for May 6, begins to take on important aspects with brass hats and big-wigs from various walks of life being invited for the event. You won't find the name in the 'phone book, of course, so your reservation for the premiere can be made through Jerry, ME. 0770.

Arthur Godfrey and Gordon Hittenmark, who make it a point to get around and see what is going on, have visited Matt Windsor's new Russian Roof this week and pronounce it not wanting. Matt has established a brand-new band which he calls the Swingcopators.

Coquettes at Lotus.

Supper shows at the Lotus, headed by Earl Lindsay's eight Coquettes and featuring the team of Kaplan and Stanley in the field of comedy, and the ultra dance team of Chasmire and Carmen. Two shows nightly, with dancing.

Dick Butler says the Hamilton's air-conditioning plant is pushed up a notch or two when Moe Baer starts playing. Baer is known as the "meticulous maestro" and the Rainbow Room's crowds are very partial to his music.

Ambassador's Hi-Hat Room patrons were treated to a little impromptu vocalizing by a beauty winner from York, Pa., who proved looks and talent do go together. George Ku and his Paradise Islanders specialize on the song hit "You" this week.

Flute Trio in Band.

Jimmy Harris, who plays for the dancers at Maryland Club Gardens, was surprized not long ago when one of his sax players appeared with a flute under his arm—and what's more, played it very well. Then came another flutist a night or two later—and finally a third. Now he has probably the only band in town with a flute trio.

Another of the Ellington family is taking to the show business—it's Judy, you know, at the Lotus. The new Ellington is Jean, singing at the Diplomat, on Ninth street, and assisted by Vic Arnold, who also sings, and Belda Malbette, pianist.

With Harris

HONEY DAVIS
has joined the Jimmy Harris band at Maryland Club Gardens and is heard nightly in her own particular style of vocalizing.

'Murder' Facts In Estate Case Asked of Court

Executors Fight Claim of Sister of Theater Owner Who Disappeared.

By the Associated Press.

Toronto, May 21.—Attorneys for executors of the estate of Ambrose J. Small, wealthy theater owner who disappeared 17 year ago, petitioned for further details tonight on a reported statement his wife "aided and abetted" in his "alleged murder."

Their request was in reply to a statement of claim filed against the estate by Small's sister, Mary Florence Small, who seeks to prevent the executors from distributing the $2,000,000 left by the theater magnate.

Miss Small's claim to the estate, filed by her attorney, has not been made public.

Yesterday two men testified concerning their knowledge of an angry threat to throw Small into a furnace during a drinking party in a theater basement and an alleged $20,000 plot to murder him.

The request from T. N. Phelan, lawyer for the executors, asked Justice G. F. McFarland to issue an order requiring Miss Small to furnish particulars on these and certain sections of her statement of claim.

"Of the admission of Theresa Small (Small's widow), whether the same was oral or written, and the date and circumstances.

"Of the time and circumstances that the confession was received at the home of Mary Florence Small (the sister).

"Of the manner in which it is alleged that the said Theresa Small aided and abetted in the alleged murder of Ambrose J. Small."

"Of the fraud, perjury and other acts contrary to law on the part of the said Theresa Small."

Justice McFarland postponed hearings on the two motions until May 28.

Rotary Unit Elects.

Lynchburg, Va., May 21 (AP).—W. C. Luke, Covington paper mill executive, was elected governor of the fifty-sixth Rotary district at a business session of the convention here today. He will succeed William Mc. Paxton, of Norfolk.

Anne Lyddane in Tryst Trial Dress

Portrait from life by Herndon Davis, Staff Artist.

Anne Lyddane as she appeared at her trial yesterday in a yellow dress and told of intimacies with Arthur Beall, Darnestown garage man. She denied, however, that she conspired to slay her husband, "Slom" Lyddane, to remove him as a barrier to her love.

Mrs. Lyddane Admits Affair, Charges Plot

Baker, an expert on questioned documents, who was called by the defense to refute previous testimony concerning the much-mentioned unsigned "Googy note."

This note, found on John (Googy) Carnell, former Rockville bartender, the State's star witness, demanded consummation of the "deal" or return of the money.

Ira Gullickson, expert of the Washington Police Department, testified previously that he had "no doubt" the note was written on a typewriter which Mrs. Lyddane used while working in a Rockville bank. The typewriter is a part of the evidence in the trial.

Baker took the stand today to deny that the note was written on that typewriter. Like Gullickson, he displayed photographic enlargements to prove his point.

Husband to Testify.

He will be on the stand again when the trial is resumed tomorrow morning. Lyddane is expected to follow him.

Mrs. Lyddane was the first witness this morning. She wore the same yellow dress and white hat she had on the day the trial opened.

Questioned by Prescott, Mrs. Lyddane said she was 30 and had been married to "Slom" for 11 years.

She said that Arthur Beall first became attentive to her in 1930. She said she first went out with him in the summer of 1932.

"He asked me to go several places before I did go out with him," she said. "Did there come a time when you yielded to him?" Prescott asked her.

"Yes, Mr. Prescott."

"Did you ever approach Carnell and say you wanted your husband bumped off?"

Used Googy's Room.

"No, Mr. Prescott, I did not."

"Did you and Arthur Beall use Carnell's room?"

"Yes, Mr. Prescott."

She said she gave Carnell small sums of money.

"Did you have any information about Carnell's past?"

"No, Mr. Prescott."

Mrs. Lyddane told about receiving a telephone call while she was working in the bank at Rockville. The man calling, she said, demanded $200.

She said she raised the money, met the man later in the day and paid him the $200 to keep him quiet.

"The man said he was going to tell certain things about Arthur and myself." Mrs. Lyddane testified. "I had been warned by the bank and I didn't want to lose my job."

The prosecution had charged that the man Mrs. Lyddane gave the money to was Harry Thomas, who was indicted with her in the murder conspiracy.

"Was Harry Thomas the man you gave the $200?" Prescott asked Mrs. Lyddane.

Asked Hush Money.

"No, Mr. Prescott, it wasn't."

Mrs. Lyddane said that on March 1, 1935, Carnell demanded $1,000.

"He said he was going to disclose things about Arthur and myself," she said, "and he demanded what he called hush money."

She told how she was arrested on April 1, 1935, while she was in the bank.

She described how she and Prosecutor Pugh on that occasion addressed each other as "Anne" and "Jim," and she quoted Pugh as saying about "Googy" Carnell:

"Well, Anne, that's the way with gangsters."

Asked to explain why she had $765 in her purse when arrested, Mrs. Lyddane said she planned either to buy a baby bond or a new automobile for "Slom."

Occasionally Mrs. Lyddane would say more than she was expected to in answering questions. Annoyed, Judge Frank Wagaman at one point said to Prescott:

"Can't you control the witness at all?"

Prosecutor Pugh asked Mrs. Lyddane about her graveyard tryst with Beall.

She said she didn't know it was a graveyard, but she did recall being with Beall in that "section" of Montgomery County.

Asked why she transferred her money to a "guardian" account, Mrs. Lyddane said:

"Arthur told me that Mrs. Beall said she was going to get all the money I had."

"Did you ever enter into an agreement with anybody to kill Mrs. Beall?"

"No."

Pugh showed Mrs. Lyddane the so-called "Googy note"—the note found on Carnell and demanding that the "deal" be consummated or the money returned.

"Did you write that?" she was asked.

"No, indeed; I didn't write that," Mrs. Lyddane said, and she smiled at the jurors.

Asked About Room.

"When did you start using Carnell's room with Arthur Beall?"

"In October, 1934."

"How many times did you go to the room?"

"Arthur made the arrangements."

She explained, however, that she made a practice of giving "Googy" small sums of money.

"You associated with Arthur Beall openly and notoriously, didn't you?"

"Well, I associated with him."

"When was the last time prior to your arrest you used Carnell's room with Beall?"

"In March." Later in her testimony Mrs. Lyddane changed that statement.

Says Husband Knew.

When Pugh recalled her testimony that Carnell demanded $1,000 "hush money" on March 1, 1935, Mrs. Lyddane said that, although she went to the Dixie Tavern thereafter, she never used Carnell's room with Beall.

"Did your husband know you were intimate with Arthur Beall?" she was asked.

"Yes," she said. "My husband was unemployed."

Rose K. Dawson told of a party Mrs. Lyddane and "Slom" attended on March 20. She said there was nothing unusual in Mrs. Lyddane's demeanor.

Mrs. Olive Waters, who said she had seen Mrs. Lyddane "practically every night," offered similar testimony.

Richard S. Hayes told of Mrs. Lyddane's visit to Annapolis in March to try and protect "Slom's" job in the Silver Spring liquor dispensary.

The Federal Diary

By Morgan Baker.

Need of more unified personnel procedure in the Government establishments is being illustrated at present by developments incident to the prospect of reduction of force in some of the emergency agencies.

BAKER.

A few of these agencies already have fulfilled at least a part of the missions assigned them and some of them have definitely passed the peak so far as their activities are concerned. NRA, of course, has practically vanished from the picture; AAA is being taken under the wing of Soil Conservation Service; HOLC faces a new phase of its work; and the many other units are facing changes of one sort or another to fit them into the setup needed for the immediate future.

According to frequent reports, PWA faces a 25 per cent reduction in force and Resettlement Administration, WPA and other agencies must shift employes from one type of work to another. The situation is very similar to one which existed three years ago, except at that time it was the regular civil service agencies of the Government that were faced by cuts, furloughs and pay slashes.

Recalling the chaotic conditions and loss of morale occasioned by the events of three years ago, the American Federation of Government Employes has insistently urged that some uniform procedure be adopted in cases where reductions must be made, and that primarily, in reductions, the least efficient employes, or those last employed, should be first to go.

In practice there has been insufficient improvement since the earlier occasion, the A. F. G. E. holds.

It is recognized that efforts are being made to care for useful employes, but dismissals in many cases are by no menas always made because employes are inefficient; various other considerations, such as politics, marital status, financial resources, etc., are taken into account.

Officers of the Wisconsin State Society have invited all Government employes from that State to attend the society's last dance of the season tonight at 8:30 at the Willard Hotel.

Fourth Personnel Director.

Federal Housing Administration, less than two years old, has its fourth personnel director, the latest being Charles M. Council, of Georgia, according to reports at FHA. Beginning with Bennett F. Schauffler, the FHA was launched in June, 1934. Schauffler was succeeded a few weeks later by Troy Hewitt, who is now FHA director for West Virginia. Mrs. Blanche Rees handled Hewitt's duties following his exit, but is said never to have obtained the title of "personnel director."

The position of personnel director at FHA is reported as being almost untenable due to friction between alleged Republican officials in the agency and Democratic members of Congress over apportionment of jobs. This report is borne out by monthly figures showing that FHA, rated as one of the more permanent of the New Deal agencies, has the largest personnel turnover of any office in Washington.

If F, P or C follows your name in this column call in person on the Federal Diary editor today only between 3:30 and 5 p. m. You will receive tickets to one of the following Loew's theaters: F, Loew's Fox (stage, Gertrude Niessen, The Elida Ballet and other acts; screen, Francis Lederer in "One Rainy Afternoon"); or to P, Loew's Palace (second week of Janet Gaynor and Robert Taylor in "Small Town Girl"); or to C, Loew's Columbia (Paul Cavanaugh in "Champagne Charlie").

Federal Bridge League.

Winners in the Federal Bridge League's duplicate pair games this week included: North and South, Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Bowker (C), Bureau of Standards, first; Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Zimmer (C), Internal Revenue, second.

East and West, Mrs. Paul E. Golden and R. H. Higgins (C), retired, Interior, first; H. C. Young and R. D. Jones, second.

Noncompetitive Tests.

Noncompetitive Civil Service examinations for emergency agency workers are urged by the Maryland-District of Columbia Federation of Labor, in convention this week at Hagerstown, Md.

A resolution adopted at the convention points out that "emergency agency employes have been performing efficient and satisfactory service for the past two to three years . . . and many of these employes who are both patronage and nonpatronage would have an opportunity to secure more permanent positions in various departments, due to their experience and qualifications provided they had a civil service status."

The resolution advocates that the noncompetitive examinations be given by the Civil Service Commission within 90 days.

NYA Scope.

Q. Can you give me some idea of the scope of the National Youth Administration?—Belle Johnston (P).

A. The National Youth Administration recently announced that 12,000 persons were serving on its 1,496 State and local advisory committees. This agency is credited with keeping 130,500 students in college and 260,000 in high school this year through its program of part-time jobs. Referring to President Roosevelt's recent suggestion that children be kept in school until they are 18, Dr. John W. Studebaker, Commissioner of Education, stated recently that the 1,000,000 high-school graduates this year were double the number in 1924. The work of the NYA is unquestionably doing a great deal to maintain and increase this number.

On the Air Today

After thoroughly enjoying the Burns and Allen air performance again this week (and I repeat this team is amazing in its high standards of performance) my attention was drawn to an announcement of a new honor that has come to Gracie.

She has just been chosen as "the brainiest actress in Hollywood" by psychology students at the University of Southern California. Fifty candidates were offered the class by Dr. John W. Todd, of the psychology staff. Todd remarked after the experiment that Gracie Allen won because the students were able to discern between native ability and a nit-wit characterization.

He also pointed out that the class had been warned of the pitfall into which a Harvard class fell last year when members selected a few gangsters and other undesirable types for a selection of "America's Ten Best Citizens," from a group of untitled photographs. He added that he personally was not a radio or movie fan, but that he had heard that Gracie was a successful homemaker, shrewd business woman and of an artistic nature, and that his students "probably were aware of such things" as respects the candidates in the test.

Others, who received the second to tenth ratings, were Mary Pickford, Norma Shearer, Ann Harding, Irene Dunne, Claudette Colbert, Grace Moore, Bette Davis, Ruth Chatterton and Jeanette MacDonald.

Gracie issued a statement: "I guess they thought I was smart on account of nobody could be as dumb as I sound. But I hope they don't tell that to all the girls."

Frank Crumit and Julia Sanderson have been signed for the summer interlude in the Phil Baker "American Tourist" series. The new show begins June 28. They will continue to have the support of Hal Kemp and orchestra and the Seven Gs.

Not long ago Fred Astaire proved he knew more about music than what was necessary for dancing successfully when he wrote a smash song hit. Now its Ginger Rogers' turn. Andre Kostelanetz and his dance orchestra provide the premiere performance of "I Can't Understand Why You Can't Understand Me," words and music by Miss Rogers, tonight at 9, WJSV. Kostelanetz reports that the tune has "a catchy melody and an unusual swing characteristic of the dancing film star's personality."

A full quota of aspirants for that $25 prize offered by a listener turned out for the "Curbstone Queries" airing yesterday noon in front of The Post Building. Time permitted some eight or ten to try the questions, but the best score was 2 correct. Three were necessary for claiming the prize. I'll bet you don't know who made the Liberty Bell, either.

How a Baby Grows

By Dr. Arnold Gesell, M. D.

Sitting Part Five

SITTING: A Halfway Station on the Road to Standing. Most babies are able to sit alone at 36 weeks, as the first four parts of this chapter on sitting have pictured. But all babies do not follow the same time schedule. Below, the typical 36-weeks-old youngster is shown sitting up to study his own image in the mirror before him. First, he looks around. Then, at himself in the mirror. Next, another sideward glance. In the fourth picture, he leans forward for a closer inspection, but (picture No. 5), it's still a mystery to him. TOMORROW: Creeping, Chapter One.

Simple Music Marks Party For Veterans

Roosevelts Hosts to Disabled Group at White House.

Mountain Players Put On Program; Gray Ladies Present.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

Meet that gal and promenade around;
Meet your honey, pat her on the head.
If she don't like biscuits—feed her on corn bread.

Music by a group of Arthurdale Homesteaders accompanied these words as the old square dances were called by Otis Pugh yesterday afternoon at the garden party on the White House grounds given by the President and Mrs. Roosevelt for the disabled veterans.

A platform had been erected for the entertainers who appeared in their overalls and ruffled gingham dresses, presenting mountain songs and dances and harmonica solos. There was also an exhibition of roping by Miss Mary Brosseit, of Chicago, who wore a cowgirl costume.

Mrs. Roosevelt, always a gracious hostess, made the function yesterday her own informal party. She received with the President under a large tree below the south portico of the White House and when the program was presented announced the numbers herself. The President's car was drawn up near the platform, and he sat there during the entertainment with Jack and Jill, his two Irish setters, one of whom voiced a bark or two of interrogation when the music began. When a reassuring pat and a word from the President convinced him it was all part of the party he settled down until the entertainers came to the car to bid good-by. Then he stood up, front paws on the car door, to share the role of host with the President.

First Lady Interested.

Mrs. Roosevelt stood beside the car while the guest performers gave their program and appeared to enjoy it as much as the veterans and others in the large company.

Gray Ladies, were there, nurses in white with their red-lined blue capes; White House aids in their white uniforms with gold braid; women members of the Red Cross Volunteer Service in their uniforms of blue and rose and green; members of the motor corps in their gray service uniforms, the veterans themselves, some in uniform and others in civilian clothes and other guests in garden party frocks.

Many of the veterans were brought in wheel chairs, presenting a solemn mute plea for peace which made itself heard despite the spirit of gayety which attended every arrangement for the party. The front line of guests were those unable to walk. Behind were the others, some seated and others standing or walking about the grounds. Three large tents where refreshments were served, and women from various States, carrying baskets of cigaretts for the veterans, gave a carnival air to the fete.

Six veterans of the Civil War were among the guests, including Mr. John M. Kline, commander of the Department of the Potomac, Col. John T. Ryan, Mr. E. D. Godfrey, aged 94, the oldest of the group, Mr. William F. Dorsey, Mr. Fred W. Mixer and Mr. Charles Fox. Mrs. K. P. McElroy, at whose home they meet monthly, accompanied them to the White House.

Gray Ladies Founder There.

Mrs. Henry R. Rea, of Pittsburgh, who founded the Gray Ladies, attended the garden party yesterday, the first at which she has been present since they were begun during the Wilson Administration. Gen. Pershing also was there and was greeted with affection by the veterans. One of them waited with eagerness to show him a picture he had taken of the general in France.

Mrs. Reeve Lewis, one of the original Grey Ladies, was among the guests, as were Mrs. Eldridge Jordan, Mrs. John J. Davis, wife of Senator Davis; Miss Marion Shouse, who will leave soon to join the Frontier Nursing Service in Kentucky; Miss Joyce Mallin, in the rose-colored uniform of a health aide; Miss Olivia Stokes, Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, wife of the Attorney General, wearing a flowered chiffon; Mrs. Edwin Watson, Mrs. Margaret H. Lower, field director of the Red Cross at Walter Reed Hospital, in a grey field uniform; Mme. van Haersma de With, wife of the Minister of the Netherlands, in a flowered chiffon; the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace. Miss Betsy Dern, Miss Mabel Boardman, of the Red Cross, in a blue figured gown, with a blue hat; the Solicitor General and Mrs. Stanley Reed, Mrs. Cary Grayson, Mrs. Harry Baxter and Mr. and Mrs. Eddie Peabody, who joined Mrs. Roosevelt beside the President's car during the latter part of the program and went to the White House with her afterward.

The First Lady held up the rope inclosing the space reserved for the performers while they stooped under and filed up to say good-by to the President. They were served refreshments at the White House and left for home by bus immediately after the party, while ambulance cars and motor cars took the veterans to the various hospitals and homes in which they live.

Sammy Syme, 3, Steals Show At McNary Children's Party

By Dudley Harmon.

Sammy Syme, jr., 3-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Syme, stole all the attention at the children's party given yesterday afternoon by Mrs. Charles McNary, wife of Senator McNary, by standing on his head and kicking his heels in the air to the tune of loud applause from his friends and worried looks from the nurses. Between handstands Sammy strode around the room carrying his mother's large pocketbook and looking important.

Twenty-six well-behaved children, dressed up in their party best, gathered at the Sulgrave Club yesterday for the party, given in celebration of Charlotte McNary's first birthday. Charlotte is the daughter of Senator and Mrs. McNary, and was by far the most nonchalant child there as she smilingly observed the goings-on from the arms of her nurse. Another child whose behavior was perfect was Joe La Follette, son of Senator and Mrs. Robert La Follette, who sat on the floor and stared at Ann Wigglesworth, daughter of Representative Wigglesworth.

Cosmopolitan Otto Wadsted, son of the Minister of Denmark and Mme. Wadsted, was chaperoned yesterday by his mother and his nurse. He has already traveled thousands of miles back and forth across the Atlantic, and next month will sail again for Denmark with his parents. John Vandenberg Knight, grandson of Senator Vandenberg, hid shyly behind the skirts of Barbara Caldwell, daughter of Mrs. Lewis G. Caldwell. Mme. Charles Lucet, wife of the Attache of the French Embassy, had a hard time keeping up with her young son, Jean Charles, who kept dashing off by himself to play in the shrubbery.

While the children munched crackers and ate ices, which were served in the form of animals, the grown-ups had cocktails and tea. Among the guests at the party were Masako and Sakiko Saito, daughters of the Ambassador of Japan and Mme. Saito, who were accompanied by their mother; Mme. Sze, wife of the Ambassador of China, with her daughter, Alice; Isabel Recinos, daughter of the Minister of Guatemala and Senora de Recinos, there with her mother; Josephine Black, daughter of Senator and Mrs. Hugo Black; Mrs. Eugene Carusi, who had with her her young daughter Cecil, dressed in blue with a white bonnet, and Josephine Culbertson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Culbertson.

Mr. Hull to Wed Miss Stephens At St. Alban's

The wedding of Miss Bernice Stephens, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. W. C. J. Stephens, of Texas, and Mr. Harris B. Hull, son of the former Commissioner General of Immigration and Mrs. Harry E. Hull, will take place this morning at 10:30 o'clock in the Little Sanctuary of Mount St. Alban's Church, with the Rev. James Henderson officiating.

The matron of honor and only attendant will be Mrs. Leonard Abbott, the former Miss Alice de Barre Price, of Washington, and the best man will be Mr. E. Bartley Osborn, of St. Paul, Minn.

Among the out-of-town guests here for the wedding are Mrs. LeRoy Kramer, of Chicago; Mrs. Richard Lamfort, of Chicago, and Mrs. Anna S. J. Stephens, of San Antonio, Tex.

The engagement was recently announced by the bride's uncle and aunt, Maj. and Mrs. Oscar B. Abbott, who make their home at the Kennedy-Warren Apartments.

Miss Eileen McCarty, of New York; Miss Marjorie McHugh, of Cedarhurst, Long Island, N. Y., and Mrs. Thomas Feeney, also of Cedarhurst, have returned to their homes after spending several days in Washington.

Mrs. Maurice Kafka is in charge of the arrangements for the Woodmont Country Club's ladies day, which will take place today at the clubhouse in Bethesda.

Phillipses Hosts At Tea for State Department Aids

The Undersecretary of State and Mrs. William Phillips entertained at their home on Thirtieth street yesterday afternoon for officials of the State Department.

Assisting at the tea table were Mrs. Wilbur J. Carr, wife of the Assistant Secretary of State; Mrs. James Clement Dunn, wife of the Special Assistant to the Secretary of State; Mrs. Charles E. Bohlen, wife of the assistant to the Undersecretary; Mrs. Wallace S. Murray, wife of the chief of the Division of Near Eastern Affairs; Mr. Richard Southgate, wife of the Chief of Protocol; Mrs. William Castle, jr., Mrs. Nathan Wyeth and Miss Beatrice Phillips.

Mrs. Craig Guest Of Mrs. Burgin

Latter Is Luncheon Hostess at Local Hotel.

Mrs. Malin Craig, wife of Maj. Gen. Craig, Chief of Staff of the Army, was among the luncheon guests of Mrs. Henry T. Burgin, wife of Col. Burgin, at the Shoreham yesterday.

Others in the company were Mrs. Archibald H. Sunderland, wife of Maj. Gen. Sunderland, chief of the Coast Artillery Corps; Mrs. Harry E. Knight, wife of Brig. Gen. Knight; Mrs. Albert S. Peake, wife of Lieut. Col. Peake; Mrs. John P. Smith, wife of Lieut. Col. Smith; Mrs. George R. Burgess, wife of Capt. Burgess; Mrs. Tracy Lay, Mrs. Henry Curtis Morris and her sister, Mrs. Jack Holt; Miss Jane Syme and her house guest, Miss Katherine Young, of New York.

Miss Harmon to Wed Frank Lyman Tomorrow

Miss Rachael Harmon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wiley Harmon, of Boone, N. C., will become the bride of Mr. Frank Trenholme Lyman, son of Mrs. David Hinckley Lyman, at an informal ceremony tomorrow at 2 p. m. at St. Margaret's Episcopal Church. The Rev. Herbert Smith will perform the ceremony.

The couple will be at home at 1807 California street after June 15.

Things That Make Women More Beautiful

Posed by Margaret Sullavan.

By Mignon.

The Mignon who writes this column does not sell, indorse or manufacture any cosmetics.

NOW THAT WOMEN have become as much outdoor people as men, it has been necessary for the manufacturers who are on their toes to make face powder to meet their requirements. A woman with a skin burned by the wind or tanned by the sun would look like a circus clown in too white a face powder.

One manufacturer of very fine powders has come to the fore with a new shade called "golden sun." It has that underlying pink shade which your skin has after it has been touched up by overexposure to either wind or sun. It will not break you to buy it and it is one of the most finely sifted powders on the market today.

This manufacturer perfumes his face powder very slightly and although I have sniffed practically every scent he has, I have yet to find one that I do not like.

If you are an outdoor person or expect to be this summer, I would advise you to trot right down and buy yourself a box of this "golden sun" shade which will keep the shine off of your face and still prevent that made-up look.

If you want to know where you can purchase any article mentioned in this column telephone The Washington Post, National 4200, Branch 323.

Fashion Fads Blamed on Man, Milady's Critic

Author Also Finds Modern Styles Are Result of Grandma's Times.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

IF THE MODERN woman feels, as did her feminine forebears, she had "as good be out of the world as out of fashion," is it her fault entirely? Or is it because her male contemporaries, even when they censure a lady's love of fine feathers, still have an eye for every fashionable femme who comes along?

Dr. C. Willett Cunnington, who knows more than most men about the whys and wherefores of women's styles, lays the burden of the blame on the latter, but also points out that all attitudes of Miss (or Mrs.) 1936 are but the unforeseen results of her grandmothers' thoughts, feelings and actions.

In his recent book, "Feminine Attitudes of the Nineteenth Century," he exhumes the bones of his grandmothers "in a spirit of admiring reverence" to show that the modern woman with all her ideas is—as were her ancestors—merely a by-product of her time.

No Fashion Is Accident.

He points out that no fashion has ever been an accident. "We can recognize now that the fashions of the nineteenth century were far from being mere accidents, but were, each in their way, singularly appropriate to the attitude of mind expected by the man of the world. By the woman's manner, appearance and mode of life, she expressed his ideal: Romantic or doll-like or dignified as the case might be."

Futhermore, in order to meet his exacting requirements, she altered the texture of her mind, and even the shape of her body. This state of affairs has continued down to the present, according to the author.

Hair was cropped schoolboy fashion, chests were flattened, slimming practiced to remove the last traces of feminine curves and masculine clothing and habits borrowed to obliterate the "Eternal Feminine."

Trends Follow Instincts.

When, on the other hand, times are prosperous, Dr. Cunnington has observed that man is attracted to the sentimental-maternal type, and that woman strives to indicate she is fitted for the role by having her dresses designed to emphasize her curves.

"Feminine Attitudes of the Nineteenth Century, by Dr. C. Willett Cunnington. (Macmillan).

MARY HAWORTH ... Today

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: On the occasion of my birthday, which was last month, the young man who has been showing me marked attention for the past 18 months gave me $5 as a birthday gift. My aunt says it was very poor taste on his part to offer me money as a gift and worse taste on my part to accept it. I admit I did not like the idea but was at a loss as to how to handle the situation. There was no possible question of the money being given because I needed it, but rather because he just did not know what to select for a gift.

• • • •

He is the soul of propriety and most respectful in his attitude toward me, and I am sure if he thought he had done something to invite criticism he would be most miserable. Help me think this through in a sensible adult way. By the way, both the young man and I are less than 25 years of age and we are not engaged to be married. Thank you in advance for the help I know will be forthcoming. I wonder if other girls would be willing to tell me through your column what they think about this, and how they would have handled the situation. Cordially yours, STUDENT.

Situation Requires Tact and Firmness.

DEAR STUDENT: Your aunt is correct in saying the young man offended against good taste in giving you money for a birthday gift and that you committed a similar offense in accepting his contribution. When he offered you the money you might have thanked him prettily for his generosity and thoughtfulness, but have told him that you loved surprises, and that you would prefer to have any gift of his choosing to any gift which you might choose for yourself. Then you could have given the money back to him and asked him to go buy you a surprise. Then if he still insisted he wouldn't know what to choose, you might have told him you have a passion for handbags (and that "Blank's store always has such lovely ones; I saw one there in white the other day I'd love to have.") or that you have been dying for years for a de luxe copy of "Alice in Wonderland," or that you are always surprised to death when anyone thinks to give you long, white gloves, and you wear size 6, or any similar instructive and lightly given comment.

• • • •

In order to wash your hands of the cash gift, I suggest you have the $5 bill in an envelop and, the next time you see him, tell him your aunt has scolded you for your bad manners in taking the money, and in order to help you put yourself right with the world, would he mind taking the money and going out and buying you something nice. Then sweetly but firmly insist on his taking back his $5. I am sure if you state the case tactfully, taking all the blame on yourself in a wistful, self-accusatory way he will rise to the occasion without sustaining any injury to his own pride and feelings. M. H.

Letters to Miss Haworth's column are now answered in the Sunday issue of The Washington Post as well as daily on the woman's page. Her column will be found each Sunday on the household page, Section IV.

Mothers Urged To Keep Fears From Children

Parents Should Never Tell Youngsters to Be Afraid of Things at Play.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

SALLY JONES was afraid of high places. Such a fear was, of course, inhibiting, for Sally necessarily was cut out of many of the ordinary activities of childhood. Climbing trees, looking out of windows, teetering on high fences, walking on roofs (forbidden, but delightful sport of childhood) were all out of the question for Sally. Her mother took the affliction philosophically. "She inherits it from me, so it can't be helped."

Tommy Brown suffered from every from of traveling nausea. Riding in trains, boats, even in automobiles, made him sick. He was a nuisance to take anywhere, because he was sure to land in an utterly limp, exhausted condition. But nothing could be done to cure Tommy, because he inherits it from me."

Such idiosyncracies are no more inherited than is a distaste for onions. They are the result of environment, pure and simple. Mrs. Jones and Mrs. Brown "conditioned" their children to being afraid of heights and car-sickness. It is very easy to "sell" a peculiarity of this kind to a child. He sees that it brings attention.

If the mother can once convince herself that by her own weakness she is handicapping her child, she will be very careful not to show her feelings when he is little.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

A Lesson on Hearing.

Considerable emphasis has been placed upon the prevention of infections which endanger hearing. Whenever a patient develops an inflammation in the middle ear (otitis media) this function is in the balance. There is a popular but erroneous belief that if an ear drum becomes perforated the sense of sound is lost. Rupture of the drum is a relatively minor incident. In fact, this membrane is often opened surgically to let out confined pus so that damage because of pressure will not ensue. Sometimes a slight incision will relieve pain promptly, the temperature will drop, and the patient go on to complete recovery, although the discharge may continue for a few days. If the flow of pus, however, does not cease, it means that inflammation has involved the throat or possibly the mastoid cells.

The chief objective is to relieve the inflammation within the ear before it has destroyed the integrity—continuity—of the tiny bones along which sound waves are conveyed.

The only structures within the middle ear are three small bones called the ossicles, which transmit sound vibrations from the drum membrane to the "oval window"—a doorway between the middle and the inner ear. This is covered by a membrane. There is another opening, also protected by a membrane, called the "round window." The inner ear is known as the labyrinth. All that the bones of the middle ear do is to convey sound vibrations to the labyrinth which translates them into the sense of hearing.

We can readily understand that in the presence of a throat infection—tonsilitis, etc.—a chronic discharge may be forced upward along the Eustachian tube into the middle ear. Instead of blaming the ear the remedy lies in taking out the tonsils and relieving the throat of all sources of infection. Not infrequently vaccines are helpful. In attacking irritation of the Eustachian tube it should be emptied by suction if necessary and kept open even though an instrument may be required for this purpose. Furthermore, we must make certain that pus from the sinuses does not flow over the mouth of this important structure.

No discussion of deafness would be complete without mention of otosclerosis. This is characterized by the formation of new bone on the wall of the middle ear. This sometimes becomes so hard and firm that it prevents the passage of sound waves to the inner ear. No one has yet explained just why this occurs or why it is found in one person and not in another. Heredity is supposed to be an important factor.

If the nerve of hearing is destroyed by disease the condition is hopeless. Some drugs, such as quinine and the salicylates, affect this nerve, causing ringing in the ears. The noises usually disappear as the drug is withdrawn, although permanent injury may follow the prlonged use of large doses. Furthermore, it is well known that exposure to noises, constant and repeated, tends to increase deafness. With the appearance of the first symptoms recovery may be aided by removing the patient from the vicinity of sound shocks. From a practical point of view every patient who is slightly deaf should protect himself against external noises, as the condition will certainly become worse if precautions are not observed.

For Love or Money

By ROB EDEN

Brenda Fayre, 22, is the sole support of her invalid sister, Lally. And Lally is secretly in love with Val Sargent, boyish but brilliant young writer, who has the apartment above theirs, where he is writing a novel. And because she is in love—though she thinks no one knows her secret—Lally has convinced herself that she will be able to walk again. Brenda has guessed her sister's secret and cannot bring herself to discourage Lally.

Brenda had kept secret from her sister her own misfortune in losing her job and now keeps secret the sort of work she has found to do—at $50 a week and 1 per cent commission on sales. For Brenda is a "siren" for Walter Jason, promoter and gold mining stock salesman. Wearing luxurious clothes, furnished by Jason, she entertains the men who are prospective buyers of Jason's stock. Brenda is convinced that Jason's business is crooked but regards her duty to Lally as her first consideration.

CHAPTER TWELVE.

EVERYTHING that Lally did took on a new meaning now for Brenda. Lally listening for footsteps upstairs, for the click of Val's typewriter. The fleeting secret smile that came over her face when she heard him walking or heard him working upstairs. The flush that spread over her cheeks when he came in. Brenda noticed it and knew that it must have come and gone for a long time, and that she should have seen it long ago.

The soft quietness of Lally as she bent over some mending for Val. The dinners she planned for him. "Get some spaghetti for tonight, dear. Val was saying that he wanted some," or, "I'm going to try a coconut custard pie. There's a recipe in the paper and Val was saying that his mother used to make coconut custard pies," or, "do you think if we rented a typewriter I could type his manuscript? Do you think I could do it well enough."

And when Brenda said she didn't think so, that it would be too hard for her, a beginner, "well, I'm going to learn to type anyway. There are lots of things I could do for him if I knew how to type."

The eagerness with which Lally waited for him, an eagerness which she tried to hide so elaborately, but which she couldn't now that Brenda knew. Lally's love was so apparent that the older girl wondered how she could have missed seeing it before. It was in everything her sister did or said. It bloomed around her like a flower, and she bloomed with it. Lally had never been lovelier, Brenda thought, with her Madonna-like face, so soft, so pretty, her great blue eyes shining with a new happiness.

And her content when Val was there. That spread around the room, about the flat, in the air. A happy, glorious content that brought tears to Brenda's eyes. "He's here," the content seemed to say. "He's here and I'm happy, and I love him and I shall walk!"

The Same.

Brenda said nothing, of course. She wouldn't have let Lally know that she had guessed her secret for anything. She tried to be the same as usual, to both Lally and Val.

But she found herself watching Val in much the same way she watched Lally to see—to see if there was any change in him, to see if he returned the love that Lally gave him.

She watched him when she knew it was useless and as she watched, she had to admit what she had known all along, that Val was fond of Lally, terribly fond of her—as a brother is fond of a sister. He treated her the same as he always had treated her, sometimes tenderly, sometimes teasing her, always considerately.

He didn't know that she loved him. Brenda was positive of that. He hadn't guessed. He was absolutely unconscious of her love. He came and went as he had since they had known him, and now it seemed to Brenda as if they had known him all their lives, not just two months, and that he fitted into their lives in a special groove that must have been there in the beginning for him.

There were times when Brenda thought she would go quite mad with the knowledge of Lally's love. Twice she went to Dr. Pierce's office, to tell him what she had found out, and ask him what she should do, only to run away when it was time to be admitted to his private quarters. In the end she couldn't bear to share Lally's secret with anyone.

Lally was waiting, and therefore she could wait, too. Lally was waiting patiently, although every night when she went to bed she never failed to say, "Another day gone, darling. Another day." Then she would smile. Brenda knew what she meant and why the smile was there. A day gone was a day nearer to the time when Dr. Koenig would arrive. Lally didn't need to put her thoughts into words.

Since that night on the porch, they had said little about Dr. Koenig. Brenda had tried to bring up the subject several times, but Lally didn't want to talk about it. She had asked her sister, too, to say nothing to Val about Dr. Koenig. That was to be a secret.

Brenda tried to be the same with Val, but she found herself self-conscious before him. He noticed it.

"Anything the matter?" he asked. "Have I done anything wrong?"

"Nothing, Val."

Evidently he talked to Lally about it, too, for she spoke to Brenda. "Val wonders if he's done anything wrong, dear, or if he's said anything you didn't like. He can't remember, but he says he might have. You're not angry with him?"

"No, no . . . I'm tired that's all. And, Lally, do you think he should come here so much? Don't you think we're nonopolizing him?" Perhaps if he didn't come so much, if Lally didn't see him so often—no, that wasn't the way to do it. That was wrong. The best thing to do was to let Val come as much as he wanted to, to let Lally have all the happiness she could get, to drink it in while she had it.

"But he wants to come! Brenda, you act as if we lure him in! He won't stay away!"

Brenda didn't say anything more about Val's visits to the flat, although she thought about them a good deal. She was groping around for some plan, but the plan wouldn't come. An emergency to face, and she was unable to face it. Lally's happiness at stake—that's what it was. Lally's life and happiness.

The Future.

Sometimes she was furiously angry at Val for not returning the love that Lally was showering on him, the love that he didn't see. Then again, she was thankful that he didn't see it, and she prayed and hoped that he would go on not knowing about it. Other times she was trying to see into the future, wild because she and all other humans were so helpless about what was going to be. She wanted to know what Lally was going to do, what Val was going to do in the future. She wanted to know so that she could decide what to do now.

It was the now, the present, that was so terrifying.

Sitting watching, looking, waiting, when she should be doing something, although she didn't know what that something was. Watching Lally fall deeper and deeper in love with Val, waiting for him to fall in love with Lally. Waiting to see what Dr. Koenig would say about Lally walking, trying not to think that he might say Lally would never be able to walk. Trying, oh God, trying not to think of that.

In the next surge of worry, trying to think what would happen if Dr. Koenig said it was entirely possible that Lally would walk, that he would make her walk. And if Lally did walk . . .

Hoping.

"I mustn't!" she would catch herself quickly. "Dr. Pierce said I wasn't to hope too much, that it was wrong to hope too much."

But she couldn't help hoping, though she did try not to. There was Lally walking, dancing, running! There was Lally flying up and downstairs, as she used to as a child, her feet always going too fast, stumbling because she was so eager. Lally had always been such a quick, eager child. And with Lally walking, there was still Val. What would happen, then? Would he love her? If Lally walked, the blow of Val's not loving her wouldn't be so hard to take——

"He must love her," Brenda said over and over to herself. She said it in the same passionate way Lally had said she must walk.

Dr. Koenig became an all-important person in both the girls' lives, especially Brenda's. She thought of him at times as a bearded ogre, talking in harsh broken English; she thought of him as a kindly, clean shaven man with a soft, low voice. She saw him as a twin to Dr. Pierce, both of them standing side by side, Dr. Koenig talking, and Dr. Pierce silent, but agreeing. When he was a bearded ogre she was afraid of him, but when he was clean shaven and kindly, she was satisfied. She was even satisfied when he was Dr. Pierce's twin, because then she could hope more.

Lally's life, her future depending on Dr. Koenig.

Her visions of Dr. Koenig had been of the bearded variety when she came into the office late one afternoon to pick up a check.

"Man came in to see you around noon time," Grace Ivar informed her when she entered the reception room.

"Man?" Brenda asked.

A Man.

"Yes, he seemed disappointed because you weren't here. Face fell a mile. Wouldn't leave his name, but he was a nice-looking chap. Tall, dark, gray tweed suit, no hat, slight mustache, and his hair was the kind that doesn't stay combed very long. I could go for him myself in a big way."

Tall, gray tweed suit, no hat, slight mustache, and his hair—Brenda shook her head.

"Can't imagine who it could b ," she said as she went into Ethel's office.

But when she was in the office waiting for Ethel to get through with a letter, she gave a start. Tall, dark, gray tweed suit—of course! It was Val. How strange not to have recognized Grace's description of him, which was so excellent. Hair that wouldn't stay combed very long. . . .

Val here—at the office. She hadn't recognized him at first because he wasn't in the world with the office. He was in that separate world—with Lally.

Suddenly she was very curious about his visit.

1 cup salt codfish
2 cups raw potatoes
2 tablespoons milk or cream
2 eggs
1 tablespoon butter or other fat
Pepper

Place the fish and potatoes together in enough boiling water to cover them, and let them boil until the potatoes are done. Drain thoroughly, mash the potatoes and fish and beat them well with a fork, adding white pepper, butter, milk or cream. The mass should be made light with vigorous beating. Then beat in the well-stirred yolks of two eggs, and lastly fold in the well-whipped whites.

Arrange the souffle in an oiled baking dish and bake in a moderate oven (375 degrees F.) about 20 minutes, until it is brown.

14 Detectives Shifted; Brass Gets New Job

Brown Denies Changes Portend Shake-up for Squad.

A Quiet Realignment of Personnel Going on Since May 15.

A majorshake-up in the organization of the Metropolitan Police detective bureau was foreshadowed last night in the transfer of 14 officers during a quiet realignment of personnel.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, and Inspector Bernard Thompson, chief of detectives, denied the prospect of further changes, but from other sources it was learned that reorganization of the entire detective force is contemplated.

Maj. Brown, who when first questioned denied knowledge of a shake-up, declared the changes had been made to "improve efficiency."

Brass is Transferred.

Among the transfers was that of Detective Sergt. Frank O. Brass, veteran member of the robbery squad, whose record of arrests is one of the finest in the department. Brass, along with Detective Sergt. J. W. Shimon, was assigned to the "pickup" squad, a branch of the detective bureau charged with the responsibility of keeping the city clear of known police characters.

Brass' place on the robbery squad will be filled by Detective Sergt. Robert J. Barrett, formerly head of the "pickup" squad. Shimon formerly was detailed to the Third Precinct.

Other transfers were Detective S. E. Talbot, from the Seventh Precinct to the "pickup" squad; Detective Sergt. William Wright, check squad to the Eleventh Precinct; Detective Sergt. D. G. Fletcher, Eleventh Precinct to the clothing squad; Detective Sergt. Henry M. Jett, Third Precinct to the automobile squad.

Detective Sergt. William Hartman, from ballistics squad to the Third Precinct; Detective Harry Britton, raised from detective to detective sergeant and transferred from the Seventh to the Third Precinct; Detective Sergt. O. W. Mansfield, Third Precinct to the check squad; Detective Nelson G. Thayer, Fifth Precinct to the Twelfth; Private E. E. Scott, transferred from the uniformed division to the Ninth Precinct in plain clothes.

Got Award for Valor.

Paul Berger, headquarters detectives' driver, transferred to the Fifth Precinct in uniform; C. O. Rouse, transferred from the uniformed division to replace Berger.

The changes have been taking place under cover since May 15, it was learned. Inspector Thompson said they had been made "for the good of the department." Asked for a detailed explanation, he replied:

"No comment."

Brass, described by Maj. Brown as a "good man anywhere," received the Metropolitan Police Department award for valor in 1934, last year the award was made, for Brass' single-handed capture of four armed men in a gun battle in an apartment house here.

As a member of the robbery squad he was assigned to bank robberies and major holdups. During his term on the squad all pending bank robbery cases were solved.

3 Marine Officers Cited to Advance

Three Washington marine officers are scheduled to be promoted as soon as vacancies occur in their next highest rank.

They are Lieut. Col. Jeter R. Horton, who will be elevated to the rank of colonel, and Majs. Clyde H. Metcalf and James F. Moriarity to lieutenant colonel.

Designated for promotion by the Marine selection board, their advancement has been approved by the President.

Club to Hear Hewes.

After the Surprise, Dean Cuts Birthday Cake

Anacostia Bus Stoned by Mob; Four Arrested

Driver's Threat to Put Negro Cadets Off Is Cited as Cause.

A crowded Capital Transit Co. bus on the Anacostia line was stoned by a crowd of colored men and boys at Thirteenth and D streets northeast last night.

Stones cracked against the side of the bus and one of them smashed the glass in the door, close to a passenger's head.

Police said the crowd sought to attack the driver, Edward G. Brice, 31, of 217 Fourteenth place northeast, whose altercation with a group of colored passengers resulted in a near riot at Tennessee avenue and D street northeast a few minutes earlier. Frantic calls from residents of the neighborhood for police reserves followed.

Brice said several members of the cadet corps at one of the colored high schools, returning from Griffith Stadium, attacked him when he threatened to "throw" them off for refusing to move to the rear of the bus during the outbound trip.

Brice was saved from possible injury by two police privates, E. J. Spence and J. G. Russell, and residents of the neighborhood, including Irving Steed, a District fireman, 326 Tennessee avenue; John Reece, his son-in-law, and R. C. Whipp, 328 Tennessee avenue, a detective for the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co.

The greater part of Spence's clothing was ripped off in the melee, and two girls and two men, all colored, who joined the cadets in the scuffling, were arrested on charges of disorderly conduct.

Parker to Direct Pension Office Here

G. R. Parker, of New York City, has been appointed regional director of the Social Securities Board for the area including the District, Maryland, North Carolina, Virginia and West Virginia, it was announced yesterday.

Headquarters will be in Washington and all the activities of the board will be functioning by June. District Four, as this area is known, is one of 12 established throughout the country. The work will comprise administration of public assistance, unemployment compensation and Federal old-age benefits.

Parker was regional director of NRA in the Eastern Atlantic States area extending from New York to South Carolina. He is a graduate of Union College, Schenectady, N. Y., was formerly connected with the General Electric Co. and held office in various trade bodies, including the American Exporters and Importers Association, the United States Chamber of Commerce and the Merchants Association of New York. He is the author of a number of technical papers and articles. As NRA director his office was in Washington.

Rep. Rankin to Speak.

Representatie John E. Rankin (Democrat), Mississippi, will speak tomorrow at 8 p. m. at 1414 Sixteenth street at a public meeting of all interested in public ownership of public utilities in the District. His subject will be "Public Ownership in America."

Serve Self

Customer, However, Fails to Pay for Mower.

Spring is in the air . . . The grass is growing . . . Maybe that is why a lawnmower was stolen yesterday from the Russell Balderson Co., 600 block Indiana avenue northwest.

Russell Balderson, president of the firm, told police the mower was on the sidewalk in front of the store when a man came along and wheeled it away.

When last seen the man, described as being about 50, wearing a brown shirt and hat, was boarding a street car at Seventh and C streets northwest. A police lookout was broadcast.

Dr. Cogan, 80; Students Stage Birthday Party

The popular notion that deans are gimlet-eyed disciplinarians who strike terror in the hearts of undergraduates was debunked yesterday at the Georgetown University School of Dentistry, where more than 100 students tendered a surprise birthday party to Dean Dr. William N. Cogan.

It was Dean Cogan's eightieth birthday and the cafeteria table was graced with a pink-iced birthday cake with four pink candles. The students assembled in the cafeteria as usual, bought their lunches and were seated around the tables when Dr. Cogan came down for lunch.

As he entered the cafeteria the four-piece band—drum, saxophone, guitar and xylophone—struck up "Happy Birthday to You" and the students applauded vigorously. Beaming with joy, Dr. Cogan eyed the cake for several seconds before sitting down.

Gifts presented to the dean were a box for shirt studs from the students, by Mario P. Nigra, president of the Students Dental Society; a smoking stand from the faculty, by Dr. Joseph I. Manley and Dr. John D. Hird, president and treasurer of the Alumni Association; linen handkerchiefs from the Student Dental Hygienists Society, by Marian Mallory, president, and a water decanter set from the personnel, by Rose Marie Davis, of the office staff.

Brief addresses were delivered by Lieut. Comdr. Henry Delaney and Joseph L. Watters, a senior. Commander Delaney recalled Dr. Cogan's Navy service when he was drafted to help establish the Navy Dental Corps.

A native of Washington, Dr. Cogan was one of the founders of the Georgetown dental school. He was named dean in 1901, serving continuously ever since, save for the period from 1912 to 1923 when he was with the Navy.

Woodridge Flower Contest Is Tonight

Members of the Woodridge Garden Club will stage their annual spring rose-peony show today in the Presbyterian Church hall, at Twenty-second street and Rhode Island avenue northeast, from 8 to 10 p. m.

Entries will be received up to 6:30 p. m. One of the most successful shows held in recent years is anticipated. A large number of newer and better varieties of blossoms will be exhibited. Neils J. Hansen will judge the roses, and Howard T. Watkins the peonies.

Dr. James A. Gamble is chairman of the committee in charge of arrangements. The public is invited and there will be no admission.

Baloney

Steals Bologna and Salami From Kosher Firm.

It followed a report made by the Capital Kosher Sausage and Provision Co., at 901 First street southeast, that someone had made away with 16 6-pound bolognas and 31 1-pound salami.

7,000 to Join Junior Safety Patrol Parade

Youthful Street Guardians to Gather Tomorrow; 50 to Receive Medals.

Seven thousand schoolboys, with a sprinkling of girls, from 16 States and the District of Columbia, will strut along Constitution avenue tomorrow in their annual safety patrol parade.

These are the youngsters who watch over other children as they try to cope with traffic on their way to and from school. With Sam Brown belts and badges as their symbol of authority, these grade school patrol members keep daily watch over the safety of less responsible boys and girls.

Tomorrow, when the music of the bands has stopped and the sturdy young marchers have halted in front of a reviewing stand near the south end of the White House Grounds, more than 50 of the paraders will receive from Commissioner George E. Allen medals for acts of heroism within the last year.

Will Get Medals.

The medals are awarded by the American Automobile Association as part of a safety campaign which originated 15 years ago in Chicago. Thriteen members of the District school safety patrol will receive the award. In almost every instance the honored boy saved a child from death at risk of losing his own life.

The parade, consisting of floats, bands, waving flags and banners, automobiles filled with distinguished guests, and the 7,000 bright-faced school children, will start at 10:15 a. m. from Sixth street and Constitution avenue. The line of march will proceed in the avenue to the tree-bordered Ellipse back of the White House.

Honor Roll.

Those from the District who will receive medals for specific acts of heroism are Jack Mettee, 11, of the Henry School; Marshall Emmert, 14, Weightman School; Stanford Himmelfarb and James Daras, of the Gales School; Dick Williams, 12, of Janney; Richard Stakes, of the West School; Richard Wiesendanger, 12, of Greenleaf; John S. Baker, of Wallach; Joe DeSimone, 15, of Hine Junior High; Joseph Smith, 12, of the John F. Cook School; Benjamin Jenkins, 12, of Slater, and Stanley Anderson, 11, of Langston.

Commissioner Allen, as grand marshal, will lead the parade. Others who will be at the head of the marchers are Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of the Metropolitan Police; William Van Duzer, director of vehicles and traffic for the District; Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools.

Mrs. Marion Wade Doyle, president of the Board of Education; Thomas P. Henry, president of the A. A. A.; Selden M. Ely, chairman of the District's school street safety committee; Charles M. Hayes, president of the Chicago Motor Club; L. Fletcher Schott, chairman of the Montgomery County school safety committee, and William T. Jobe, chairman of the Prince Georges County safety committee.

Cushman Will Speak.

Frank Cushman, chief of the industrial educaton serice, Office of Education, Department of the Interior, will speak at a meeting of the Women's Alliance today at 11 a. m. at All Souls Church, Sixteenth and Harvard streets. His subject will be "Some New Problems in the Field of Education."

Oxford Unit 'Spellbinds' 1,000 Here

Hollywood Touch Given Religious Meeting at Mayflower.

Informality Observed; Numerous Prominent Persons Attend.

Religion with a Hollywood touch last night drew 1,000 persons to the Mayflower Hotel as spellbinders of the famed Oxford Group sought to "change" Washington.

The comparatively new faith "changes" rather than "converts" the masses and from the "ohs," "ahs" and other superlatives overheard as the meeting dispersed, the transition now is under way here.

Although reminiscent of an old-fashioned backwoods camp meeting, there was no sawdust trail for the penitent to march down. Instead, there were plush rugs, but no one was asked to advance and be saved.

Actual "changing," leaders in the movement explained, takes place at a series of "house parties" which will follow in Washington homes and apartments, with spokesmen for the cult explaining their creed to small groups.

Many persons of social prominence attended. Nearly all of the women—and they predominated—wore evening gowns and there was a sprinkling of white ties and dinner jackets.

Long Line of Limousines.

A long line of limousines with liveried chauffeurs which waited outside gave the meeting another earmark of a formal social function.

But there was nothing stiff or formal about the meeting itself. It could hardly be referred to as a service.

A dozen or so men and women, apparently chosen for their wit, story-telling ability, inimitable foreign accents and air of sincerity, took turns explaining to the audience how they "changed."

In between the testimonials, which seemed to fascinate the listeners, several "talkies" were flashed on the screen behind the rostrum to aid in putting across the Oxford Group's message.

It was only in the movies that the crowd got a glimpse of Dr. Frank Nathan Daniel Buchman, founder of the religion, an American who reached the heights of his evangelistic renown on the Continent and now essays to change his native land.

Dr. Buchman hovered about the rostrum, but was not introduced.

In the movies, however, he proclaimed:

Denmark Pictured.

One of the reels, entitled "Bridge Builders," depicted how the faith swept Denmark a year or so ago. Farmers, industrial workers and the unemployed were shown after they became adherents to the cause.

Baroness de Watteville-Berckheim, of Paris, a gray-haired woman of 70, offered one of the most engaging or the testimonials.

She first became interested in the Oxford Group, she explained, through her husband.

"I knew my friends would think I'd gone mad," she confided. "In fact, they said so.

"But I thought it was a duty and a patriotic service.

"Now my husband, my daughter and the servants run the house together. We have become more than friends. We have become soldiers in the same army. We have a common mission.

"Instead of criticizing Hitler and the Communists we have learned to pray for them."

She told of a friend in Alsace, one of the provinces over which France and Germany have quarreled for centuries, who was changed by the Oxford Group and, though French, has married and is happy with a German.

Called Aid to Peace.

Nearly all of the speakers predicted the Oxford Group would help bring about world peace.

In that vein, the Rev. A. S. Loudon Hamilton, formerly of Christ Church, Oxford, said:

"If you want an answer for the world today, the best place to start is with yourself.

"The people of England are rather slow. Nevertheless, there is a spiritual awakening there which someone has aptly said is destined to change the future of England and the face of the world."

He described the doctrine of the faith as:

"Absolute honesty, purity, unselfishness and love."

Dr. J. E. W. Duys, a Socialist Party leader in Holland, a tall, gray-thatched individual who described himself as "full of wildcats" despite his 59 years, said the group taught him to "listen to God."

Rise in Market Spurs Digging For Gold Near Capital Gates

Mine in Montgomery County Operated by New Corporation.

Gambling that the price will not drop, men are working 24 hours a day at the old Maryland Mine near Great Falls to get out pay dirt.

Ever since about 1860, when gold was discovered in Montgomery County, 10 miles from Washington, it has been known that there were deposits of the precious metal in the hills. But until the gold market skyrocketed from $20 an ounce to its present price of $35, each attempt to wrest a fortune from the Maryland hills has been a failure.

Now, almost secretly, a crew of 15 men is sinking a new shaft, renewing old timbers in the often-abandoned mine and getting ready as fast as possible to bring the gold bearing ore to the surface and pound out its wealth to sell to the Government.

A corporation formed by five men is behind the gold race. Their names do not appear on the company signs and those identities are not revealed at the shabby mine office, directly on Conduit road at Potomac road.

Russell Turner, engineer in charge, and one of the five members of the company, which is called the Maryland Mining Corporation, said: "We're prospecting. We are just in the process of finding out if there is anything worth going after in the old mine."

However, he said the history of the mine's production was what decided the five to go ahead with that prospecting. During the day ore is constantly being brought to the surface and at night there are lights in the office and men digging along the openings from the new shaft.

"At best, gold mining is a hazardous financial venture," he said, "you never know what deposits you will run into or how much it will cost to get gold out of the ore. All you can do is gamble, but it's a better gamble when the gold market is high."

"I understand the former owners of this property spent $725,000 and finally let the thing go. We are doing it on a shoestring."

Last October the corporation took over the 200-acre property. The severe winter meant a complete shutdown of work at times. New machinery has been in operation several months and the old mine shaft is almost renewed to water depth, about 150 feet down.

The office is a crude wooden structure and the mill where the gold is sifted from the ore has some of its windowpanes missing. Only the timber on the shaft top and the trestle for the small cars carrying the ore look new. On the office table stands a delicate scale to measure gold and beside it are a number of sacks, familiar as the type in which Alaskan miners carried their nuggets in the days of the gold rush there.

Old-timers of the neighborhood are more familiar with the history of the mine than its operators. Douglass Guillot, now a janitor of the Glen Echo-Cabin John School, was once an operator of a nearby mine. He says the Maryland Mine was discovered by a soldier during the Civil War. The soldier picked up a nugget of gold on the property and hid it until after his Army service, when he returned and bought the property. His was the first attempt to unearth the treasure. Since that time there have been countless lessees or ownrs of of the mine.

"I know every inch of this ground," Guillot said, "and I know there is gold in that mine. But unless it is mined systematically and carefully, there won't be many profits. During the days when the mine was abandoned, people used to sneak up there and take out the ore. I know some people who were able to buy their own homes or farms with what they took from that mine.

"I went into the mining business about the time of the San Francisco fire. I had $150 saved up and leased land near the Maryland mine and went in for surface mining. I made money—a couple thousand dollars each year—but I gave it up after three years."

According to Guillot, the district surrounding the Maryland mine is peppered with abandoned shafts. His mine was known as the Ford property, while some of the others in the neighborhood include the Senator Sawyer mine, the Old Montgomery mine and the Watson mine.

He was once employed at the Maryland mine, where the shaft in the old days went down 210 feet, he said. Spurred on by the activity at the Maryland mine, owners of the other properties, Guillot said, are considering working their claims. In fact, several have approached him with the idea of a partnership, he revealed.

Circus Day!

1,200 Boys and Girls Will Stage Show Tomorrow.

It will be like old times, almost.

More than 1,200 boys and girls dressed as clowns and acrobats will march and tumble around Central High School stadium tomorrow afternoon in a circus parade just like the real circus used to march down the city's main thoroughfares.

The children's parade will precede the children's festival circus, sponsored by the Community Center.

In the outdoor arena of Central High School's stadium the circus will be held. Boys and girls with pet ponies and trained dogs and monkeys will bring their animals to amuse the crowd.

It will be like a regular old-time circus, only——

There'll be no steam calliope.

60% of D. C. Funds Come From Realty

Senate Unit Given Data on Revenue by Parker and Donovan.

Only 60 per cent of the District's tax revenue comes from real estate, data submitted to the Senate subcommittee on District appropriations and made available yesterday in supplemental printed hearings disclose.

The Senate sub-committee released copies of the hearings at which the District tax rate and the Washington Board of Trade's factual survey were discussed, following the walkout of the House conferees ten days ago.

Senator Thomas, chairman of the sub-committee, called attention to the figures submitted by Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, District auditor, showing the real estate tax for this year to be $18,317,035.64, whereas the total tax revenue amounted to $29,135,150.71.

Taxes on intangible property, tangible property, public utilities, banks, motor vehicles, penalties and interest on overdue taxes and special assessments, beer and liquor and miscellaneous items, including gas, account for the other two-fifths.

These figures were offered to refute charges that residents of Washington escape many of the taxes imposed upon persons living in the States.

L. H. Parker, Congressional tax consultant, also pointed out that the Federal Government gets all of the estate tax collected in Washington, whereas in the States a substantial portion of similar collections is returned to the States.

Questioning of Parker and William P. Richards, former tax assessor, confirmed the statements of District officials that realty assessments in the Capital are very close to 100 per cent of true value while assessments in the States fall as low as 50 or even 25 per cent of valuation.

Senator Thomas pointed out that police and fire protection, as well as water and sewer service, are furnished by the District government to the Federal offices and institutions.

"Unless the Federal Government pays something to support the city," he commented, "it would result in the citizens of the District being taxed to provide these facilities in the nature of a gratuity to the Federal Government."

After the sub-committee had questioned Parker regarding his survey, which shows Washington pays the third largest per capita tax of any city in the country, Senator Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, made a veiled slap at the House conferees by asking:

"Do you think that your research and your factual statements are comparable in their accuracy to the personal, spasmodic inquiries that might be made by any member of Congress as to assessed value of a specific property compared to the real value?"

Nats Barely Beat Indians, 7 to 4, as Whitehill Loses Control

Game Nearly Lost in 9th Inning

Long Drive Just Foul, Double Play Preserve Griffs' Victory.

By Shirley Povich.
Sports Editor of The Post.

Cleveland, Ohio, May 21.—Still in the throes of two-day hitting binge, the Nats today staggered and stumbled into their second straight victory over the Cleveland Indians, who all but shut the door in their faces in the ninth inning.

Making excellent progress against the pitching of Oral Hildebrand in the early innings, the Nats went into the ninth with a 7-to-1 lead and came out of it with an exceedingly shaky 7-to-4 triumph after the Indians missed getting the tying run on base by the breadth of the ball.

Until that point, Earl Whitehill, a comparative stranger in the Nats' midst, was reaching out for heroism with each rise and dip of his talented left arm. He had held the Indians to four meager hits, had permitted only 27 batters to face him in the first eight innings, and generally was doing very well for himself and the Nats in his first start since May 2.

Whitehill Loses Control.

With one out in the ninth, Gleeson made the fifth hit off Whitehill, a slashing double into leftfield. O'Dell immediately contributed a single that put Gleeson on third and then Buddy Myer contributed some contributory negligence and the Indians' threat became downright ominous.

When Earl Averill slammed an easy double play grounder at Myer, the Nats' second baseman permitted the ball to roll through his legs and Gleeson scored and Hale went to third. Cleveland scorers generously credited Averill with a hit.

Losing control, Whitehill walked Vosmik and filled the bases and then pitched a single to Trosky that bounded high off the rightfield fence and the Indians had three runs for the inning with men still on first and third, and only one out.

Foul Saves Nats.

With the right-handed Pytlak at bat, Manager Harris called the right-handed Jack Russell into the box, but Manager O'Neill countered by substituting the left-handed Billy Sullivan, who happens to be the league's leading hitter at this moment, and Harris' strategy was nullified.

On a line toward rightfield, Sullivan whanged Russell's first pitch and runners were speeding around the bases as the ball kicked up the dust on the rightfield foul line, but to the great disgust of the entire Cleveland team, Umpire Kolls called it a foul ball.

Sullivan lashed into Russell's next pitch, and all kinds of possibilities were evident as the ball sailed on a line toward leftfield, but Red Kress stuck his gloved paw out for the ball, caught it, threw it back to Kuhel to double up Trosky, and the game was over.

But Umpire George Moriarty did the Nats a distinct favor when he called Trosky out. From the press

Klein Goes Back to Phillies

Local Entries Get Ordinary Pairings for National Open

By Dave Herman.

According to the list released last night by the United States Golf Association, Wiffy Cox, of Kenwood; Bob Barnett, of Chevy Chase; Mel Shorey, of East Potomac, and Leo Walper, unattached professional, will play with mediocre golfers in the 72-hole classic opening June 4 at Baltusrol's famous course.

"But it isn't who you play with, but how you play," Kenwood's Cox said last night when informed that he had been paired with one John Toman, Chicago pro, at 1:15 on June 4 and at 9:45 on June 5.

Barnett's companion for the first two days will be a Bloomfield Hills, Mich., amateur, Bill Taylor. They're down for 10:45 and 2:20.

Shorey will play with a Dixie professional, Red Gann, of Brainerd Golf Club, Chattanooga, at 9:40 and 1:15, and Walper tees off at 11:50 and 8:20 with Louis Chiapetta, a Jackson, Mich., professional.

Two national titleholders—Sam Parks, of Pittsburgh, defending champion, who came out from nowhere to win at Oakmont, and bushy-haired Johnny Revolta, of Chicago, National P. G. A. titleholder—will form an interesting twosome.

Some other pairings follow:

Bob MacDonald, Chicago, and *Maurice McCarthy, Cleveland; Henry Picard, Hershey, and Herman Barron, New York; Jimmy Thomson, Shawnee-on-Delaware, Pa., and Craig Wood; Chick Chin, Tokyo, and Ray Raynor; *Chick Evans, Chicago, and Doyle Smith, Birmingham; MacDonald Smith, Glendale, Calif., and Jim Foster, South Hamilton, Mass.

*Morton McCarthy, Norfolk, Va., and Al Huske, Chicago; Ky Laffoon, Chicago, and Maurice Walsh, Scarsdale, N. Y.; Ray Mangrum, Dayton, and Al Espinosa, Akron; Tommy Armour, Chicago, and Charlie Lacey, New York; Ed Dudley, Philadelphia, and Olin Dutra, Los Angeles; Dick Metz, Chicago, and Henri Ciuci, Flushing, N. Upsets Feature French Clay Courts Play

By the Associated Press.

Paris, May 21.—Upsets continued to rule the play in the French hard courts tennis doubles championships today as three out of four American players were eliminated.

The biggest reversal occurred in the women's competition which saw the 1935 championship combination of left-handed Kay Stammers and Peggy Scriven, of England, knocked out in the second round by Simone Iribarne and Edith Belliard, of France, at 0—6, 6—2, 6—4.

It was a bad day all around for Miss Scriven, one of Great Britain's better known internationalists. Playing with her compatriot, C. R. D. Tuckey, she dropped a third round mixed doubles encounter to Frau Hilda Krahwinkel Sperling, of Denmark and Germany, and Antoine Gentien, of France, by scores of 6—2, 5—7, 6—3.

Wilmer Robertson, of the United States, playing with Robert Billaudot, of France, in the second round of the men's doubles, was the first American to go out. They were beaten, 6—3, 6—3, 6—2, by A. Martin-Legeay and Jean Lesueur, of France, 6—3, 6—3, 6—2.

Mrs. Dorothy Andrus, of New York, and Charles Hare, of England, were eliminated in a third-rounder by Marie-Louise Horn and Karl Lund, of Germany, 6—3, 8—10, 6—3, while Anne Page, of Philadelphia, and Willing Patterson, another American, bowed to the Polish champion, Jadwige Jedrzejowska, and Jacques Brugnon, of France, 6—1, 6—2.

The sole American survivor of the day's play was Florence le Boutillier, of New York, who with Raymond Rodel, of France, vanquished Greta Wettenstrom, of Sweden, and F. H. D. Wilde, of England, 8—6, 4—6, 6—4.

Klein Traded To Phillies By Cubs

Kowalik and $75,000 in Cash Also Included for Philadelphia.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 21.—Baseball's oft-rumored deal was completed today when the Chicago Cubs obtained Curt Davis, the major leagues' most sought-after pitcher, and Ethan Allen, an outfielder, from the Phillies for Chuck Klein, Fabian Kowalik and cash reported to total around $75,000.

The trade sends to the National League champions a pitcher rated one of the best in the majors. It also returns Klein to the Philadelphia ball park, where he gained his greatest reputation as a hitter.

Davis is expected to strengthen the Cubs in their bid to repeat their 1935 parade to the championship. Pitching weakness has handicapped them severely so far this season.

"We needed another starting pitcher, and now we have him," declared Manager Charlie Grimm. "He should make a real pennant contender out of our team."

Much Sought After.

Davis has been in the majors only two years, having been drafted from San Francisco, of the Pacific Coast League, in 1933, but in that time nearly every manager has at one time or another tried to arrange a deal for the Phillies' ace.

His first year up, the big 29-year-old Missourian won 19 games and lost 17 while appearing in 51 games, the most in the National League. Last year he rang up 16 victories and dropped 14 decisions. Each year the Phillies finished seventh. Davis compiled an earned-run average of 2.96 in 1934 and 3.66 last season.

Klein had by far his best years with the Phillies, whom he joined in 1928, coming up from Fort Wayne, of the Central League. He hit .360 his first year and never fell below .337, his 1931 mark, until he was traded to the Cubs after the 1933 season in a deal involving three other players and cash estimated at $65,000. He won the league batting championship in 1933 with a .368 average.

Olympic Horse Makes Perfect Jump Effort

Junction City, Kans., May 21 (AP). A perfect performance—spectacular leaps over 14 jumps ranging up to 5½ feet high—was turned in today by one of the 12 horses which will represent the United States in the Olympic games.

Babe Wartham, ridden by Capt. Milo H. Matteson, finished the grueling tests without a fault. The horses—all will be taken to Berlin—were put through their paces by members of the Army team.

Tigers Rally To Nose Out Yanks, 10-9

Four Runs in Last Two Innings Win Game; Goslin Hero.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, May 21.—Coming from behind with four runs in the last two innings, the Detroit Tigers turned back the New York Yankees for the second straight time today and moved into third place in the American League as they chalked up their sixth straight victory. The score was 10 to 9.

Goose Goslin, hero of the final game of the 1935 World Series, struck the deciding blow in the ninth inning after the Tigers had scored three runs in the eighth to tie the score. With one out, Gerald Walker singled. Charley Gehringer moved him up to third with his fourth hit of the game and Goslin followed with his single, also his fourth safe blow, to send Walker home with the winning run.

In contrast to yesterday's pitching duel, the game was loosely played with each team using four pitchers. Lefty Gomez started for the Yankees, but was driven from the mound in the third and was followed by Johnny Murphy, Bump Hadley and Ted Kleinhaus, who was charged with the defeat. Vic Sorrell opened for the Tigers, but lasted only until the fourth. Then came Joe Sullivan, Alvin Crowder and Chad Kimsey.

British Women's Golf Champion

Pamela Barton Takes British Links Crown

By the Associated Press.

Southport, England, May 21.—Pamela (Pam) Barton, who as a 12-year-old schoolgirl began haunting golf courses every idle moment, today finally crashed through and won the British women's golf championship, overwhelming Bridget Newell 7 and 5 in the 36-hole final.

In the championship round for the third consecutive year, the now 19-year-old plump, red-haired Pam was in no mood to be denied her goal. Defying sweeping winds that uprooted the hopes of eight American challengers in the preliminary rounds, Miss Barton gained a three-up advantage over the frail-built qualifying medalist this morning and put over the finishing punches in a gusty afternoon round.

Miss Newell's nerves finally collapsed on the third nine when Miss Barton increased her lead to 6 up at the end of 27 holes and the young barrister immediately became easy prey for her youthful rival.

Pam gained the upper hand on the last nine of the morning round when she negotiated the seventeenth and eighteenth holes with a conceded eagle 3 and a par 4 to go 3 up. She reached the 432-yard seventeenth green with two powerfully hit woods within 12 feet of the cup.

Miss Newell, after still being short of the green in 3, conceded the putt. She was partly stymied on the eighteenth.

The loser's game fell completely apart on the third nine and Pam was quick to seize the opportunity to increase her advantage. Miss Newell's driving was flawless, but she had difficulty with her second shots and putting.

Sharing interest with Miss Barton was the equally stocky and red-haired Patty Berg, of Minneapolis, the baby member of the American Curtis Cup team.

Her flaming locks sticking out under her hat, Patty determinedly followed the match to its bitter conclusion. She felt that at least one member of the dispirited American contingent should see the deciding tilt. British women noted her interest with approval.

Richmond Fails To Get Marberry From Nats as Pilot

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Richmond, Va., May 21.—Fred Marberry will remain in the major leagues as a pitcher, it appeared today following an unsuccessful attempt on the part of the Richmond Club to obtain him as manager. The Colts were left without a pilot by the sudden resignation of George Ferrell, outfielder and older brother of the Red Sox Ferrells.

However, in view of the agreement, Terry was consulted today by Eddie Mooers, owner of the Richmond franchise in the Piedmont. Following the talk with Terry, Mooers got in touch with Washington. Terry thought Marberry might like a managerial fling.

Mooers was told that Marberry is showing signs of returning to his old form on the mound and that Washington does not want to part with him.

Sarazen's 69 Takes Lead In Open

Picard's Par 70 Next in $1,750 Metropolitan Golf Tourney.

Runyan, Wood, Nelson Third; Macfarlane 1 Shot Back.

By the United Press.

New York, May 21.—Gene Sarazen, unattached professional, today shot a 69, 1 under par, to take the lead in the first round of the $1,750 Metropolitan Open golf tournament.

Sarazen, who had a 34 going out and a 35 coming in, was one of the last finishers and displaced the early leader and present champion, Henry Picard, of Hershey, Pa., who is favored to retain his title.

After Picard, who carded a par 70, came Craig Wood, New York; Paul Runyan, White Plains, N. Y.; and Byron Nelson, Ridgewood, N. J. with 71's to tie for third place in the first day's play.

Willie MacFarlane, Purchase, N. Y., was fourth with 72, and a seven-way tie for fifth place existed between Zit Turiano, Larchmont, N. Y.; Henry Ciuci, F shing; Ted Turner, Clementon, N. J.; Herman Barrons, White Plains; Frank Moore, Scarsdale, N. Y.; Jess Sweetser, Mount Vernon, N. Y., and Sal Di Buono Larchmont. All had 73's. Sweetser was the only amateur to score among the leaders.

The 74 group included Victor Ghezzi, Leal, N. J.; Bill McLhorn, Louisville, Ky.; Torchy Toda, Japanese pro and two amateurs, Rob A. Lester, Springfield, N. J., and Ray Billows, Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

Nats' Rookies Face Yale

By a Staff Correspondent.

En route to New Haven, May 21. Redeeming themselves with a pair of victories over Cleveland that brought their record in the West to four victories and four defeats, the Nats tonight were traveling toward Yale University, where they meet the collegians in an exhibition game tomorrow.

Reserving his regular pitchers from the fray, Manager Bucky Harris will send Harold Conn, his batting practice hurler, and Rookie Joe Bokina to the mound against Yale. "Handsome" Fitzgerald, batting-practice catcher, will share the backstopping duties inasmuch as Harris is refusing to risk injury to Walter Millies, lone remaining catcher with the team.

Cliff Bolton, No. 1 receiver, has been returned to Washington, there to recover from injuries received in the first game in the West.

Tigers Would Play.

Unlimited baseball teams are invited to call the Trinity Tigers at Adams 0529 between 6 and 7 p. m.

Western Nine Defeats Eastern, 5 to 3, for Third Straight

Errors Help Kushman in Triumph

Eastern High's faltering inter-high champions did a first-class brand of faltering yesterday at Eastern Stadium and an alert Western ball team took advantage of the situation to win its third straight interhigh series victory, 5 to 3.

Although the six-hit pitching of lean Leaton Kushman, Western southpaw, and the hitting of Bill Edmonston, leading batter of the series, contributed largely to the triumph, it was Eastern errors which added momentum to the Western cause.

The latter, incidentally, now stands with three series triumphs and no defeats. Yesterday's win clinched at least a first-place tie for the Georgetowners. Likewise, it definitely removed the championship from Eastern, the school which has won the baseball crown for two years in a row and nine of the past 11 years.

Jimmy Foxx's Homer Wins

St. Louis, May 21.—Wes Ferrell, who flunked against St. Louis yesterday, got a return assignment today and pitched the Boston Red Sox to a 6-to-2 victory in the series-closer, stopping the Browns' brief winning streak at three games.

Ferrell, who lasted less than two innings against Rogers Hornsby's batters in the first game, held the Browns to seven hits today. Jimmy Foxx put the Red Sox in front in the third inning by knocking his tenth home run of the season with two teammates aboard bases.

Golf Tourney Winner Is Congratulated

Pretty Dorothy London, of Woodholme Country Club, Baltimore, is felicitated by Baltimore and District golfing friends shortly after her victory in the Pictorial Review National Handicap tournament finals at Indian Spring yesterday. Congratulating her is Miss Katherine Hessler, of Elkridge, runner-up. Left to right—Marion Brown, Manor; Mrs. George Diffenbaugh, Indian Spring; Miss London; Mrs. N. J. Waldron, Beaver Dam, District first team captain; Miss Hessler, Mrs. H. J. Lernbach, Baltimore Country Club, and Mrs. J. Franklin Gross, Indian Spring.

This Morning . . .

Cleveland, May 21.

LEFT-JAB DEPARTMENT:

The name and fame of Mister Pete Reilly, whom Washington knows only as the manager of ex-Champion Freddie Miller, is considerable, it seems. Pete Reilly stories without number apparently are abroad in the land. An incurable prankster who seemingly counts that day lost when yon descending sun sets upon no victim of a Reilly joke, the silver-thatched Mick spends hours fomenting his belly-laughs.

POVICH.

Out here in Cleveland they are telling the story of the left jab, a tale that drifted from the coast where Reilly was vacationing around the movie lots.

There he encountered Jimmy Cagney, an old friend from the East, who was in training for a fight film that was going into production. Delighted to meet up with Reilly again, Cagney welcomed the presence of the veteran fight manager in the studio.

"Pete, you're just the man I want to see," Cagney exclaimed. "You gotta teach me a left jab for this fight picture I'm in. How's about it?"

"Sure thing," rejoined Reilly, "but I'm in the fight business. This is going to cost you 12 bucks."

"Twelve bucks for what?" asked Cagney. "I thought you were a friend of mine."

"That I am," replied Reilly, "but no 12 bucks, no left jab."

"Okay, then," said Cagney, mystified as he counted out the dough. "I guess it's cheap at the price."

At noon the next day, Cagney was at the studio. Five minutes later, Reilly appeared, weighted down with a curiously wrapped package. "Here ya are, here's ya lesson," said Reilly. Unwrapping his package, he handed Cagney a left-handed sliding trombone that he had bought downtown for exactly $12.

FUNNY-BUSINESS-DEPARTMENT:

Such bare-faced back-tracking at great expense as the Cubs pulled today would find the management booted out of office with no delay whatsoever if it occurred in any other line of business or finance but baseball. But baseball, seemingly, is a screwy business.

Today, for example, the Cubs announced that they gave Outfielder Chuck Klein back to the Phillies along with a pitcher and a sum of cash estimated at $75,000 in exchange for Pitcher Curt Davis. To anybody whose memory extends back three years, this is a very funny piece of business, indeed.

Because three years ago the Cubs paid the Phillies $65,000 in cash and gave 'em three players in addition in exchange for this same Chuck Klein.

All of which implies that the Cubs were badly gypped on the deal and now are handing Klein back to the Phillies and paying $65,000 for the privilege.

It all adds up to the fact that the Cubs have paid $140,000 and three players for a so-so pitcher named Davis and the Phillies have not only the $140,000 but also Klein, who was the medium of all the bargains.

Some day a hard-headed businessman is going to find his way into big league baseball and sell the suckers an option on the air we breathe, with the sunlight thrown in as an added inducement.

AVERILL-CAN-DO-NO-WRONG-DEPARTMENT:

If Earl Averill does not lead the American League hitters this season and top the American League outfielders to boot, then he is nothing less than a bum, as ball players go.

Out here in Cleveland, where Averill plays half of the season's games, he is the league's sacred cow, apparently. At least, he can do no wrong in the eyes of the Cleveland scorers, who conveniently look the other way when he makes a boot in the field and who manage to detect some sterling play by the defense whenever he makes a questionable hit.

Today, for example, Averill played a line drive to centerfield by Cecil Travis like a shoemaker who had risen hurriedly from his last. The ball hit the ground 20 feet in front of him and he permitted it to roll to deep centerfield while Travis circled the bases. Up from the Cleveland scoring department in the press box went the sign, "Home run for Travis."

Eventually came the ninth inning. Averill tapped a slow-bounding grounder to Buddy Myer. That worthy made a grammar-school muff of the ball and it rolled between his legs into leftfield—as obvious an error as was ever perpetrated. Yet the sign went up from the Cleveland scorer, "A hit for Averill."

One of these days a pitcher is going to strike Averill out and the Cleveland scorers will give him a hit on the grounds of malicious intent.

Miss Londons' 78 Wins Golf Tourney

Miss Dorothy London, pretty brunette golfer from Woodholme Country Club, Baltimore, won the Middle Atlantic title in the Pictorial Review handicap finals yesterday at Indian Spring Club, carding a low net of 78.

She fashioned her winning score from a gross of 90 and a handicap of 12, pacing a field of 60 golfers from Baltimore, Virginia and the District and nosing out another Monumental City entry, Miss Katherine Hessler, of Elkridge, for the coveted medal by one stroke. Miss Hessler had 91—12—79. They were the only golfers posting a low net better than 80.

Our Ship Captures Hagerstown Feature Race by Head

Rollick Wins Second by A Nose

J. Hernandez Rides 2 Winners in 1st, 7th; Is Suspended.

By Walter Haight,
A Staff Correspondent.

Hagerstown, Md., May 1.—A three-horse team thundered to the wire along the stone wall that borders the stretch here at this mountain race track and the crowd of 5,000 had to await the posting of the numbers by the judges. Our Ship, a sturdy, gelded son of Constitution, was the winner by a head margin, with Rollick given second money by a nose over Jobakheta.

This was Our Ship's second victory of the meeting and he paid a $10.50 mutuel while in charge of Jockey Ray Booker.

Jobakheta, the people's choice, played a prominent role in the running of the mile and a sixteenth feature but tired just enough to drop to third place in the stretch struggle. The favorite raced Hot Cake into submission after six furlongs. As the field approached the stretch, Rollick and Our Ship came around on the outside and joined Jobakheta, and from that point it was anybody's race.

Daily double paid a $21.80 mutuel.

White Sweets, owned by Mrs. G. Hutchens, won the first race, a rough and tumble affair for maiden juveniles. Justa Jimmie, which caused much of the crowding, barely escaped disqualification and his jockey, J. Hernandez, was suspended for the remainder of the meeting. Miss Adeline was third in the field of eight. Jockey Johnny Shanks was thrown off Timber Lady entering the stretch and escaped with slight injuries. The winner, half of an entry, paid a $8.30 mutuel.

Hernandez celebrated his suspension, which starts tomorrow, by riding the winer of the second race, Justa Flight, a $4.40 favorite, came with a rush in the last three furlongs to take the purse from Star Magic, 25-1 shot. Timber Phantom, a paddock tip, was third. Star Magic set most of the pace but could not resist the winner.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FORTUITY, $3.20, $2.20, $2.30; LITTLE AUDREY, $2.40, $2.60; UNFURL, $4.90.

FORTUITY displayed speed from the outset, drew into a good lead and was never menaced, winning with speed in reserve. LITTLE AUDREY, hard pushed from the start, made a bold bid to reach the lead, was not good enough, but continued determinedly to the close. UNFURL displayed good speed to join into contention and continued with good energy to the end. OPOCA closed some ground though never able to endanger the leaders. LITTLE MILLY went evenly throughout. AL CARLYS had early speed, dropped back after the first quarter mile, but came stoutly through the stretch when too late. He should improve over this performance. KENNER was outrun. OUR MAJOR tired.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won ridden out; place, driving. Went to post at 2:56. Off at 2:58½. Winner, J. P. Coopers ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—INFINITA, $47.60, $23.70, $8.10; BLIND BLARNEY, $19.10, $9.30; GLYNNA, $3.60.

INFINATA displayed speed from the start, withstood determined early opposition from GLYNNA, disposed of her and drew clear under hard urging. BLIND BLARNEY, kept within striking distance of the pace, closed determinedly on the outside through the stretch run. GLYNNA under pressure all the way, held on well to the close. LACHARITE dropped back soon after the start, moved up steadily thereafter and, despite hard riding, was unable to reach the leaders. OFFICE BOY came with good energy in the last quarter mile. MISS SUBWAY, well placed for the first half mile, was unable to keep up thereafter. KEOKEE, hard ridden all the way. BAY BUDDY was far back throughout.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FAKE, $11.30, $5.60, $4.30; JIM CRAWFORD, $7.10, $7.40; EDDIE HELCK, $9.60.

FAKE, restrained off the early pace, moved up stoutly nearing the stretch, overhauled JIM CRAWFORD when called upon and held sway to the end. JIM CRAWFORD displayed speed from the start, withstood determined early opposition from EDDIE HELCK and, despite holding on gamely, was unable to stave off the bid of the winner. EDDIE HELCK was prominently placed throughout. MADERIS, well up and under hard urging, held on willingly to the close. ZULU LAD, outpaced early, was unable to reach the leaders. COYA came stoutly through the stretch. EL CONTENTO was never a factor. NEED, unruly at the post, threw Allen and it was necessary to substitute J. Leyland. He was never a factor.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:09. Off at 4:12. Winner, T. F. Sawyerd's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—LIEUT. GREENOCK, $7.30, $4.60, $3.20; JACKPULL, $12.40, $6.00; SAVINGS, $4.60.

LIEUT. GREENOCK was shuffled back at the start, moved up fast the first quarter mile, was steadied along in back of the leaders nearing the stretch, moved up fast when called upon and, wearing down JACKPULL in the last end, JACKPULL, in the first flight all the way, gained a slight lead when reaching the stretch and fought it out willingly to the end. SAVINGS, outpaced early, swung to the outside in the stretch and closed with a rush. GOLDEN KEY, prominently placed all the way, weakened slightly in the closing drive. SONGSTONE, very fast, lacked speed to keep pace, but came again through the stretch. GOOD OMEN had speed for the first half mile. TRUJILLO was unable to reach the leaders. JACK SNIPE was far back all the way.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,100; claiming. The Valley Falls. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won ridden out; place, driving. Went to post at 4:38. Off at once. Two-dollar mutuels paid—UP AND UP, $9.90, $4.80, $4.90; BUSTER BOY, $9.80, $5.00; PLUCKY BABY, $4.20.

UP AND UP followed in close attedance of the pace, moved through on the inside when making his effort, took command midway of the far turn and drew out steadily. BUSTER BOY, restrained early, came willingly in the closing drive though unable to reach the leader. PLUCKY BABY, prominent throughout, was unable to meet the bids of the first two though holding on stoutly in the final drive. STONE MARTIN, well placed early, was unable to improve his position in the closing test. HOKUAO went to the front at once, displayed good speed in pacemaking, but faltered after reaching the far turn. The others were never serious factors. MY PURCHASE unseated his rider at the start.

SIXTH RACE—One and three-sixteenths miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:07. Off at once. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MINE BOY, $353.60, $84.60, $30.40; RHODESIA, $3.10, $2.80; FAIR COUNTESS, $5.50.

MINE BOY, going in greatly improved form, moved up stoutly in the last three furlongs, responded gamely to punishment through the stretch and was up in the closing stride. RHODESIA opened up a clear lead in the run to the first turn, was steadied alone in front under slight restraint, held on gamely in the closing test and just failed to last. FAIR COUNTESS closed gamely in the last quarter mile. ST. CHRISTOPHER made repeated bids to reach the leader and faltered in the closing drive. FOGARTY, outpaced early, made up some ground though never a factor. BEAU BON tired. WICKLIFFE weakened in the drive. AMERICAN PRINCE weakened after going seven furlongs.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:36. Off at 5:38. Winner, Mrs. L. E. Ames' gr. h. Two-dollar mutuels paid—GUARDIAN, $3.90, $3.40, $2.80; BLACK HAT, $21.50, $9.70; MATHIAS, $4.20.

GUARDIAN took command straightening out on the backstretch, met a determined bid from BLACK HAT when reaching the stretch and, vigorously ridden, drew out again in the closing sixteenth. BLACK HAT, under slight restraint early, moved up steadily on the outside, made a bold bid to reach the leader, but was unable to improve his position in the stretch drive. MATHIAS saved ground and closed gamely. WOULD DARE, outrun early, closed a good gap. ADAMITE, hustled to the front, faltered after going five furlongs. VESTED POWER stopped badly.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won ridden out; place, driving. Went to post at 6:10. Off at 6:10½. Winner, O. L. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ALLENFERN, $11.00, $4.60, $3.70; BULL MARKET, $3.20.

ALLENFERN was under steadying restraint while following the pace, went to front when called upon, drew out and held sway to the end. BULL MARKET, well placed all the way, continued with good energy to the close though unable to threaten the winner. SICKLE HOUR dropped back after rounding the far turn, came again and was going willingly through the stretch. YAP made up some ground. INSULATED was outrun. MISS GINBAR had good speed for the first five furlongs, tiring thereafter. RUTLAND went well up until leaving the backstretch.

Rutgers' Rally In 7th Beats Terps, 10-7

New Jersey Team Ends Nine-Game Streak of Old Liners' Nine.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New Brunswick, N. J., May 21.—The "lucky seventh" proved unlucky for the University of Maryland baseball team today as the Rutgers University nine subdued Old Liners, 10 to 7, ending a nine-game winning streak which had been accumulated by the Southern Conference champions.

Trailing, 5 to 2, going into the last half of the seventh, the Scarlet batsmen nicked Dale Patterson, Maryland hurler, for four hits which, coupled with two errors afield, accounted for 6 runs.

Rutgers added two more in the eighth when Bender reached first on Surgent's error and scored on Miller's triple to left field. Miller crossed the plate a moment later when Grossman singled through short.

Roy Lins, Rutgers stellar pitcher, allowed the Terps only seven hits, but six errors by his teammates enabled the Old Liners to stay in the running until the unlucky seventh. Mike Surgent, visiting second baseman, although guilty of errors on three occasions, tried to atone for his miscues with his hitting, leading the Terps hitting with a single and a home run over the centerfield embankment.

Out Fishin' . . . . .

By Jack Hawley.

"I got one!"—"how big is it?" This new fish song of exclamations and questions is being heard along the banks of the upper Potomac River between Key Bridge and its older competitor, Chain Bridge. It is fast becoming popular among the catfishing anglers. Never before has there been such keen competition in fishing for the big catfish.

Yesterday we saw an 8 and 10 pounder among many weighing from 3 to 5 pounds. The water was ideal for the cats but too dirty for rock fishing, which had been excellent earlier in the week. With a clearing of the water it is presumed that continued good rock fishing will be in vogue until the end of the spawning season. Large rock have been taken occasionally. Many of the 4 and 5 pounders were caught Tuesday by parties going out from Joe Fletcher's.

Small rockfish are very plentiful and are providing the youngsters with plenty of fishing experience. As soon as the spawning days are over, the fish will return to salt water in the lower Potomac and Chesapeake seeking the tender morsel—luscious soft shell crab, which is used extensively over the rock piles by anglers in season.

We say "in season" because a North Carolina soft crab used for bait over rock piles noted for good rock fishing in seas, but fished when soft shell crabs are no longer to be found (cold weather), is a waste of time because the rock fish is a highly educated fellow and knows when and where the soft crabs are supposed to be.

Rock is one of the few game fish found in our waters the year 'round and has a tricky method of obtaining his crab food, viz: When the crab has reached the soft shell stage and is in the vicinity of a rock pile he immediately finds security among its many crevices and holds on for dear life until he is able to travel under his own power in comparative safety. If the tide is running strong and the crab is too weak or has a poor grasp upon his temporary home, he is carried away by the tide to the wide open mouth of Mr. Rock who has been patiently awaiting his arrival.

Later on try the vicinity of Piney Point and engage one of the many capable boatmen there—we'll let you know when the rock fishing becomes "active."

The following letter received from L. S. Corbin, sportman's guide to deep sea and smooth inland fishing parties, is a good example of co-operation with Out Fishin', viz: Authentic information which can be passed on to our angling fraternity without fear of disappointing fishermen who plan to make one or more profitable trips to excellent fishing grounds:

"Quinby, Va., May 19. Dear sir—Maybe you've returned by now from your Oregon Inlet trip. Fishing is the best here it has been for years and the best is just coming—caught 117 trout last Thursday. Fishing three anglers Friday, landed 78 trout; Saturday a party of two caught 19 trout in three hours. Many of these were of the speckled variety weighing over seven pounds. I feel sure if you could come down and look over these fishing grounds you would have a trip worth writing about.

Only mileage prevents many an ardent angler from taking advantage of fishing that is not "make believe." My only open bookings now are—June 7, 25, 26, 27. However, I can accommodate any of your readers at any time providing I can receive sufficient notice of their plans to fish, by getting boats from other sources and selecting guides for them. In some cases I may attend to them personally if you so desire. I want to meet more Washington anglers because I think we have lots in common."

A. H. G. Mears, Wachapeague, Va., big trout, 40 to 100 per boat, channel bass and blues are due.

Dr. A. L. Utz, accompanied by H. C. Peacock, E. L. Stabler, R. Peacock and John Wineman, engaged a boat from Harry Woodburn and skippered by Preston, visited the Gap back of Hoopers Island yesterday and returned with 111 medium and large sized hardheads and one 35 pound turtle. Preston made the run to the Honga in 1 hour and 30 minutes, approximately 18 miles from Solomons Island.

Woodburn's new boat, named the Leroy, will be put into service this Sunday. She's a beauty—48 fett over all—12 foot beam—6-cylinder marine engine with reduction gear. The name Leroy was given because a boat formerly in commission by Mr. Woodburn's father was so named and was noted for its superior catches to other boat. Let's hope this new boat does as well! Skipper J. C. Lore and other caterers to sport fishing in the waters around Solomons have boats that are deserving of high-class patronage because of their modern conveniences and comfort while fishing.

Other boatmen who stick to the old "tub" would do well to look over a few of the boats at Solomons Island; the kind anglers don't mind paying the hire for, which is not excessive in comparison to older and often times unsafe craft. True, many boatmen have been through the worst winter in years and cannot afford the cost of constructing new boats, but they can plan now for next year because this is promising to be the best and most active fishing season in a decade.

Commercial netters are now loading up on hardheads, salt water trout and rockfish. This latter named fish is causing the netters plenty of grief with tons of small fingerlings filling the greater part of the nets and which must be returned to the water because of the law prohibiting the sale of said fish under 11 inches. The Department of Commerce enforces this law to the letter.

At the present time the Chesapeake and some of its tributaries are loaded with rockfish to the extent that has never before been witnessed by old-time fishermen and is bound to produce the best rock fishing this season. Solomons Island and Benedict at the moment are producing the best catches of croakers—a mixture of medium and large size. The writer tried the Honga River under very poor weather conditions and returned with 30 hardheads and one small trout.

However, reports from the Honga indicate that under favorable conditions large catches of both trout and large hardheads have taken place, the trout being unusually large. Brady McKay, of St. Jeromes Creek, and other boatmen operating from the vicinity of Point Lookout, have been returning daily from the Honga with large catches. A few more days of real hot weather should break up the "schooling" of hardheads, which are now blindly filling the trapnets of commercial fishermen.

During the early season these fish congregate in very large schools, which gradually become smaller as they break up and scatter to feeding grounds. When this has been done the season will be in "bloom" for those anglers who find much sport in catching this "croaking" fish. Its guttural "croak-croak" when boated and accompanied by a chorus of 50 or more of its species reposing in the ice box is music to the ears of "two-hook" fishermen—the swan song that provides one of the best and cheapest sea foods obtainable.

Don't forget the orphans, hospitals and charitable institutions if you have more fish than your party can reasonably consume. G. C. Ellis, Municipal Fish Market, Water street southwest, has offered through "Out Fishin'" to store, ice and care for all fish to be delivered to any charitable institution if left in his care. This kind offer will no doubt remove the questoin of preserving the fish which is most essential for fresh delivery to hungry mouths. Remember Ellis—he won't forget—neither will the sick and hungry.

Who's Afraid of the Big Black Bass?

The smile on the face of C. O. Gray, Hot Springs, Ark., angler, means that the big black bass he is holding aloft won the second annual fishing rodeo held in the Arkansas resort. The six-pound three ounce fish was named daddy of them all over a string contributed by representatives of 15 States.

Brooklyn Defeated By Chicago, 4 to 2

Brooklyn, May 21 (AP).—Roy Henshaw, midget southpaw, held the Brooklyn Dodgers to seven hits today as the Chicago Cubs squared the two-game series with a 4-to-0 victory.

Henshaw spread the Dodgers' hits over seven innings and never was in serious trouble, while the Cubs scored in four frames. Augie Galan, with two doubles and a single, and Gabby Hartnett, who drove out a home run and a ninth-inning single, accounted for all of the champions' runs.

Rudy Dusek Replaces Sonnenberg on Card

Rudy Dusek, the original tough guy of the wrestling game, has been substituted for Dynamite Gus Sonnenberg in the semifinal match of next Thursday's Joe Cox-Ernie Dusek feature at Griffith Stadium, it was announced yesterday. He will encounter Charlie Strack, Oklahoma veteran.

Another match of promising merit which was signed up yesterday was a Jack Donovan-Sailor Billings 30-minute number. It will be Donovan's first local appearance since he sustained a painful head injury in a match with Ivan Managoff last winter.

Nats Barely Beat Cleveland, 7 to 4

box, Trosky appeared to be safe by three feet.

It is high time, though, that mention was made of Johnny Stone and his slugging feats today. Stone collected three of the Nats' 13 hits, put 'em in the lead in the second inning with a well socked homer over the rightfield wall, contributed a devastating double against the same wall with two men on base in the seventh inning, and started a rally with a single in the ninth.

There was also a home run by Cecil Travis in the third inning, but that was a cheap affair which must be mentioned later.

Red Kress and Walter Millies put a pair of doubles together after Stone's homer in the second to give the Nats a 2-0 lead, but the Injuns got a run back in their half of the inning, when Vosmik drove in Averill, who had singled.

From that point, until the ninth, Whitehill pitched two-hit ball and held the Indians scoreless with the aid of a pair of double plays started by Red Kress and Joe Kuhel.

But the Nats continued to busy themselves against Hildebrand. They picked up two runs in the third after Stone walked with two out, when Travis slammed a line drive into centerfield and romped all the way home behind Stone, after Averill played the ball badly. It was scored as a homer for Travis inasmuch as Averill, apparently, is unable to make an error in Cleveland.

After performing the feat of failing to score on two singles and a double in the sixth, the Nats collected three more runs in the seventh when Lewis singled to left, Myer singled to left on the hit-and-run play, Stone bashed his double against the right-field wall and Kuhel crashed a single to the same sector.

Washington Gun Club To Stage Weekly Shoot

Over its traps near Benning, the Washington Gun Club will stage its regular weekly shoot Saturday. The club program will be varied in that, following the usual 50-target contest for a sterling silver spoon, a 25-target special handicap event will be put on, distances to be allotted according to scores made in the first 50. Following that, practice events will be staged, to suit wishes of participants—at doubles, handicap or regular 16-yard practice. Visitors are welcome, not only as spectators, but to try their luck at the flying discs.

$73,000,000 Gold Is Added To U.S. Holding

By the Associated Press.

The inflow of French gold again was evident in last night's weekly condition statement of Federal Reserve Banks which showed an addition of $73,000,000 during the week ended May 20.

This flight of gold, inaugurated a few weeks ago when the French franc developed a new weakness, brought total American stocks to $10,375,000,000. This was $1,613,000,000 greater than at the same time last year.

Member bank reserve balance showed a gain of $83,000,000 during the week to total $5,694,000,000, an amonut which the Reserve Board calculated to be $2,860,000,000 in excess of legal requirements. The condition statement said:

"The daily average volume of Federal Reserve Bank credit outstanding during the week ended May 20 as reported by the Federal Reserve banks was $2,481,000,000 an increase of $6,000,000, compared with the preceding week and of $5,000,000, compared with the corresponding week in 1935.

"On May 20 total Reserve Bank credit amounted to $2,470,000,000, an increase of $1,000,000 for the week. Increases of $83,000,000 in member bank reserve balances, $8,000,000 in money in circulation and $3,000,000 in nonmember deposits and other Federal Reserve accounts and a decrease of $3,000,000 in Treasury and National Bank currency were practically offset by an increase of $73,000,000 in monetary gold stock and a decrease of $23,000,000 in Treasury cash and deposits with Federal Reserve banks. Member bank reserve balances on May 20 were estimated to be approximately $2,860,000,000 in excess of legal requirements."

Shell to Resume Preferred Dividends

New York, May 21 (AP).—J. C. Van Eck, chairman of the executive committee of Shell Union Oil Corporation, told stockholders at the annual meeting today he intends to propose resumption of preferred stock dividends at the next directors' meeting.

"The financial position of Shell Union Oil Corporation at present is such that it would justify the resumption of dividends on the preferred stock," he said. Accumulations on the preferred to April 1 amount to approximately $25.81 a share.

Bank Clearings Maintain Gain Over Last Year

New York Decline Lowers Average Rise of 22 Leading Cities.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 21.—Bank clearings at outside centers displayed a higher tendency. The lowered total at New York City, however, held the aggregate in check and prevented a more substantial rise.

The total for the week ended Wednesday, May 20, as reported to Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., was $5.275,135,000, against $5.084.202,000 for the same week of last year, an increase of 3.8 per cent. This compared with a gain of 10.5 per cent in the previous week. Clearings of $3,251.027,000 at New York City were 4.3 per cent under the previous period, but were only 0.1 per cent below the 1935 comparative. At outside centers the aggregate of $2.024,108,000 was 10.7 per cent in excess of the figure for last year.

Increases over last year's figures appeared at all cities with the exception of Kansas City and New York. Gains were partcularly marked at Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Atlanta, New Orleans and Dallas.

Figures at leading cities, showing increases and decreases as compared with those of 1935, are printed herewith; also, daily bank clearings for April and May:

Stocks Drag Through Dull Session Without Definite Trend; Government Bonds Higher.

New York, May 21.—May wine was in the air, but more than that was required to invigorate the securities markets. Bonds were steady enough and Government issues, awaiting another billion of new financing next month, edged forward a little. Stock prices were mixed throughout, short distances were covered and the number of sales was the smallest in some time. Stock turnover was less than 700,000 shares. September wheat closed half a cent lower at 85⅛ cents a bushel.

Little difference in shade between the morning trading and that of the afternoon could be distinguished, although brokers and their customers usually feel slightly different about stocks after the lunch hour. Opening prices on the whole were a fraction better than those of the last trades yesterday, but aside from two or three groups no great desire to deal on either side developed. Most interest was taken in the public utility section and a number of its members stepped forward more than a point. Among the favored were Consolidated Edison, the electric power and lights, water works, North American, Standard Gas preferred and Public Service. Telephone stepped up more than 2 points.

Electric manufacturing stocks improved with the pick-up in the utilities, and some of the inspiration even reached the building stocks. At any rate Manville and Gypsum, still in the area of thin markets, rose 2 points or more each. Steels were steady, as were the rails. Mesta Machine continued actively on the momentum of its dividend. Radio and Zenith tried to attract attention by appearing frequently on the ticker tape, but no great progress was made.

Utilities Up, Motors Off.

What the utilities gained in activity the motor shares lost, for not enough trading interest could be found to complete the circuit. Western Union was higher in early deals. Oil shares had their ups and downs. Shell Union preferred rose 2 points on dividends. Standard was barely even. America climbed 2 points. In miscellaneous stocks, Hercules, Madison Square, American Sugar and Du Pont were strong. Weakness was shown in the stocks under inquiry: Atlas Tack, Auburn and Artloom. Owens Glass declined.

As trading wore on the volume of dealings decreased and prices were eroded here and there. Farm implements and mail orders held up fairly well, in spite of a setback in grains. Immobility of United States Steel acted as a discouragement to selling. Most common stocks moved in an exceptionally narrow range. Real thinness of markest was disclosed chiefly by preferred issues. Swings in those stocks on small bids and offers ran to as much as 4 points, in no case being influenced by any particular development in any industry or individual company.

Stagnation in the money and foreign exchange markets was even greater than that in stocks, for Continental centers were closed to observe religious holidays. The holiday also served to hold up publication of the weekly statement of the Bank of France, and partly for that reason the franc was steadier. Presumably another large loss of gold will be shown, with depressing effect on the exchange.

Business news was sketchy. Some dividends were increased, which helped the feeling toward individual stocks. Reports were had of growth in purchasing of railroad equipment and electrical supplies. In the opinion of many observers, the markets do not expect any sharp turns in business between now and the political elections, and the shadow of politics probably would prevent much reaction to them if they came.

Brokers' Loans.

The course of stocks for the week ended Wednesday suggests another fall in brokers' loans. The short spurt on Monday doubtless provided weary margin holders opportunity to dispose of some securities. Little has taken place recently to encourage the margin trader to borrow more money, especially when that means putting up more cash himself. Besides, his loans now cost him a little more than they did.

Here and There.

One house reports good demand from its customers of high-grade bonds, the first in a long time. That is regarded as a sign that investors soon will take fresh interest in stocks, and not that stock prices are too high . . . In ordering new locomotives the New Haven is doing what a road usually does after it falls into the hands of the courts. Bondholders wait while the property is rehabilitated, and in recent years the tendency has been to give the stockholders the benefit of the improvements. As the principal stockholder, the Pennsylvania doubtless secures its dividends through traffic management. . . . Lightening of the Cuban political skies has brought better markets for Cuban sugar company bonds. A good demand is reported for Manati 7½s. . . . Strength and activity in Electric Power & Light securities has been accompanied by the usual tips. . . . Apropos the inquiry into the market activities of Artloom, and especially in connection with brokerage house activities, it is interesting to note that a delayed (by two months) report on sales of insiders in the stock has just been published by SEC. It shows that the president, Joseph Wasserman, sold all his common stock, 22,780 shares, last February, and now holds 67 shares of preferred.

Invitation.

Stockholders of Container Corporation have received an unusual bid from the president to discuss the company's affairs at an informal meeting here in advance of the regular meeting of stockholders in Chicago. It is an excellent precedent. Companies sincerely interested in the participation of stockholders in management might even try a round table conference for stockholders after every regular meeting of directors. Those that for technical reasons hold annual meetings far from the centers where ownership of stock is concentrated could afford to extend a favor similar to Container's.

A Deficit's Progress.

Every month the Treasury publishes a detailed statement of the "financial status" of the appropriation made in the emergency relief act of 1935 whereby $4,000.000,000 was authorized for expenditure as the President directed. To the original $4,000,000,000 some $662,000,000 was added by the transfer of unexpended balances from other sources. The April 30 figures show that of the $4,662,000,000 checks had been issued for $2,834,031,000, and that nearly $1,000,000,000 more had been obligated, leaving $877,000,000 free. During April payments actually made were more than $300,000,000, which was about as much as all the ordinary expenditures of the Government for the month and nearly $100,000,000 more than the receipts of the Treasury from all revenue sources. On the basis of the figures for the month of April, the Treasury was spending on all accounts almost $100,000,000 more a week than it was taking in. Small wonder that many bank officers whose institutions hold the largest slices of the Government debt are publicly viewing with alarm the condition of their largest borrower.

Railways Spend $230,000,000 In Four Months

Biggest Outlay in Five Years Will Create 250,000 Jobs.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 21.—The biggest railroad spending program in five years was totaled up today for the first four months of 1936 by the publication Railway Age.

Almost twice the expenditures for the first third of 1935, or $230,000,000 in all, was poured out from the rails' collective pocketbook for new equipment and materials other than fuel, it reported.

New jobs to be created by the rebuilding program, statsticians of the magazine estimated at 250,000.

Most of the spending, they said, was needed to enable the roads to handle increased business. Orders for freight cars during the first three months of the year, they pointed out, totaled 13,500, compared to 462 in the same period of 1935.

Carloadings continue dto mount in the face of a reduction of 400,000 cars during the depression, and further freight improvement was anticipated.

Further evidence of betterment in freight movements was seen by the publication in orders for steam locomotives. Fifty-two were called for during the first three months of this year. Only one order went in during the first quarter of 1935.

Electric locomotive orders dropped, on the other hand, from 61 to 24, and passenger car orders from 76 to 69.

Added cheer for the steel mills came from booming rail orders. During the first third of 1936, 445,000 tons were ordered. There were 212,000 tons ordered in the same period last year.

The total expenditure for the four months ended April 30—$230,000,000—was the highest since 1931. Last year's figure was $128.000,000; 1933, $70,000,000; 1929, $475,000,000.

Van Sweringen Roads To Spend $13,500,000

Cleveland, Ohio, May 21 (AP).—Railway equipment orders totalling more than $13,500,000 were announced yesterday by two Van Sweringen railways. Manufacturing firms in Huntington, W. Va.; Butler and Johnstown, Pa.; Columbus, Ohio; Michigan City and East Chicago, Ind., and Richmond, Va., will participate.

The group of orders involves construction of 5,900 freight cars and is the largest to be placed by any railway system in some months. It will bring to above $50,000,000 the total of new equipment orders by the Van Sweringens' lines east of the Mississippi in the past four years.

Wheat Is Lower As Strain Eases

Chicago, May 21 (AP).—Some relaxing of wheat market strain in regard to likelihood of difficulty over settling of May contracts that involve millions of bushels became evident today. Moderate easing of trade tension developed as wheat dealings drew to an end with indications that the volume of unadjusted Chicago May wheat contracts had been materially reduced, and that a little larger deliveries here would be witnessed tomorrow.

Wheat closed skittish at ⅛-½ cents under yesterday's finish, May, 94¾-94⅞; July, 85¾-85⅞; September, 85⅛-85¼; corn, ¼-¾ down. May, 63¼; July, 60-60⅛; September, 5¾; oats showing ¼ decline, July, 25⅛, and rye ⅜-⅝ off, July, 54. In provisions, the outcome was unchanged to 15 cents higher.

Sinclair Sees Threat In Rodessa Oil Field

New York, May 21 (AP).—H. F. Sinclair, chairman of the executive committee of Consolidated Oil Corporation, said today at the annual meeting he believes the new Rodessa field in Louisiana "at present is a threat" to the petroleum industry.

Consolidated, he said, earned around $4,500,000 in the first four months of the year, or considerably in excess of the profits for the same period last year.

Nation Defrays Low TVA Rates, Willkie States

Utility Head Says That Power Industry is Threatened.

New York, May 21.—"The country is gradually beginning to realize that the low electric rates charged in the limited area in which the TVA is operating are made possible only by additional taxes paid by people in all parts of the country," Wendell L. Willkie, president of the Commonwealth & Southern Corporation, states in the annual report of the corporation to its stockholders, made public today. "Whenever a citizen of Tupelo, Miss., turns on the electric switch everybody in the United States helps pay his electric bill. This extraordinary situation becomes the more difficult to understand when it is realized that our operating companies in that area could lower rates at least 25 per cent below the TVA rates if they were given the same gifts from the Federal Treasury as are given to the Tennessee Valley Authority.

"The inevitable result, not alone in the Tennessee Valley Authority area, but in other areas where similar Federal Government projects are being constructed, will be the gradual disintegration of privately owned American electric power industry unless Congress definitely and specifically defines the limit of the Government's operation or unless the Supreme Court of the United States finds such power program unconstitutional.

Residential Rates.

"The national average residential rate per kilowatt hour was 6.82 cents in 1927, 5.58 cents in 1932 and 5.03 cents in 1935. The average rate paid by the residential customers served by the Commonwealth & Southern operating companies was 6.58 cents in 1927, 5.19 cents in 1932, 3.96 cents in 1935 and for the 12 months ended April 30, 1936, was 3.81 cents. In the year 1935, the average residential rate per kilowatt hour of the Commonwealth & Southern group was 21.3 per cent lower than the national average."

Consolidated gross earnings for 1935 showed an increase of 6.35 per cent over 1934, due principally to a substantial recovery in electric sales. The average annual use per residential customer in the system increased 14.21 per cent over 1934, the average annual use per customer now being 820 kilowatt hours, as compared with the national average of 673 kilowatt hours.

Prince Georges Tour of Homes To Open Today

Funds From Visit to Historic Houses to Restore Old St. Barnabas.

The drive for funds to restore historic St. Barnabas Church, at Leeland, Md., will begin today when hundreds of interested spectators will tour historic homes of Prince Georges County.

Ten houses, all of which have had active parts in the Nation's history, will be open to the tourists from 10 a. m. until 6 p. m. The exhibition will be continued tomorrow. All participants will be charged $1.

Places to be visited will be "The Dower House" (Mt. Airy) owned by Mrs. Eleanor Patterson; "Poplar Hill," owned by Mrs. Chandler Hale; "Compton Bassett," Dr. and Mrs. Reverdy Sasscer; "Fairview," Mr. and Mrs. W. Booth Bowie; "Mullikins" Delight," Mr. and Mrs. Chase Kirtley; "Bowieville," Mr. and Mrs. Harold Knapp; "Mount Lubentia," Mr. and Mrs. W. Beall Bowie; "Garden," Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Berry; "Beall's Pleasure," Mr. and Mrs. Brice Claggett; "Riverdale," A. W. Lafferty, and St. Barnabas Church.

Maj. Gen. Albert J. Bowley, commander of the Third Corps Area, will head the list of inspecting officers who today will review the University of Maryland's R. O. T. C. unit.

With Gen. Bowley will be Col. Allan Rutherford, on duty with the Maryland Reserve Units, and Maj. Paul E. Leiber, chief judge of competitions.

Awards will be made to individuals and organizations within the local military unit for outstanding achievements during the past school year. Annual inspection of activities also will take place.

Prince Georges County police are looking for two colored men who early yesterday held up and robbed J. E. Woods at his filling station on the outskirts of Upper Marlboro.

Woods, who had just opened shop for the day, was alone when the men walked in, and at the point of a pistol, demanded his money. They got approximately $15 from the cash register.

Special committeemen will be stationed at various sections of Prince Georges County to assist farmers in making out their work sheets under the new soil conservation program, it was announced yesterday by County Agent P. E. Clark.

The schedule is as follows:

At the courthouse at Upper Marlboro, May 25, 26 and 27, between the hours of 3 p. m. and 9 p. m. will be W. Beall Bowie, Paul F. Summers and Charles T. Nicholson.

At Baden High School, Baden, Md., on May 25, 26 and 27, between 3 p. m. and 9 p. m. will be W. R. C. Connick, Boykin E. Watson and William E. Duvall.

Harold Slingluff will be at the postoffice at Mitchellville, and Harry Townshend will be located at his home, near Mitchellville, between 3 p. m. and 9 p. m. on those same days.

At their homes in the Piscataway and Oxon Hill districts will be Harry Sweeney, G. S. Oursler and Walter M. Grimes. They will observe the same hours and days.

There will also be a meeting at the Mitchellville Consolidated School tonight at 8 o'clock for the purpose of explaining the program.

Honorary membership in the Boy Scouts of America was conferred last night upon H. C. Byrd, president of the University of Maryland.

The membership was given at the annual Prince Georges County court of awards, sponsored by the Rotary Club of College Park, and held at the university.

Byrd gave the main address. He spoke on "Sportsmanship." This was followed by the presentation of awards to 20 Scout members. They were:

Star awards, presented by Dr. T. B. Symons, director of the university extension service: Clarence Trott and William Dorn, of Troop 201, Hyattsville; William Bragg and John Williams, Troop 221, Riverdale; Charles Price, Lewis Tierney and William Tierney, Troop 223, Maryland Park; Norman Enzor, Samuel Moore, Walter Longanecker and Carey Singleton, of Troop 225, Berwyn.

Life awards, presented by Dr. H. J. Patterson: David Shaw, Troop 200, College Park; William Eisenhauer, Ted Vidal, Richard Warner, Troop 221, Riverdale, and John Worhen, Troop 225, Berwyn.

Nearly 1,500 students from Hyattsville, Brentwood, Edmonston and Capitol Heights grade schools will stage the last of a series of four music festivals tonight at 8 o'clock in Ritchie Coliseum at College Park.

With the conclusion of this program every graded and junior high school child in the county will have had an opportunity in one or the other of these festivals, which have been conducted under the direction of Mrs. Kathryn Reidy.

"Babes in Toyland," Hyattsville; "Hansel and Grettel," scenes from the second and third acts, Brentwood; "Health Land," Edmonston; "Spring Frolic," Capitol Heights.

The annual spring flower show of the Hyattsville Horticultural Society will be presented tonight in the horticultural building of the University of Maryland. College Park. The show also will be held tomorrow from 2 p. m. to 9 p. m.

Memorial tree-planting services in honor of the late Mayor Lloyd V. Moxley, who died a year ago, will be held under the auspices of the Brentwood Democratic Club next Sunday in Jackson Park.

Oliver Kuhn, managing editor of the Washington Evening Star, will be the principal speaker at the Press Club in Washington tonight, when the staffs of the three University of Maryland publications—the Diamondback, the Old Line and the Terrapin—assemble for their annual publications banquet, which will be modeled after the famous Gridiron Club banquet.

Officers of the Mount Rainier-Brentwood Parent-Teacher Association recently elected were Mrs. Philip Dorr, president; Mrs. Anne Behneman, vice president; Mrs. C. J. Dalzell, secretary, and Mrs. Worthy Daggs, treasurer.

Pupils of St. Mary's School, Upper Marlboro, will give an operetta tonight at Gibbons' Hall at 8:15 o'clock

Beavers Captured; Led Prison Break

McAlester, Okla., May 21 (AP).—Disgusted after seven and one-half days of fleeing from bloodhounds and officers, Claude Beavers, ringleader of last week's Oklahoma Penitentiary break, surrendered meekly today and tonight was in solitary confinement.

"That freedom wasn't worth what I went through," the burly convicted robber told his captors, surrendering without a move toward a gun battle which officers had expected.

"Here I am, I give up," Beavers shouted as "Old Boston," prison bloodhound, and five officers, led by Fred Daugherty, secretary to the warden, routed him from a clump of brush 35 miles southeast of here early today.

Beavers tossed away his two pistols and a rifle several hours before when he decided to surrender.

"I had been resting there when they got me," Beavers said.

Two of his convict companions, Julius Bohannon and A. C. McArthur, alone are at large of the 24 who broke from the prison May 13, killing C. D. Powell, brickyard foreman, wounding one guard and abducting two others.

Rail Trustee Sues Van Sweringen

Cleveland, May 21 (AP).—O. P. Van Sweringen and four other directors of the Alleghany Corporation were named defendants in a $3,200,000 suit filed in Federal Court here today by Guy A. Thompson, acting trustee of the Missouri Pacific Railroad.

Besides Van Sweringen, those named are Leonard P. Ayres, Alva Bradley, John Sherwin, jr., and George A. Tomlinson.

The suit seeks to invalidate a deal whereby the railroad contracted to purchase from Alleghany control of the Kansas City and St. Joseph, Mo., terminal properties, owned by Terminal Shares, which, the petition states, are of no value to the railroad.

Missouri Pacific paid $3,200,000 to Alleghany on a $20,000,000 purchase price and gave securities for the balance.

The deal was forced through by means of the interlocking directorate of the holding companies, the petition claims, asserting that Missouri Pacific never received anything for the purchase.

Curb Tone Steady In Dull Trading

New York, May 21 (AP).—The curb market maintained a fairly steady underlying tone today with principal aid to stability furnished by specialties and metals. Gains of minor fractions to around a point were registered by Aluminum Co. American Cyanamid B, American Gas & Electric, American Super Power, Bunker Hill & Sullivan, Great Atlantic & Pacific, Humble Oil, and Montgomery Ward A.

Issues unable to keep pace with the general trend and either holding unchanged or slipping back a shade, included Sunshine Mining, Sherwin Williams, Pennroad, Newmont and Electric Bond & Share. Transfers of 163.000 shares, compared with 169,000 the day before.

AAA Amendment Is Ruled Invalid

New York, May 21 (AP).—Judge Murray Hulbert, in United States District Court today, expressed the opinion that a provision in the addenda to the agricultural adjustment act which limits the recovery of processing taxes actually paid is unconstitutional.

His opinion was given in refusing to dismiss an action brought by cigar manufacturers to recover $29,436.96 in taxes they had paid. The plaintiffs said that their action was intended as a test case and if they were successful processors might recover $800,000,000.

Judge Hulbert condemned the provision of the law which said if any part of the tax is passed on and not absorbed by taxpayers no part of it is recoverable.

He said this "clearly deprives the taxpayer of property without due process of law."

East Arkansas Planters Discount Cotton Strike

Memphis, Tenn., May 21 (AP).—East Arkansas cotton planters, discounting strikers' claims of wholesale walkouts among field laborers, blamed the trouble today on "outside influences."

Most of the planters agreed the strike was not felt to any extent, despite the statement of H. L. Mitchell, secretary of the Southern Tenant Farmers Union, that 3,000 choppers laid down their hoes.

Sheriff Howard Curlin of Marion said strike organizers were attempting to foree labor from the farms through threats.

The strike leaders are demanding $1.50 for a ten-hour day. Workers heretofore received $1 a day.
